Seattle tourist link to go

By DON COLLINS
Colonist reporter

The strong Victoria-Seattle tourism link is due to be snipped Wednesday by a labor dispute that will idle the Princess Marguerite.

The strike is set for the early stages of a promising tourism season, although the union involved said Friday it was postponing action until after the current holiday weekend out of respect for the travellers.

"We were in a legal position to strike Thursday following a vote favoring a strike by 87 per cent," said an official of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild. "But obviously the ship's officers felt they didn't want to disrupt the public holiday weekend. They didn't want to take any action without first giving the public fair warning."

The guild covers the Marguerite's 17 officers, who include the ship's master, chief engineer and other top personnel.

The crew belong to two other unions, the Seafarers International Union and the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks.

Guild officials say they have been assured the other two unions will co-operate, although action on the part of the officers alone would be enough to idle the vessel.

Capt. Arnie Davis, western secretary of the guild, told the Colonist the strike has been called as a result of failure to negotiate a new contract.

The plan is to complete the weekend sailings, as well as those for the American July 4 holiday Tuesday. The Marguerite would then sail back to Victoria from Seattle on her usual early run Wednesday and tie up for the duration of the strike.

Union officials said the sides had failed to reach agreement on a number of points and indicated that the main barrier involved working conditions. They said the B.C. Steamship Co., the company established by the province to operate the Marguerite, had offered a wage increase within the anti-inflation guidelines.

Reached at Seattle, company general manager Arthur Elworthy was evasive when questioned by the Colonist about the dispute. He said only that guideline conditions had been met.

Oddly enough, the main adversaries were reportedly aboard the Marguerite together when she set sail at 4:30 p.m. for Seattle. An aide said Elworthy was travelling in the ship and would be away for the weekend. The union officials who informed him of the strike plan in the afternoon also sailed to Seattle and planned to return today. They said they were making the trip to discuss the situation with the officers on shift.

Blind-filled auto hits truck, 5 die

BOSSIER CITY, La. (UPI) — A station wagon returning blind students and adults from a picnic slammed into the back of an out-of-gas 18-wheel truck Friday, killing five persons and injuring another five, two seriously.

State police said the station wagon, owned by the Shreveport Association for the Blind and driven by a woman supervisor with normal vision, crashed into the back of the stalled truck on an eastbound lane of Interstate 20.

Officials said the blind adults and children were returning from a day's outing at Caney Lake in Webster Parish. They said the stalled truck was parked legally on the shoulder of the road and was not blocking highway traffic.

"There was no violation as far as the truck was concerned," a police spokesman said. "The station wagon is demolished."

Police withheld the names of both the dead and injured pending notification of relatives.

The injured persons were taken by ambulance to Confederate Memorial Hospital. A spokesman in the emergency room said the injured, all identified as legally blind, were admitted to the hospital.

Police said four of the five persons killed were adults and one was a teenager. A spokesman said an investigation was underway to determine how the 1976 Plymouth station wagon veered from its proper lane into the back of the truck.

Police said one of the truck's drivers was asleep beneath the truck when the station wagon rammed into the back, but he was unhurt. The other driver had gone for gas.

General election one worry

Parliament adjourns amid major concerns

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament shut down for the summer Friday amid continuing concern about the state of the country, the economy—and just when MPs will face a general election.

Throughout the parliamentary sitting that opened last October, federal politicians spent most of the time on problems of unemployment, inflation, Quebec independence, government secrecy and RCMP wrongdoing.

However, as MPs and Senators adjourned for a 100-day summer recess, the problems still remain and some of them are worse than they were when the queen read the Speech from the Throne opening the third session of the 30th Parliament Oct. 18.

And now, as then, they are left guessing about when Prime Minister Trudeau will call the general election that must be held within the next year.

Indications of popular discontent about the way things are going prompted Trudeau to postpone an election that had been expected in June or July. Speculation now centres on an October date.

When the parliamentary session began there were 838,000 jobless Canadians for a seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate of 8.2 per cent. The inflation rate was 8.3 per cent. The Canadian dollar was at its lowest international value in eight years and the federal spending deficit for the year was a projected record $8 billion.

The Parti Quebecois, committed to taking Quebec out of Confederation, had been governing the province for nearly a year. A royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing had been set up to investi-

Pierre forgets theme

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau had written so many Canada Day messages he couldn't remember which was which Friday when asked why one was pessimistic.

"You've got me there," he said at a news conference when asked why one of Trudeau's July 1 messages dwelled on "the negatives of national unity."

"I don't know what particular one you are referring to."

"The July 1 message to Canadians," Trudeau was pressed.

"I know, but let us get a list of them."

"Well, are you feeling pessimistic or optimistic about the national situation, because this is a very pessimistic message?" he was asked.

"Well, show it to me," asked Trudeau. "I can't believe it would be pessimistic."

He said that recently he has "written some messages for St. Jean-Baptiste Day . . . some for Canada Day . . . some for TV . . . some for radio . . . some for various publications who wanted a message from the prime

Crow cooks goose in power knockout

A crow hit B.C. Hydro power station wires in Crofton on Friday, knocking out power in the Crofton area and the Gulf Islands.

The power was off from about 4 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., a Hydro spokesman said.

The collision caused fuses in the main transformer to blow, which knocked out power in the circuit that serves both Crofton and the Gulf Islands.

What was merely a power outage for some, was death for the crow.

"The crow was fried," she said.

Truck blast injures 130

NEW YORK (UPI) — An ice cream truck exploded among lunchtime crowds in the Wall Street area Friday, injuring more than 130 persons in a terrifying hail of smashed glass and shrapnel-like steel.

Police said it would take two days of analysing the debris to determine the cause of the explosion. But officers said two possibilities were a bomb or a faulty refrigerator compressor in the back of the truck.

Manhattan hospitals reported treating 132 persons for injuries in the blast. At least 16 were listed in critical condition. There were no reports of deaths.

A spokesman at Beekman Downtown Hospital, two blocks from the scene, said 114 persons had been treated for injuries, with at least 15 persons listed in critical condition.

Five more were treated at St. Vincent's and seven at Bellevue.

A woman, identified as Pat Badone, 23, was admitted to the New York-Cornell Medical Centre burn unit, where she was reported in critical condition with burns over 34 percent of her body, a fractured skull and two broken legs.

The 23-year-old driver of the ice cream truck, Lee Balter, underwent an operation at Beekman to remove shattered metal bits, but officials said his wounds were not serious.

Mill hunts for bomb

MacMillan Bloedel's lumber mill at Chemainus was cordoned off about 6:30 p.m. Friday because of a bomb scare, but the bomb turned out to be a facsimile made with three sticks of wood taped to a wooden block with a dial.

Chemainus RCMP said the phoney bomb was discovered by a security guard, and that the incident was being investigated.

A bomb disposal specialist from Duncan handled the operation, police said, and no one was working in the mill when the "bomb" was discovered.

Governor calling in

Energy will be the main topic on the agenda when Idaho Governor John Evans and Premier Bennett meet in Victoria next week.

"The governor is particularly interested in exploring the possibility of his state purchasing energy from B.C.," the premier said.

It will be Evans' first visit to B.C. since taking office in January, 1977.

The Colonist will not publish Sunday, owing to staff observance of the Dominion Day holiday. Today's issue contains features including the* Islander *magazine which normally appear as part of the Sunday paper. Next regular editions will appear Tuesday.

1956 Suez plot papers vanish

Sevres deal just too embarrassing?

LONDON (Reuter) — Embarrassed British officials Friday refused to say whether they had mislaid or destroyed the text of a secret agreement between Britain, France and Israel to invade Egypt in 1956.

The charge was made in a report by the Guardian newspaper, which said the signed agreement, drawn up on October 24 of that year at a clandestine meeting in Sevres, near Paris, spelled out the moves made by the three countries in the wake of President Nasser's decision to nationalize the Suez Canal.

The Israelis invaded the Sinai desert on October 29. Britain and France the next day demanded a ceasefire, which was accepted by Israel but refused by Egypt. On October 31, British and French aircraft bombed Egyptian airfields. On November 5 British paratroops landed at Port Said and tried to capture the Suez Canal.

They had to withdraw under international pressure, but controversy has raged since then about the extent to which the three nations colluded in what has often been described as the last imperial adventure.

The late Selwyn Lloyd, British foreign secretary during the Suez crisis, says in a book being published here next week that secret talks were held by the three countries at Sevres.

He says that the document that was signed was only an agreed account of the conversations held in a villa there.

But those conversations noted in accurate detail what happened when hostilities began, the Guardian said today.

A British foreign office spokesman today refused to deny or confirm questions about the Guardian's report that the foreign office "has mislaid, and may have destroyed" the text of the Sevres protocol (agreement). The spokesman took cover behind a government ruling that secret policy documents cannot be disclosed until after an interval of 30 years.

Earlier this week, Sir Hugh Greene, former British Broadcasting Corporation director-general, disclosed he had been told by one of Britain's most senior officials: "Damned good care has been taken to see that the whole truth never does emerge."

Greene attributed this remark to the late Sir Norman Brook, then-secretary to the cabinet. He made the disclosure in a letter to the London Times. "I assumed at the time, and still assume, that he was referring to the destruction of important papers," Greene said.

Artist slashes his own faces

VENICE, Italy (UPI) — A police hunt for the slasher of paintings at Venice's prestigious Biennale Arts Festival ended Friday with the surrender of the artist himself, who said he defaced his works as a "creative act."

Viennese artist Arnulf Ranier, 49, rushed to Biennale headquarters a few hours after a night watchman discovered that several of his paintings had been vandalized.

The night watchman alerted police, who were curious as to how the paintings came to be defaced because the exhibit is closed to the public until Sunday.

Ranier explained that he himself had entered the gallery to slash the paintings—most depicting the human face.

The Austrian said that the "creative act" under his "trangressional" style was complete only with the destruction of the finished product.

Reduced prison terms unlikely to be law

British newspaper sharply critical of report views

By BRUCE LEVETT

LONDON (CP) — A report calling for a reduction in maximum prison sentences in Britain—coming at a time when the crime rate is rising—is given little chance of becoming law.

In the first general review for more than 100 years, a blue-ribbon advisory commission to the Home Office proposes a cut to seven years in the maximum penalty of life for kidnapping, hijacking, using firearms to resist arrest and rape.

Wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm and sexual intercourse with a girl under 13 years of age would carry five-year maximums instead of life.

In all cases, however, provision is made for judges to exceed the maximums in exceptional crimes.

Newspapers generally are sharply critical. The Daily Mail calls it "a charter for rapists." The Daily Express declares that the report is "making an ass of the law."

"This particular package of insanity will not become law yet because we have an election coming and Prime Minister James Callaghan knows a cracking loser when he sees one," the Express says.

More diplomatic but still critical is the Times which says the proposed system might produce confusion "and, what is worse, result in diminished respect for the law and the judiciary at a time when those institutions badly need public confidence."

On the rape aspect of the report, The Daily Mail says "there is no such thing as ordinary rape."

"Only law reformers who have lost touch with reality could assume that there is. This report is an insult to the women of Britain."

The commission report states "in our view, life imprisonment should be imposed only in very serious cases."

Jim Jardine, police federation chairman, says, "I have a 19-year-old daughter. If she was raped, I'd do my nut if the man responsible was only given seven years."

Conservative MP Jill Knight criticized "the do-gooders loose in society."

"For too long we have followed the policy of being softer and softer towards those who commit even the most outrageous crimes," she says.

"If society is now expected to accept that rape is less seriously regarded than it used to be, then I think society will revolt."

The report says "it is wrong that an offender should lose his liberty for a day longer than is absolutely necessary to satisfy the proper aims of penal policy."

With regard to exceptional sentences:

"This should be designed for the protection of the public rather than for any other purpose, such as deterrence, and this should be passed only in cases involving the threat of serious harm in the future."

The commission, headed by Baroness Serota, includes four judges, a barrister, head of a penal reform league, a chief constable and a former prison governor.

One lawyer, who asked not to be identified, says he could see one argument in favor of reduced maximum for rape cases.

Juries, he feels, might be less reluctant to convict if they knew that the most the accused might face would be seven years.

Others who believe it's time for reform point out that a pickpocket once faced the prospect of having both hands cut off. A burglar was sent to Australia for seven years.

At the beginning of the last century there were 200 offences for which a man could be hanged in Britain.

Brandings and floggings were common and transportation did not end until 1897.

Still, few would suggest that the minority Labor government facing a Conservative party with a hefty law-and-order plank in its platform would dare attempt to implement reductions.

April 14 are still governed by the Anti-Inflation Board guidelines.

Talks didn't really get under way until April, Davis said, and even then failed to make any real headway.

Although the ship is operated by the province through its company, the union charters are under federal jurisdiction. Don Crabbe, a federal conciliation officer, entered the picture earlier, but according to the union reported out of the case two weeks ago. Federal Labor Minister John Munro could have appointed a conciliation commissioner, but didn't.

That gave the guild the signal it needed for Thursday's strike vote. Federal labor law does not require strike notice, such as the 72-hour notice that must be posted by unions under provincial rule. As a result, the strike could have been called legally Thursday.

The Marguerite was reported to be carrying a large passenger load when she left Victoria Friday, although short of the 1,800-passenger capacity.

She was carrying considerably more than the 886 who left Victoria Thursday and indications were that weekend traffic would be heavy, a company spokesman said.

Earlier this month the vessel, which is now under the supervision of Tourism Minister Grace McCarthy's department, was reported to be doing a brisk business. At that time Mrs. McCarthy reported that it had carried 29,765 passengers during its first 17 days this season. This was a 37 per cent increase over the same period last year.

Meanwhile former prime minister John Diefenbaker was grumbling again that it's Dominion Day, not Canada Day.

"No such day exists in law," Diefenbaker said of Canada Day as he prepared to celebrate July 1 in Wakaw, Sask., where he was admitted to the bar in 1919. "It is a term that exists only in the minds of Grits."

Nevertheless, the celebration, into which the federal government is pouring $4.5 million, was expected to draw the usual big crowds.

More than 50,000 people are expected on Parliament Hill tonight for a three-hour television spectacular that will be seen across the country on national television.

The only people who definitely will not see it are the 50,000 or more who usually turn up on the Hill.

The stage is surrounded by trucks, tents, television cameras and so on, and only a few thousand spectators ever get to see the live show. Even they don't really get to hear it, because the sound is distorted by the echoes off surrounding buildings. They will see the fireworks later, however.

Meanwhile, Canada Day chairman Hamilton Southam of Ottawa will view some of the daytime festivities from a giant Air Canada balloon.

"Mr. Southam will take the flight, although there are dangers involved," an organizer said.

He wouldn't specify the dangers.

Spain grants region power

MADRID (Reuter) — The Spanish government has granted provisional autonomy to the Balearic Islands of Majorca, Minorca and Ibiza and two other regions.

The other areas are the central Castille-Leon region, but without the capital of Madrid, and the western Extremadura area on the Portuguese border.

Ten regions now have been granted a preliminary form of autonomy, which will be made permanent once a new constitution being debated in parliament is approved.

Pop festival overshadows other events

Quebec holds Canada Day

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada Day is being celebrated with a variety of activities at 120 communities in most regions of Quebec.

But events in Quebec City, ranging from dirigible flights to dances, are likely to be overshadowed by an $800,000 pop festival sponsored by the provincial government to mark the 370th anniversary of the city's founding.

The largest Canada Day party in the province is taking place for the 51st time at the tiny town of Bury, 190 kilometres east of here.

Last year close to 10,000 people flocked to the quiet farming community for pancake breakfasts, horse-pulling contests, old-time fiddle music, band concerts, square dancing and fireworks.

Many other communities are staging smaller activities, with parades, dancing, fireworks, entertainers or special masses.

In Montreal, the festivities began Friday with a pop concert on St. Helen's Island featuring singers Michel Pagliaro, Nanette Workman, Johnny Farago and Charity Brown.

Today a parade through downtown Montreal features 3,000 participants in Caribbean costume dancing to calypso rhythms. The parade is an annual summer event organized by the Alliance of Black Organizations, but this year they decided to stage the pageant to coincide with Canada Day.

A six-day bicycle race that has brought cyclists from across Canada to pedal 657 kilometres through St. Lawrence River valley communities ends today on St. Helen's Island.

Another show tonight on the island, site of the Man and His World fair, will feature singers Nicole Martin and Michel Louvain, the Canadian Brass, ballet stars Karen Kain and Frank Augustyn and the V'LaL'Bon Vent choral group.

Throughout the day there are performances by folkloric groups at Man and His World and presentations by two Alberta groups, the mime trio Arete and the Les Bles d'Or, a French-speaking dance troupe from St. Paul, Alta.

Some Quebec artists turned down offers to play for Canada Day concerts in the province, not wanting to be allied to what they regard as a political cause.

Canada Day falls a week after Quebec's Fete Nationale, formerly St. Jean Baptiste Day.

gate allegations of improper and illegal police methods for which the government had been under attack since the previous spring.

As the session adjourned to Oct. 10, there were 933,000 jobless Canadians for a seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate of 8.6 per cent. The inflation rate is nine per cent. The dollar has fallen even lower than it was in the fall and the projected deficit this year is $11.5 billion.

The Parti Quebecois remains perhaps the greatest thorn in the side of the Liberal government headed by Trudeau— a man who has staked his 10 years as leader on uniting the country.

Virtually all of the government pledges made in the Throne Speech were put before Parliament during the three months since MPs and Senators had their Easter recess. There were nine major promises. Four were approved by Parliament and the rest came too late for passage, were left for further study or never panned out at all.

Almost 40 bills were passed. Some—such as approval for a $10 billion northern gas pipeline—were the result of earlier pledges. Others—such as an increase in veterans' pensions—were the result of relentless opposition pressure. And some—such as a ban on a postal strike during election campaigns—came as Parliament anticipated the federal election that was postponed.

The four major throne-speech promises Parliament approved included a budget bill containing tax reductions and investment incentives; a finance bill to enhance exports and commercial projects abroad; a bill to phase out mandatory wage and price controls; and legislation setting out the right to trials in either official language.

The promises introduced but not passed include constitutional reform proposals which will be studied by a 30-member parliamentary committee during the summer. A two-stage program with an proposed 1981 deadline would guarantee basic civil rights, language equality, minority language education; replace the Senate with a House of the Federation and draw some new lines of power between the federal and provincial governments.

Justice Minister Ron Basford introduced promised legislation to appoint a federal ombudsman to deal with complaints about the bureaucracy. But it became a low legislative priority and was never dealt with by a Parliament busy with other justice-related issues.

The other issues included a bill to permit police to open private mail—a practice carried out illegally since the 1940s. MPs approved it in principle but never gave final endorsement. This is among the 30 bills which only got part way through the approval process and will be left over for the sitting, and perhaps a new session.

Rare disease hits trappers

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP) — Tularemia, a rare disease carried by rodents that causes skin ulcers and flu-like symptoms, has been diagnosed in the cases of seven trappers in this area 160 kilometres west of Ottawa.

Dr. Michael van Veldhoven, Renfrew County health officer, said the cases involved persons who skinned muskrats.

Veldhoven said the disease is unlikely to infect anyone not handling a sick animal.

'In' blacks are doomed

SALISBURY (AP) — Any majority-rule government in Rhodesia that is made up of locally-based black leaders will fall within three months to nationalist guerrilla forces, a senior aide to guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo said Friday.

"It would even hasten the takeover by Mr. Nkomo, because that black puppet regime would not have an army to save it," Josiah Chinamano said at a news conference. "Young whites will not shed their blood to protect a black regime."

Chimamano, who heads the domestic wing of Nkomo's Zambia-based Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU), returned to Rhodesia this week with a tough message from Nkomo attacking the British-U.S. proposal for an all-party conference as an attempt to "keep alive" local black leaders and "frustrate the complete victory of our struggle."

A biracial interim government put together in March by white Prime Minister Ian Smith and three moderate black leaders is facing a stepped-up war by black insurgents. The government is scheduled to hold universal suffrage elections before the end of the year in this country of 6.7 million blacks and 263,000 whites.

The death toll from an attack last week on a British mission school near the Mozambique border rose to 13 with the death of Mary Fisher in a Salisbury hospital. Miss Fisher, 28, was blinded and suffered head and facial injuries in the attack in which 12 other British men, women and children were killed.

The government said the raiders were members of Robert Mugabe's Mozambique-based Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU).

Mugabe denied the killers were his men and blamed government troops.

His denial was repeated Friday at the United Nations in New York by ZANU representative Tirivafi Kangai in a statement distributed to delegates.

It said the raiders were members of "the Rhodesian Selous Scouts, a special detachment of black troops in the Rhodesian army created to disredit our liberation movement."

The statement said, "There had been a very good working relationship between our forces and the missionaries" and the Rhodesian army "now is on a rampage of punishing by death all missionaries who have been giving food, shelter, clothing and medical facilities to our forces in Zimbabwe."

Rhodesia has accused some white missionaries of aiding the guerrillas and Friday ordered the expulsion of two more Roman Catholic priests.

Firemen lift 3 from roof

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Firemen plucked an amputee and two other persons from the roof of an 11-suite three-storey rooming house early Friday as flames advanced through the two top floors.

Amputee Toivo Gurvenen, in his 50s, and two unidentified people, were reported in good condition.

A fire department spokesman said the fire started in smouldering bedding, which had caught fire in another incident the previous night.

Damage was estimated at $40,000.

Crown of necessity

Carter rule 'weak'

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Elliott Gabellah, Rhodesia's black foreign minister, Friday launched a bitter attack on the United States and Britain, and said the Soviet Union and Cuba are refreshingly honest in their African policy compared with the two Western powers.

His criticism came in a long address preceding a news conference and was aimed chiefly at President Carter's administration, which he accused of cowardice and weakness.

"The Rhodesian dispute no longer has anything to do with achieving majority rule," said Gabellah, a key figure in the multi-racial transitional government. "In the eyes of the whole continent, the question is simply whether the United States has the guts to stand up for itself and its friends."

He called on the United States to press Britain into recognizing the March 3 majority rule agreement reached by Prime Minister Ian Smith and three black nationalist leaders.

Gabellah said the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance, which has sworn to fight the March 3 accord, is committed to seizing power by the gun.

"There is no need for me to comment on the policy of the Russians and Cubans, except to point out their refreshing honesty in comparison to official statements from London and Washington," he said.

During the news conference, he said: "The Russians and Cubans are indeed doing what they want to do. They are supplying arms to the Patriotic Front and honestly deliver them and honestly encourage them to use them—and they are using them."

Britain and the United States, by advocating an all-parties settlement conference which would include the Patriotic Front, were in reality seeking an agreement "acceptable only to the Front," he added.

Frisco council facing recall?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Members of a group born in the wake of the California property tax revolt are accusing San Francisco officials of imposing hardships on city taxpayers and are trying to oust the mayor and the 11 supervisors.

Among the complaints of Citizens for Total Recall, a three-week-old organization that claims 600 members, is that a medical facility is to be closed while the city considers putting artificial turf in Candlestick Park, the home of the Giants baseball team.

The recall group was formed following approval of Proposition 13, which forced drastic reductions in local property taxes.

Bob Barnes, chairman of the recall group, said Thursday that Mayor George Moscone and the supervisors failed to establish priorities in using $100 million allocated to the city by the legislature as a cushion against Proposition 13.

He said city leaders were afraid to take political risks by imposing higher taxes on large businesses receiving property tax reductions under the proposition.

Barnes said that within the next few days, his group will begin collecting the 35,000 signatures necessary to recall Moscone, a Democrat whose first term ends in 1979.

As for recall of the supervisors, he said signatures cannot be collected until July 8. Depending on the district, between 1,100 and 1,700 signatures are needed, he said.

CALLAGHAN DAMPENS WAGE EXPECTATIONS

LONDON (Reuter) — Prime Minister James Callaghan Friday told Britons they must expect only small pay increases in the next round of wage bargaining.

In a speech to a trade union conference, Callaghan hinted that the government is aiming to put a five-per-cent ceiling on increases, compared with about 14 per cent in the current year.

The new round of bargaining begins in August. "Don't view it with shocked disbelief and cries of anguish when you hear what the government has in mind," the prime minister said.

His speech set the stage for a confrontation with Britain's unions and an election battle over pay policy with the Conservative opposition.

IATA seeks flexibility to survive fare chaos

MONTREAL (UPI) — The International Air Transport Association, beset by what was described as its "biggest crisis," met Friday to reform itself in the face of major change in the airline industry.

Some 80 of the organization's 106-member airlines received a raft of proposals to overhaul the basic structure of the group whose main role has been to control world airfares for almost 50 years.

The proposals, said Claude Taylor, head of Air Canada and a special reform task group, were aimed at "accepting reality of what the industry is today but not over-reacting to short-term pressures."

A key measure would set up a two-level form of membership which would allow airlines the option of staying out of any price-fixing agreement. The members would retain a voice in such areas as security, airports and air traffic control and document standardization.

The recommendations drew almost immediate fire.

Royal Jordanian Airlines president Ali Ghandour said the proposed reform failed to provide for better negotiation of multilateral agreements among airlines and did nothing to curb competition from non-particiapting airlines who were undercutting IATA fares to the point of causing economic damage to IATA member airlines.

The reform measures, adopted unanimously by IATA's powerful 24-member executive committee would allow airlines to introduce "innovative" low-cost fares virtually at will.

Another proposal would eliminate as much as possible regulations in such areas as meals, bar service and entertainment aboard aircraft.

Wherever IATA met to set up rate structure hearings, representations would be allowed from outside groups.

IATA's price fixing has been buffeted recently by airlines ignoring its structures, such as Sir Freddie Laker's Skytrain, offering reduced-rate, no frill flights between Europe and North America.

Up until now IATA's rate recommendations have been binding on all its participating members.

UN passes blueprint for arms-race curbs

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The UN General Assembly, rushing to adjourn for the holiday weekend, Friday swiftly approved a watered-down blueprint aimed at preventing an out-of-control arms race from leading to man's "self-extinction."

James Leonard, one of U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young's top deputies, called the 31-page set of guidelines hammered out in the assembly's special session on disarmament a "diplomatic miracle."

Veteran U.S. diplomat W. Averell Harriman called the five-week session a "substantial success."

The full General Assembly convened Friday afternoon and quickly approved the guidelines by consensus, although Israel objected to one paragraph.

Rome chamber fails to select a president

ROME (UPI) — The Italian parliament failed in two more ballots Friday to elect a successor to disgraced President Giovanni Leone and politicians said the Christian Democrats and Communists would have to decide on a compromise candidate.

Politicians said the first ballot Thursday and the second and third rounds Friday by the 1,011 parliamentary electors were merely tactical exercises because a two-thirds majority was needed.

The top vote getter was 72-year-old Senator Guido Gonella of the ruling Christian Democratic Party, but support for him dropped from 392 votes in the first ballot to 352 in the third.

In second place was Communist Party Central Committee member Giorgio Amendola, 79, who held steady at 339 votes.

SATURDAY, JULY 1, 1978

What's special about today?

TODAY is Canada's birthday. Our federal government has spent $4.5 million dollars to remind us and to help us celebrate.

There is something about this organized trumpeting by government of Canada Day, with such things as full-page newspaper advertisements, which strikes a false note. If it is an occasion of real significance, do we need to be told?

It is always a hazardous exercise to generalize, but it does seem that Canadians are collectively reluctant to openly display their nationalism, any collective emotion for that matter except their passion for good hockey. But that does not mean we do not feel an intense love for this country and a commitment to it should the need arise. Perhaps it simply means that despite what our gabby politicians tell us, we do not feel our nation is truly threatened, not in the longer reach of history. Perhaps we are a bit smug. Too many fat cats.

In fact it seems to take a threat, real or imagined, to squeeze any audible nationalism from us. Some of the more elequent speechs from ordinary people right across Canada delivered to the Task Force on Canadian Unity hint at just how strong is our emotional bond to this land.

We are not Americans and don't feel comfortable using 76 trombones and a big parade, fireworks and political speeches to fan our patriotism. We are not British and do not have their confidence as a nation which comes with such a depth of history. Nor are we French. That is also another land. We are Canadians, a band of 23 million, not many as nations grow, stretched thinly across 4,000 miles of land. We are somewhat provincial, in the broader sense of that word. We have a lot more to learn about each other.

That is where our birthday money would be better spent. Helping finance student exchanges, particularly between Quebec and the rest of Canada, is one of the best investments we can make together in Canada. First, because they are for young people, whose minds have not yet hardened into the prejudices which so often come with years. Second, because visiting Quebec, or Newfoundland, or the Yukon, or British Columbia, demonstrates to Canadians from other places that we have much in common — and room for more.

It's coming — but when?

TWO INDEPENDENT STUDIES published almost simultaneously underline the dilemma in determining future oil availability. The studies reach substantially different conclusions on when the industrial world will have to turn to other sources of energy.

The first, conducted by the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, presents a fairly rosy picture for the immediate future. Assuming there are no political disruptions of oil delivery, it concludes that conservation efforts now under way will thwart any serious oil shortages before the end of this century.

"Our overall findings," the foundation says, "are that an oil shortage before the late 1980s is unlikely, that an oil shortage before the end of the century is a possibility but not a probability and that a gradual transition .... over the next 25 to 30 years from oil to non-oil sources to meet world energy requirements is more likely than an extended oil shortage of crisis proportions."

But from Paris comes the report of the International Energy Agency, which is representative of 19 countries, and it says the world could be suffering from a severe oil shortage and considerably higher petroleum prices just seven years from now. The detailed, country-by-country analysis says none of its members is doing all it could to prevent what it sees as a 4 to 12 million barrel-a-day shortage by 1985.

Take your choice. Either the industrial world will be in big trouble over oil within a handful of years, or not for another quarter-century.

On such conflicting testimony, oil consumers must write their energy policies. The one point both studies agree upon is that oil is not going to become more plentiful.

For real referendums on real issues

For a year now, spectators at Canada's second national sport have been asking the same question: When will the prime minister call an election?

Last fall it seemed a sure thing. The Liberals were well ahead in the polls. But it didn't happen because, it was rumored, their leader wasn't well and needed a rest.

In the spring it was on. Thumbs in belt, he made a fighting speech. But then the Liberals took a dive in the polls and it was off again.

Next the polls showed the Liberals ahead and a fall election was in the cards.

The country's political future is being decided not by the opinions of a majority of the citizens but by those of about 1,000 of them in a statistical sample.

No one doubts that the people questioned are picked in accordance with proven sampling techniques. Nor that the opinions expressed bear a close relationship, within certain statistical limits, to those of much greater numbers.

Nevertheless there is a big difference between the way people answer a hypothetical question ("If an election were held tomorrow, which party would you vote for?") and the way they will vote for a particular candidate after 60 days of campaigning on some day in the indefinite future.

The results can be interpreted in different ways.

If the governing party is ahead it may assume that its policies have majority support and that it need not change them.

If the opposing party draws level, or ahead, it may assume that its suggested policy changes appeal to a majority.

Yet the poll results may have nothing to do with policies, merely with the desire for a change of government.

How, in these circumstances, can public opinion influence policy? If the opposition is ahead it may assume that the minor changes it suggested gave it the lead, even though major changes might have made the lead overwhelming.

If the opposition wins the subsequent election it will then continue much the same policies as its predecessor from the mistaken idea that its minor changes turned the tide.

The polls, which occur frequently, and which give at best a tentative idea of public opinion, supply answers to hypothetical questions which governments can ignore at will. The election, which gives citizens one vote every few years, is fought mostly on personalities.

The major issues — inflation, government intervention, union abuses, bilingualism, immigration, capital punishment — are never voted upon.

In the age of the computer and its myriad terminals there is no reason whatever why this undemocratic condition cannot be corrected. The techniques are available; the technology is in place; the cost would be minimal.

There is no reason why hypothetical polls should not be replaced by real referendums on real issues. The results, reflecting true majority opinion, would then be binding upon Parliament.

Then the vote, cast not once every few years but whenever major issues arose, would have real meaning. The majority would have found its voice.

Why are politicians not seizing this opportunity to make the system more democratic? Is it because the present patronage system suits them and the bureaucracy too well as it is? Changing it might jeopardize their privileges.

That is why changes to the way Canadians govern themselves can come only from outside the system, from the oppressed majority whose voice is now unheard.

Some compromising in order

OTTAWA — The opposition's insistence that the government bring in its long-promised "Freedom of Information Act" is dead on. There is far too much secrecy in our system and the government has shown that it is unable to differentiate between "national security" and "Liberal security."

But Joe Clark, Jed Baldwin & Co. are wrong in demanding that the final decision as to what should be made public rest with the courts in each case.

Their proposal is a copy of the U.S. system which is cumbersome and expensive. It is also unsatisfactory from a security standpoint.

Judges are not trained in security matters. Consequently a well-meaning decision can be ill-advised in the sense that it compromises an important part of the security system.

The government's proposal that it keep the final authority itself is equally unsatisfactory.

It would appoint a commissioner to rule on cases but where there was disagreement, the government's view would prevail. All the commissioners could do would be to "embarrass" the offending minister. The requested information would remain secret.

A sensible compromise would be to make the commissioner the ultimate authority, answerable only to Parliament.

His decisions would be final and not subject to appeal, with one exception.

If the government felt that release of a specific document posed a serious threat to national security it would have the right to appeal to the federal court as arbiter of the public interest.

A new Conflict of Interest Bill was introduced in the Commons the other day to regulate MPs and financial relations with government.

It ignored one insidious area of potential conflict, however: the interest that some MPs have in the timing of elections.

Right now there are a number of MPs who were elected for the first time in October, 1972, hoping and praying that the general election will be postponed until after November 1 — the date they qualify for life-time pensions.

Until now senators have been immune to this sort of thing. If the Red Chamber is transformed into a House of the Federation, however, the scene will change.

Appointments to the august (?) body by both federal and provincial governments will only be valid from one election until the next. So tenure will depend entirely on the timing and outcome of elections, both federal and provincial.

It's bad enough to have MPs with a vested interest in election dates without creating the same type of conflict of interest for members of the House of the Federation.

It's a sure sign that gambling has become big business in Canada when the federal and provincial governments start squabbling over who owns it.

The feds want to continue Loto-Canada and the provinces want them out of the business.

The problem is that everybody likes to be able to hand out money to "worthy causes" without the pain of having to tax it.

Then there is a "patronage" aspect both in the operation of a lottery and in determining who gets the funds.

Consequently, eyebrows were raised when the federal government let a contract for computer services without calling tenders.

Speaking for the feds, Iona Campagnolo insisted that the speed and secrecy of the unusual practice were not part of a bid to get the jump on the provincial competition.

But it looks bad!

I wonder if the prime minister ever reflects on the growing similarity between his government and that of the late Maurice Duplessis in Quebec which he damned so vigorously?

Waiting on the long road to peace in the Mid-East

WASHINGTON — There was thoughtful, controlled, official silence in Washington after the news came in that Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin once again had refused to let go his hold on all the lands of the West Bank and Gaza.

The news was disappointing, of course. But it has been expected. And careful plans had been made for handling it.

Part of those plans was to avoid official comment in Washington. Another part was to co-ordinate Washington reaction with President Anwar Sadat of Egypt. He too took up a quiet and relaxed posture. Yes, he was disappointed. But, no, he did not think that all hope for a Middle East peace had been lost. U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will be flying to the Middle East soon — to talk things over.

The key to this restrained behavior in both Washington and Cairo was the vote in the Knesset on the Begin position. Mr. Begin had carried the majority for his hard-line stand both in the cabinet and in the Knesset. But it was not a unanimous decision. The opposition was open, strongly stated and impressive. This was Mr. Begin's stand, but not necessarily Israel's last word on the matter.

In the cabinet Mr. Begin won by 14 of the 19 votes. But the five who wanted a more flexible position on the occupied territories included two of the most important men in the cabinet, Defence Minister Ezer Weizman and Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin.

In the Knesset Mr. Begin won with 59 votes. But 37 voted against him, and 10 abstained. The 10 who abstained were members of Mr. Yadin's Democratic Movement for Change. Their abstention was a warning that they might pull out of the Begin coalition.

The decision sealed by cabinet and Knesset was the end result of an important American step on the long road to a Middle East peace. A month ago Washington had sent to Israel a set of questions about the future status of Arabs who live on the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip. In effect, Washington asked Israel to keep the door open for ultimate Arab independence.

The text of the official reply promised nothing that Washington wanted to hear. It promised only that after five years "the nature of the future relations" between Israel and the Arabs "will be considered and agreed upon."

Washington had hoped for a prospect of ultimate surrender of Israeli control over most of the West Bank and Gaza. It learned that so long as Mr. Begin is prime minister of Israel there will be no such prospect and hence no chance for the definitive peace which Washington seeks.

This, however, was not startling news in Washington. The Begin position has been known since December when president Sadat's peace proposals were answered by Mr. Begin's offer of "local autonomy" for West Bank and Gaza Arabs within the context of Israeli military and police control. Mr. Sadat could not accept such an arrangement.

So what happens next? Washington and Cairo think they have time for waiting. Mr. Vance will go shortly to talk with Mr. Sadat and with various officials of Israel. There is to be no pressure on Israel since pressure would re-solidify Mr. Begin's position in Israel.

By being aloof and quiet, Washington gives people in Israel time to think through the question of which is more important — permanent control of West Bank and Gaza, or peace. Peace is available right now, and presumably for as much longer as Mr. Sadat can survive politically in Cairo. No one can be sure how long that will be. But there does not seem to be an immediate political crisis in Egypt. Mr. Sadat might outlast Mr. Begin.

Mr. Begin may think time is on his side, but Washington and Cairo are willing to take their chances on waiting for time to change more minds in Israel about Mr. Begin's position.

After all, it would be far better for Israel to come to the peace table of its own volition and because a majority has concluded that it wants peace, than to have Israel dragged protesting to the peace table by Washington.

Erma Bombeck

(Author's Note: This is one of a series on "How America Vacations". . . and how shots can help. Today's column deals with the stay-at-home vacationers).

The decision to spend a vacation at home is not a snap judgment.

The idea first hits in January when the Christmas bills come, followed closely by a broken water heater, a defunct transmission, a clothes dryer that catches fire and a note from the orthodontist telling you your child is a candidate for a horror movie. Plans are finalized one day when one of the kids comes in shouting, "Daddy! Daddy! Our grass is wet and squishy and smells terrible," and you realize your septic tank just died.

It is the death of the septic tank that convinces you that vacation traffic will be deadly, the food won't be nearly as good as what you can get at home, and besides what kind of an insensitive human being would abandon a pregnant gerbil who could possibly deliver breach? The parents appease the children by promising them a series of mini-tours around the state.

The first mini-tour takes Daddy no farther than the garage. He has set aside the first day to "pull the house together." This includes fertilizing, rolling, seeding and mowing the lawn, adjusting the TV antenna on the roof, painting the exterior of the house, installing a humidifier in the crawl space in the hall closet, wallpapering two bedrooms, fixing a leak behind the washer, and if there's time, stripping the kitchen cabinets and staining them a lighter color so the kitchen "won't seem so dark."

The second day is spent checking on all the homes of the neighbors who are vacationing and whom you promised to water plants, put clean newspapers down for the pets, bring in mail and cut the grass.

The third day, a car in the driveway heralds the arrival of Lester and Eunice and their four children (one who can bounce a ball steadily against the house for 156 hours without stopping). Eunice's and Lester's septic tank also died and they are making a series of mini-tours around the state. They stay four days before pressing on to visit a worm farm.

The real plus of a vacation at home is that two weeks seem like three months and in January, when it's time to sign up for another vacation, you refuse, saying, "Couldn't I just take a long lunch hour in August?"

Fair support

We would like to thank the Colonist for the excellent coverage you gave to our second annual Medieval Fair on June 11. We appreciate it very much.

Could we also take this opportunity to say a very big thank you to the Mediaeval Inn, the Kopanitsa Folk Ensemble, the Society for Creative Anachronism, and the residents of Victoria who helped in presenting and participating in the events of the fair. We extend our gratitude for the many hours spent beforehand as well as on the day itself in arranging and rehearsing the activities. Finally, a special thanks to all those who braved the elements to attend the fair. We hope they enjoyed themselves in spite of the rainy weather.

Those of us who worked on the committee this year feel that the fair was a total community effort on behalf of the Nanaimo Child Development Centre; and we are very grateful for the wonderful support we received.

Arithmetic

I have no quarrel with the message in the Edgar Efrat article: Taxes — A Reasonable Idea Gone Wild in the June 21 Colonist. And certainly Mirabel Airport is just what he says — a "superfluous and unwanted bestowal on Quebec."

But can't we handle a little simple arithmetic? If there are 20,000,000 Canadians (rounding the figure for easier figuring) then $1 billion represents $50 per Canadian, not $500.

PAT MOYER,
Chemainus.

To be considered for publication in entirety or in part, letters to the editor should be on subjects of general interest, brief and to the point and, preferably, typed. Pen-names will be used, if requested, but all letters must be signed by the writer whose address also must be included.

Giant hoax

Denying welfare to those who live in districts of scant employment opportunity has been a failure, because it is based on the giant hoax that there are unfilled jobs to be had elsewhere, when, in fact, there are no jobs anywhere that cannot be filled by the people already there.

Even the far North cries: "Enough! We do not want any more job applicants coming here!"

The unemployed would not be treated as criminals, or with contempt; were it not for all the false witnessing brought against them by those who claim they could be working if they were not so lazy.

Certainly it is a bad situation when hundreds of thousands of our fellow countrymen are out of work, but it cannot be cured by abusing the victims of our economic system. A system that does not provide employment for all its people, and with a decent living wage for all, is an ungodly system, because it is unjust.

Barber called on hard facts

Some time ago I took issue with Charles Barber MLA with what I considered his ploy to obtain support from the senior citizens by criticism of the department of human resources.

A Mr. Halling in the June issue of James Bay News suggests it would be interesting to know how I arrived at my figures concerning the spending by NDP for department of human resources if their administration had continued in office.

My quotation came from a letter by Dr. B. D. Perry-Whittingham, M.D. of Sooke who was criticizing the attitude of the students at Victoria University and their lack of intelligence, dignity and peurile quibbling when Mr. Vander Zalm, minister of human resources, spoke to them at their campus. (Incidentally, Mr. Vander Zalm states he hopes to speak to them again.)

The doctor stated "let us be cognizant of the fact that had the cost of social services continued to escalate at the rate in B.C. prior to Mr. Vander Zalm's program of restraint the sum total cost by 1980 would have equalled the national total budget of Canada." If this took place where would the funding be available for any group deserving of support, handicapped or otherwise?

He further stated "beware the blinding effects of ignorance, emotionalism or political expedient patronage."

May I quote a recent expression of opinion by W. G. Butler, president of Garth Homer Achievement Centre in which he thanks the present Social Credit administration for assistance to that agency and states in letters to the press, June 13, "In all my 30 years of working in the rehabilitation of handicapped persons with numerous government bodies, I consider this government to have a much deeper sense of concern for the 'little man' than any of the other government bodies.

Mr. Barber has not to my knowledge responded to my challenge that he get down to hard cold facts and give us his budgetary figures for the department of human resources and allocation of funds to the various concerned community programs.

It is becoming increasingly evident that the public is showing alarm at government spending as witness the Proposition 13 in California.

We can be thankful our present administration in B.C. has demonstrated some recognition of this problem and is offering restraint to the point that agencies benefitting from government funding must produce satisfactory financial records and demonstrated worthiness.

The public is beginning to demand that their representatives be big enough to face matters squarely, unswayed by petty influence, unhampered by ambition, planning for the best results and determined to wage war against uncontrolled spending of the peoples' money; which in many cases has been used despite all the rhetoric to actually buy your vote and support in advancing programs without due regard to future involvement.

This is now becoming the grave concern of all governments—federal, provincial and municipal—as they realize that we must, if necessary, use restraint to consolidate our gains; and stop the irresponsible continued expansion which stimulates further the present day number one problem, inflation.

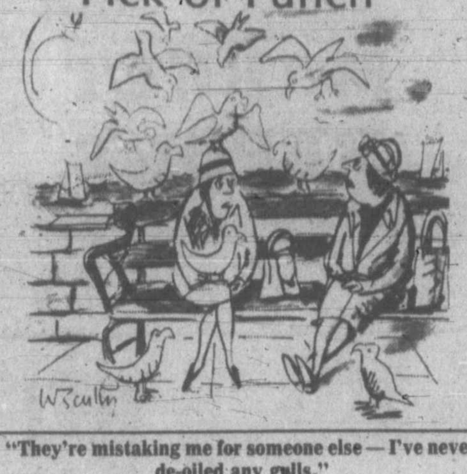
Pick of Punch



"They're mistaking me for someone else — I've never de-oiled any gulls."

'Amended' lurks ready to pounce

I don't know how everyone else feels, but personally I'm a trifle nervous about letting Mr. Trudeau fool around with our constitution. Apart from the mess the country is now in, under his supervision, I have noticed that anything he says is liable to be "amended."

Example: Cut in the civil service personnel promised in 1969 has been "amended" to an increase of 45 per cent. Pledge to bring inflation under control in May 1974 sure has been "amended" — look around. And now the lottery. He has flatly contra . . . pardon me, "amended" his remarks there, too.

Well, suppose we let him loose on our constitution. Such situations as the following might arise.

Getting ready for an election next year? Forget it. Act now "amended." Elections every 50 years. You figure it worthwhile to bump off mother-in-law. Judge sentences you to be hanged. You point out he can't, in Canada. Sorry, that was "amended" last Tuesday, don't you read the papers? Two official languages? No. "Amended," only one. Il faut parler Francais.

So watch out, dear fellow citizens — or should I say, attention, mes chers compatriots.

Talk Politics

with Jim Hume

There's a depressing feeling on me today brought about by the fact that it is generally understood that a political reporter writes a review of a legislative session just past.

I'm not depressed because the session's over, just because I'm expected to go back to March 29, the day the young vultures (and some old ones) gathered to prorogue what had been the longest legislative session in B.C. history and, the following day, open what was to be one of the shortest.

It was a day marked with the dramatic as Speaker Ed Smith, trapped in a web of his own careless weaving, turned in his three-cornered hat and made way for new Speaker Harvey Schroeder. There is no need here to recapitulate those sad events. Suffice it to say that in the ruthless world of party politics the predators strike hard when the constantly stalked prey presents a soft under-belly.

Smith had been stalked since the day he took office. When, in a careless, thoughtless moment, he lowered his guard there was never any doubt that the knives would find his heart.

WITH THAT SCANDAL hardly behind us we lurched into the Jack Davis affair, an affair now under review by the courts of British Columbia. That fact quite properly prevents us from talking about the events which led to the resignation of Davis from the cabinet, and the incidents which, sometime this fall, will be paraded in full public view at his trial for fraud and theft.

Just remember this, Jack Davis is, until found guilty, innocent of those charges. And let us also still those silly rumors already circulating among the uninformed that the preliminary hearing into the Davis charges was held in secret.

It was held in open court with the public present and with reporters present. There was a "no-publication" order, and rightly so. Davis, as does any other person, has a right to be tried in court, and not in the media via a preliminary hearing at which only crown evidence is presented.

But enough of that because the Davis affair when in the bubbling stage did more than hurt a veteran politician.

WE DISCUSSED at the time the pressures which forced Premier Bennett into what turned out to be precipitate action. There are some who point to the sudden announcement of Davis's resignation as an example of the premier blowing his cool. I never did see it that way. Placed in the context of the events of the day he did what he had to do, he did what he could not afford not to do.

But the incident did, on reflection, mark a turning point. From that day on the strain of office showed more than it had. Up to that point he had faced the pressures well, carried them well. During and after the Davis incident the face has looked a little tireder, the normally ready smile a little strained, the distemper a little closer to the surface.

Looking back over the session as a whole it has to be said that the NDP came out of the series with a slight edge in points. They had, more by good luck than penetrating Opposition judgment, won more hands at the card table than the government. They had, by virture of events unplanned but opportune, out-jockeyed the arch-foe.

IN GIVING HIS impressions of the session now past Dave Barrett gleefully pointed to the incidents I've mentioned, and a few others, as example that "coalition is breaking up at the edges." He loses ground when he says that, firstly because the supposed detrimental phrase "coaliton" really isn't detrimental (anybody who doesn't understand that Social Credit is an amalagam of people from the right of centre shouldn't be reading this) and secondly because he's dreaming when he imagines the collapse from within of the government party.

Social Credit is not going to collapse, however much Barrett hopes it does. When the election call sounds it will pull itself together and, unless the government does something incredibly and dramatically stupid, will probably win another term in office.

Barrett can dream all he wants, but the people, when it comes to crosses on paper, will remember how disastrously close his government took us to financial disaster.

But that's getting ahead of our time when this is the day for looking back.

THE THRONE SPEECH on March 30, overshadowed by the events of the day before, was as bland as could be expected.

And that really isn't a criticism. If you are a regular reader you'll know that I'm not a throne speech fan.

The budget, 10-days later, was (surprise) the highest in history and contained enough goodies to keep the natives from getting too restless, but not enough to go to the people for a new mandate.

It was a good budget, though, despite the wailings of the Opposition. Significantly enough when it came time to debate the spending programs vote by vote the NDP could only muster the energy to take a prolonged run at the premier. They rattled the bars on a couple of other cages hard but briefly and let the rest of the spending go with hardly a murmur.

They'll never admit it, but they couldn't find much to shoot at.

And so, on Thursday, the session came to a whimpering and merciful end.

THE PREMIER, quite properly and deservedly, will now have time to lick his wounds and re-charge the batteries for——ah, only he knows for what.

Dave Barrett and trusty aides Dave Stupich and Graham Lea are on the other side of the pond sipping bitter, eating fish and chips on the Embankment and pretending they're on a trade mission. We can forecast that they will come back with a deal as big as the Toyota plant which came from an earlier, and equally forgettable, trade mission.

Before he left, Barrett said he didn't think the premier was planning an election this year but that he wouldn't be surprised if he called a snap election in late summer or early fall.

Could be that's what the premier will rest up for, but don't bet on it yet.

Civic Scene

by Hubert Beyer

I learned long ago to treat development proposals with the utmost caution.

It usually starts with the architect's conception of a project. Pretty pictures show the proposal blending into the surroundings; the trees are larger than life, the materials depicted shimmer in soft pastel tones.

When the project is completed, the trees invariably turn out to be sickly saplings, the concrete doesn't shimmer softly, and the whole development sticks out like a sore thumb.

To get maximum attention from the public and co-operation from governments, developers will embellish their proposals with claims that cannot always be substantiated.

They will hold out carrots and warn of the consequences should governments place roadblocks in their way.

In the light of these considerations, I would like to draw to your attention a proposal which has been bandied about recently.

Nick Liberto, a Saanich developer-contractor, has made noises about a plant he wants to locate in Saanich.

The plant, according to Liberto, would manufacture a new type of mining drill bit which doesn't require bearings and, therefore, lasts a lot longer than the traditional bits.

Liberto wants to locate the plant on Burnside Road on a site selected by Saanich for its industrial park.

But Liberto says he hasn't time to wait for the rezoning of the land. He gave Saanich an ultimatum. Unless agreement was reached within 48 hours, he would build his plant in Alberta.

He says he already has orders for 4,000 bits from Texas and must be in production within three months.

Let's take the whole thing from the beginning again.

A week ago, Liberto first aired his plans for the drill-bit factory. He stressed that time was of the essence. The number of jobs was first given as 50, but then grew to 100.

Soon thereafter, he was talking in terms of maybe 500 jobs, a formidable number, indeed, and considering the unemployment problem, it would seem foolish for any government not to co-operate with Liberto.

To add clout to his demands that his plans be expedited, Liberto warned that he could locate in Prince Rupert. A $250,000 grant from the federal Department of Regional Economic Expansion (DREE) had already been approved and a site was waiting for him.

But, said Liberto, he wanted to give the Victoria area first crack at it.

The chamber of commerce got excited. My goodness, 500 jobs. We can't let those slip through our hands. What's the matter with Saanich? Typical of government bureaucracy.

Well, it isn't quite the way Liberto made it sound.

He did apply for a DREE grant and was promised $206,000 on a number of conditions which DREE isn't at liberty to discuss.

But the key word in the DREE contract is "conditional." It's a conditional grant. Of 10 grants made by DREE this year, the word conditional appears only on the contract with Liberto.

Whatever the conditions are, he won't get the money unless he can fulfil them.

And it was shortly after he received the conditional grant that Liberto began making noises in Victoria.

I have a few questions in connection with Liberto's demands.

Question: Why would anyone with a $206,000 grant lined up forgo that grant to locate in Saanich which doesn't qualify for DREE grants and is far away from any mining activity?

Question: How can anyone expect to set up a manufacturing plant within three months?

Question: How can a developer expect a municipality to ignore all rules and regulations and rezone a parcel of land without public hearing?

Question: How come the number of jobs to be created by this plant ranged all the way from 50 to 500 in Victoria, but is set at a firm 38 in the conditional DREE contract?

Question: Why did Liberto want just a few acres at first, but later insisted that he would need about 75 acres?

Question? Would Saanich be asked to approve a residential development if, for some reason, the drill-bit plant proposal fell through?

Question: Why did Liberto threaten to take his business to Alberta if Saanich refused to play ball when, as he claims, he had everything sewn up for Prince Rupert?

If Liberto was serious about locating his proposed plant in Victoria, or Prince Rupert for that matter, he certainly went about it the wrong way.

CANADIAN LITTLE LEAGUE
1979 NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP
2411 - 15th AVENUE SOUTH LETHBRIDGE, ALBERTA
T1K 0X7

June 1978

To the Business and Professional People of Victoria

Ladies and Gentlemen:

In the months to come, more than 85,000 youths between the ages of 8 to 18, from all across Canada, will be competing in team play-offs, to determine which teams will be in the finals of the Canadian Little League Baseball Championships to be held in Lethbridge, Alberta, in August, 1979. There, these teams will be vying for the highest honor their League has to offer; an opportunity to represent their town or city, their province, and this Nation, in the World Series Little League Baseball, to be hosted in Williamsport, Pennsylvania, later, in the same year.

To compliment this prestigious occasion we are excited about a very special project; the production of our first, Deluxe Souvenir Programme. A copy will be issued free to every member of each team competing in the finals, and a complimentary copy will be provided to every display advertiser. The remaining programmes will be made available to everyone attending the Championships at a minimal sum.

Our programme will be a beautifully designed first class product consisting of a full sized 8½" X 11" magazine format, with professional printing on coated, high gloss stock. Full color photographs will be profusely illustrated throughout the programme to enhance its attractiveness and value even more. Unquestionably, this will be a programme which you'll be proud to be a part of; a publication you'll be pleased to have helped make happen, and finally, a vehicle that will do you and your advertising dollar more than justice.

Your support of our programme is still another step in making this province a finer place in which to live, by encouraging our youth to participate, compete and excel in sporting activities of every nature.

Within the next few days one of our advertising staff will be in touch with you to determine your advertising requirements for insertion in our programme. This letter is to inform you and to encourage your participation. May we "Thank you" in advance for any courtesies which you can extend to us, for your interest in our programme and in the youths who play Little League Baseball in Canada.

Sincerely,

Sam Serbu

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — Rising industrial and mining shares sent the Toronto stock market fractionally higher Friday at the close of its lightest trading of the month.

Strength in most other sectors outweighed a sharp drop in oil issues triggered by the resumption of trading in Husky Oil Ltd. shares.

The market will be closed Monday for the Dominion Day holiday.

Husky Oil Ltd. dropped $9⅞ to $38⅝, on the sale of 41,633 shares after recovering from an earlier plunge to $35½ following its resumption about 11:30 a.m.

A halt was issued at Wednesday's opening for news that Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. has decided to hold the line at its 35-per-cent acquisition. However, AGTL president Robert Blair said the company reserves the right to defend its position as principal holder should another firm try to take over the Calgary-based integrated oil company.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, faced with adverse news on interest rates and inflation, turned in a mixed showing Friday in the slowest trading in nearly three months.

Another slow session is expected next Monday with many Americans taking a four-day Independence Day weekend. The markets will be open Monday, but closed Tuesday.

The government reported Friday morning that the consumer price index climbed at a 10.8-per-cent annual rate in May, setting a two-digit pace for the second consecutive month.

Several of the largest banks in the U.S. raised their prime lending rates to nine per cent from 8¾ per cent.

At the close, the Fed announced an increase in the discount rate to 7¼ per cent from 7 per cent.

Inland Container climbed 2 to $32¼ on word that the company and Time Inc. had approved definitive merger agreements.

Among Canadian issues, Seagrams gained ⅝ to $23½, Campbell Red Lake ½ to $33⅛, Bell Canada ¼ to $50¼ and Dome ¼ to $77½. Inco slipped ⅛ to $16⅜ and Alcan ⅛ to $27. Massey Ferguson las unchanged at $10½.

REGIONAL PLANNER
REGIONAL DISTRICT OF COMOX-STRATHCONA

The Planning Department of the Regional District of Comox-Strathcona has a vacancy for a planner. Join an energetic team of professionals on a number of planning tasks including the completion of three settlement plans and a community plan. We are looking for someone with a thorough knowledge of planning techniques, able to provide direction, and capable of communicating effectively with the public. This position entails some supervisory work over other staff.

Preference will be given to candidates with several years increasingly responsible experience in a planning department. Post graduate training at a recognized planning school will be an asset. The successful candidate should be a member, or eligible for membership in C.I.P.

The Regional District encompasses about 20,000 km2, with a population of 60,000. Its office is located in the scenic Comox Valley, close to skiing and water sports. The 1978 salary range is $1522 to $1857. If you feel you qualify and wish to participate in an active planning program, please reply in writing, no later than July 19, 1978, to:

Mr. T. Becker, Planning Director,
Regional District of Comox-Strathcona,
4795 Headquarters Road,
Courtenay, B.C. V9N 5W3.

Merger next for Husky?

CALGARY (CP) — Studies are under way into possible changes in the corporate structures of Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. and Husky Oil Ltd. which some published reports describe as merger investigations.

Alberta Gas Trunk, which has purchased 35 per cent of Husky stock, said Thursday that Husky requested such a study during recent meetings between the two companies.

In a prepared statement, Robert Blair, president of Alberta Gas Trunk, said the managements of both companies had met and "management of Husky has asked AGTL to consider studies commencing immediately of alternative corporate structures that might be of benefit to the company and its shareholders."

In an interview later, Blair said Alberta Gas Trunk would soon name its directors to the Husky board.

Although up to four representatives could be named by Alberta Gas to the board, the nomination and actual numbers of directors will be the subject of "private negotiations," he said.

INDUSTRIAL ZONED

Super location for warehouse and offices. Zoning permits combination of both. Easy access to anywhere in Greater Victoria. 46,800 sq. ft. site. Contour of land allows two-level building. Asking price $165,000. Owners will build to suit or lease space.

Livestock

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts Friday at the Calgary public stockyard consisted of a light supply of slaughter cows and feeder cattle. Trade was dull to moderate on slaughter cows. There were no slaughter steers or heifers on offer. Slaughter cows traded steady. D1-2 cows 39-41.50, D3 36-39, D5 34-36. Friday's light sales of average condition feeder cattle and stock calves met a good local demand. Heavy feeder steers and heifers traded steady with this week's sales. Light weight feeder steers were $3 lower. Light weight heifers and stock calves traded $2 lower.

BOND WEEK

Prices firmer

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were higher in moderate trading on the Canadian bond market this week.

The short end of the market was unchanged. Mid-, long-term, provincial issues rose one-quarter of a point. Corporate issues remained the same.

Dealers said bond prices firmed this week by about half a point, as the impetus of cash looking for a home overrode investor concerns about higher inflation rates and tighter credit. They say trading has been quiet but relatively volatile, and that the pattern is likely to persist for sevetral weeks.

Day-to-day money was available at five per cent. Three-month treasury bills were traded at an average of 8.26 per cent, up from 8.23 per cent last week and six-month bills at 8.65 per cent, up from 8.61 per cent.

Historic Fresco Bared

PORDENONE, Italy (AP) - Workmen restoring the 15th-century cathedral in the nearby town of Sacile, badly damaged in a 1976 earthquake, have uncovered a hidden fresco. Art experts said the work was extremely interesting and planned tests to determine the artist and when it was painted.

Churches yearbook covers diverse information

There are 40 religious periodicals in Canada and, according to 1974 statistics, people in the 40-44 age bracket had the largest average income and yet, in breakdown of charitable donors, were fifth on a list of 11, with those older than 70 contributing the highest amounts.

These and other facts are contained in the Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches, 1978, now available through major book stores across Canada. The book is published by Abingdon Press for the National Council of Churches, New York, and is edited by Constant H. Jacquet. The yearbook was first published in 1916.

One of the finest reference works of its kind, the book is used by government offices, libraries, major tourist brokers and religious writers, as well as members of the clergy and professional workers. Listings for both Canada and the U.S. cover the fields of religious bodies (both Christian and non-Christian), international agencies, confessional, interdenominational, co-operative, theological seminaries, faculties and Bible schools, regional and ecumenical agencies, service agencies and religious periodicals.

There is an extensive statistical and historical section which gives church financial statistics and related data, a list of the main depositories of church history material and sources along with interesting trends and developments, the employment situation for ordained Protestant clergy, reports on a study of the effects of inflation on per capita givings and a preliminary report on women ordained to the full ministry.

In his foreward, Jacquet states there are several major qualifications that should be made about church statistics. For example, they are always incomplete and not always comparable.

Forest bill delay asked

The Victoria Presbytery of the United Church of Canada has asked the B.C. Legislature to delay third reading of Bill 14, concerning the Forest Act, to allow the public more time to gain information and offer input into the debate. The request is in a resolution passed June 27 and is based on what the church termed the long-term implications of the bill which deals with forest management policy and proposals to increase logging of crown lands.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

The hero of Albert Camus' allegorical novel, The Plague, Dr. Bernard Rieux, is a completely dedicated physician. With great tenderness he cares for his wife who is dying of tuberculosis, and when a deadly plague strikes his city, Oran in North Africa, he risks his life fighting it and attending its victims. He is an utterly decent man, a man of great compassion and of the consecrated competence to implement his compassion.

But Rieux is an unbeliever who has rejected the Christian interpretation of reality and human existence in which he had been raised. The author seems to be trying to show in the person of this splendid physician that basic human decency requires no support from religion and that the humane unbeliever is often more sensitive to the needs and sufferings of others than is the conventional Christian believer. Readers of the novel see that Rieux is morally superior — and superior by Christian standards — to the disturbed priest, Father Paneloux.

Many persons of authentic decency, of creative moral concern, are without faith in God, without any formal ties with religious tradition. Religious believers can claim no monopoly in decency and compassion. Do these people refute, by the very quality of their lives, the biblical notion that religion and ethics, faith and morality, are inextricably entwined in one another?

Let me ask another question. If a whole society be cut off from the nourishment of faith, can its morality long survive? I suggest, hesitantly, that individuals — some individuals, anyway — can maintain a high morality apart from faith, but that a society as a whole cannot. I put it to you that Rieux and others like him are in fact nourished from streams of water which they do not acknowledge, that their roots — the roots of their decency and compassion — are nourished by waters of faith, even though they may not think that they are.

The Christian's moral task is not merely to try to bear fruit of mercy and compassion in his or her own life; it is also to help sustain the moral foundations of society. Let us indeed rejoice in the decency and the compassion of Dr. Rieux and his kind — but let us recognize that they owe much to the faith of others, past and present.

Here we must guard against smugness and censoriousness and complacency. We must resist temptations to moral snobbery. None of us, even the most saintly among us, has earned the right to adopt a pose of moral superiority. But we must determine to keep our moral roots nourished in the waters of God's grace, so we may be guided and strengthened for the service of God's purposes of mercy and love and justice — and so the moral capital of society may be constantly replenished.

It is a fundamental biblical principle — implicit in the Bible as a whole and clerly expressed in the teaching of Jesus, and, I submit, verified in history and experience — that morality is not self-supporting, that decency and compassion are not, in the long run, self-sustaining.

Adventists seeking new quarters

The local community services centre of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, which has been serving Victoria since 1926, is seeking new quarters.

When the church first started helping meet the welfare and other needs of the community it operated from the old Graham Street church, and since has functioned in various locations, its latest address being 930 Hillside.

The current temporary address is 1462 Hillside. It is increasingly difficult to find suitable building space at low cost to carry on this humanitarian work, yet somewhere in this city there must be an older house or hall, where this type of service may still be carried on to meet the many calls that come in, church members feel.

The Seventh-day Adventist Church maintains two organizations dedicated to helping those in need. One of these organizations is called Seventh-day Adventist World Services, the other Seventh-day Adventist Community Services.

Community services is operated by the members in the local churches, and almost every church has a community services centre.

Both organizations give relief without regard to race, creed, religion or national origin.

Love for human beings, no matter where they live or what may be their station in life, motivates Seventh-day Adventists to fund and execute extensive relief programs.

When the Johnstown, Pennsylvania, flood took place in 1977 community services was there, giving away thousands of articles of clothing, sheets, blankets, to help relieve the suffering of those who had lost everything.

The same service was provided in the flooded areas of the southlands when a tornado struck in Alabama and Mississippi, and when tragedy hit Big Thompson Canyon in Colorado in July 1976.

In addition, for the hundreds of thousands of people who have been burned out or for some other reason became destitute, community services has endeavored to make life easier.

This same type of emergency help is offered at each local centre. Baby layettes, crib blankets, are made available to mothers in hospital who have little means or no other persons to turn to.

Adventists dig down deep into their pockets and give to both funds.

The S.A.W.S. disaster and famine relief offering is taken in their chuches around the world once a year. In the past two years this offering amounted to more than $900,000 each year.

Some church members are so interested in this work that they give regularly, weekly or monthly, to it.

Help comes from commercial corporations, governments — U.S. AID being the largest contributor — and the thousands of friends who know that their dollars will not be used up in administration, but will reach the needy people of the world. Nearly 100 per cent of this relief money went to countries other than the United States.

At the same time community services, the sister service, gave more than $3 million in relief in the U.S. alone. In 1977, SDAs gave relief around the world in an amount in excess of $9 million.

The Seventh-day Adventist community services works closely with other agencies, for in this work of relieving suffering, there is room for all.

As followers of Christ, they cannot turn away from suffering, hunger, malnourishment and sorrow. They believe that the poor will ever be with us and, as long as time shall last, will do what they can to help people wherever they are.

St. John's schedules three Sundays

Focus set on prairies

During three Sundays in July, St. John's historic "Iron" Church will focus on the people of the Prairies. "On these Sundays," says the Reverend Robert MacRae, "St. John's will welcome visitors, tourists, newcomers and former residents of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. In a small way we will capture the friendly spirit of "community" that is so characteristic of the Prairies.

"As we do so, we also celebrate our unity," says the rector of the parish.

St. John's Church (with the green spire on Quadra) will have two services each Sunday during which special focus will be made: at 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. Manitoba Sunday will be held July 9; Saskatchewan Sunday on July 16 and Alberta SUNDAY on July 23. At these services former prairie clergy and bishops will assist with the worship and the preaching.

"It is a meeting of people to celebrate re-creation, holiday, and God's abundance in the land." It is meant to be a time of thanksgiving and to remake old friendships and re-establish live contact with communities of the prairies, says MacRae.

"We will meet formally in the worship services and be welcomed informally at the parish coffee hour at 10:30 a.m. in the garden court beside the church." Special gifts to mark the occasion have been prepared for both visitors and congretation alike. All people are welcome to attend butespecially those from the many prairie communities and churches.

Among those participating will be Bishop Gerald Burch, former bishop of Edmonton, Bishop Stanley Steer of Saskatoon, The Rev. Canon Minto Swan, one time rector of Portage la Prairie, The Rev. R. N. R. Holmes, one time Archdeacon of Selkirk and travelling missionary in Rupert's Land, the Reverend Robert MacRae formerly of Prince Albert and Saskatoon and a special preacher, the Reverend Dr. James I. Packer of Bristol, author and theologian.

CHURCH CHRONICLES

Folkfest offers interfaith fare

A Folkfest interfaith church service will be held at Centennial Square 11 a.m. on Sunday as part of Canadian Unity Day ceremonies. Folkfest co-ordinator Iryna Revutsky says this is the first time a church service of this type has been organized in Victoria.

It begins with the Lord's Prayer in English, Portuguese, Spanish and Italian, followed by the Unity Prayer in English, a Ukrainian hymn, scriptures read by Rev. Sui Man Lee of Chinese Presbyterian Church, a performance of Hindi Bhajan Satsang—Dhana Moodley and group, and a negro spiritual. There will be a sermon and prayers in Polish and English and benediction by Lama Tashi Namgyal, Tibetan Buddist priest.

The newly appointed district governor of Rotary International, Dr. A. Deans Peggs, will preach the sermon at Fairfield United Church this Sunday at 11 a.m. Peggs has been an administrator in the educational system of Hong Kong. Before that, he served in a similar capacity in Nassau in the Bahamas.

For the past six years, Dr. and Mrs. Peggs have been living in Victoria and have been involved in community enterprises. Dr. Peggs is an elder of Fairfield United.

Organist Erich Schwandt of the faculty of music, University of Victoria, will give a recital at Christ Church Cathedral, Quadra and Burdett, at 4 p.m. today. The program is entitled Music in the Cathedral 1978.

Tucker

Melody Tucker, 892 Craigflower, has been chosen as one of eight young people to represent B.C. at the Nazarene World Youth Conference at Estes Park, Colorado, in July.

Melody, who attends the Esquimalt Church of the Nazarene, will be among 2,400 young Nazarenes from 50 countries who will gather for the conference.

Its purpose is to accelerate spiritual growth in the lives of the delegates, to help them share their faith with others and to introduce them to future church leaders.

Melody is following in the footsteps of her brother, Tim, who was a delegate to the last conference four years ago in Switzerland.

Victoria Christian Women's Club will hold a lunch from 12:30-2:30 p.m., Wednesday, July 5 in the garden at 4071 Haro Road (bus route 16).

Special feature will be summer fashions by Eatons, with music by Lynne MacKinnon. Speaker will be Fran Thomas of Sequim, Wash.

Reservations are necessary by July 3; surnames A-L phone Julia Hampton, 598-7459, and M-Z, Thelma Brownrigg, 477-7775.

Please reserve for free babysitting at Emmanuel Baptist Church.

The fourth in the series of 12 Christian gospel summer services in Beacon Hill Park, sponsored by Parks Services Interdenominational, will be held at 7 p.m. Sunday in Cameron bandshell.

Victoria Citadel Corps of the Salvation Army will conduct the service.

The gospel message will be delivered by the corps officer, Capt. John Wilder, with deputy bandmaster Bruce Hoadley as conductor and the Citadel Songsters with leader Brian Russell.

In addition to numbers by the Songsters, the program will feature the Townson family singing group both prior to and during the service. Accompanist is Brian Ratcliffe.

Attendance at these community services, now in their 36th year, shows they are well appreciated.

The Canadian Council of Churches is sponsoring a Canada-China program "to develop a responsible Christian understanding of the on-going Chinese Revolution, to awaken the long-held friendship of Canadian Christians for the people of China and to interpret China to the Canadian Church and Community."

The program is supported by Roman Catholic and Protestant bodies.

The Victoria branch is sponsoring a visit in September by the director, Dr. Raymond Whitehead, and is planning study groups in the fall using the book China! Search for Community written by Whitehead and his wife.

Memorial camp re-opens today

Neighbors Deal

George Pringle Memorial Camp starts its summer season today. This is the 27th season of the Shawnigan Lake camp.

Camps in July are Junior Girls, Junior Boys and Intermediate Boys.

From July 29 to Aug. 15 the camp will be open to families to come and camp by the week or by the day. Campsite facilities and staff will be available, including good meals in the dining room.

Other camps in August are Junior Girls and a fun music co-ed camp for teens 14 to 17 years of age.

Barbara Neighbors Deal, who says "anyone who can speak can sing," will direct the camp. Barbara is an internationally-known composer, choral director and songleader. Her book Singin' a Song for Joy was published by Abingdon Press. She has directed youth and adult choirs for 12 years, both local churches and travelling choirs. In addition, she has conducted many choral workshops for young singers.

She teaches piano, voice and guitar and has a special interest in music therapy. She and her husband, a United Methodist minister, make their home in Walla Walla, Wash.

Further information and camp registration forms can be obtained from any United Church or by telephone from Phyllis Moore 598-8165. For family camp call Joan Sharpe 477-1576.

Witnesses plan for conventions

The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Toronto has announced plans for four international conventions of Jehovah's Witnesses in Canada during the summer of 1978. Theme is Victorious Faith.

Arnold McNamara, convention manager, Toronto, said 145,000 delegates are expected at the conventions scheduled in four different cities.

McNamara said the largest complexes in the country wil be utilized. These include the Edmonton Coliseum, Winnipeg Stadium, Empire Stadium in Vancouver and the Olympic Stadium in Montreal.

Richard Tannhauser, spokesman for 10 delegations in Victoria, said more than 1,000 representatives will be traveling to Vancouver for the convention scheduled at Empire Stadium. The crowd for the convention, July 19-23, is expected to reach 22,000.

Tannhauser added that 145,000 people are expected to attend the four conventions across Canada, with sessions to be held in nine languages: English, French, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Greek, Ukrainian, Arabic and Korean.

Twenty conventions are planned for the continental U.S. with an attendance estimate of 760,000.

"There are many issues confronting society today," Tannhauser said. "These include changing moral standards, emphasis on materialism, social problems, energy crises and an accelerating arms race. The convention will stress the value of faith in the Bible as Christians face these issues and other daily problems of life."

'Violation of ethics'

Group bucks marina plan

A major Vancouver Island environmental group has come out against Sealand owner Bob Wright's proposed marina expansion in North Saanich's Tsehum Harbour because it would violate conserver society ethics.

(The "conserver society" is an international movement based on living in harmony with the environment, recycling wastes, and using renewable energy resources while conserving non-renewable ones.)

The Citizens Association to Save the Environment (C.A.S.E.), 6002 West Saanich Road, said Wright's proposed marina expansion would be unethical under conserver society guidelines and would also jeopardize wildlife habitat.

C.A.S.E. president Derrick Mallard said that "protection of our natural systems, even if they are only remaining small pockets, is important in both an ecological and esthetic context."

Mallard said the local environmental group was against any further marina expansion or developments, and that increasing use of motor boats and other combustion vehicles was using up dwindling oil reserves.

The need to conserve petroleum resources was "falling on deaf ears," he said.

"Providing more facilities to use even more resources is not a function of the conserver society," he said.

"We are against this marina expansion because it will jeopardize wildlife habitat and is an unethical act within what should now be a conserver society," Mallard said.

Wright has made no formal application to council for marina expansion or a possible housing development in the area.

The informal proposal, however, is being studied by North Saanich's advisory planning commission, which has sought public reaction.

Wright has offered to deed 12 acres of the land in question to the municipality for a nature reserve, and to sell the municipality a further 15 acres at market price to increase the reserve to 27 acres.

What's Cooking

"I believe in the quality of Canadian life, and in the character of Canadian institutions."

"I believe in the Commonwealth of Nations within whose bounds we have found freedom, and outside which our national life would lose its independent being."

"I believe in our abiding friendship with our nearest neighbours; an honest friendship without either the subservience or the mimicry which must impair true partnership."

"I believe that Canada is one, and that if our minds dwell on those things which its parts have in common, we can find the unity of the whole."

"I believe that with sound work, the spirit of a team, and an awareness of ourselves, we can look forward to achievements beyond our imagining."

Travel costs threaten team program

UVic pushing freestyle sports

Free time for unstructured recreation is an important goal in the University of Victoria's athletic policies, UVic president Dr. Howard Petch said Thursday.

In taking before the board of governors a new athletic policy, Petch said the university has a good future in athletics if some basic resources, primarily money, are available to help UVic overcome drawbacks such as rapidly-rising travel costs. He noted that air fares from Vancouver have doubled in the last four years, and were largely responsible for forcing the university to drop its hockey and rowing teams.

The basketball teams, which went to the Canadian collegiate championships this year, were also in danger of being dropped but if they had been, the university would have been eliminated from Canada West Universities Athletic Association competition, Petch said.

Representations to the federal government resulted in $500,000 being set aside, $350,000 of that for western Canada, to cover the cost of interprovincial travel for university teams, and although UVic's share has not been determined, the money should put university athletic programs on a better footing.

He noted that UVic has been named as a future potential national centre for development of athletes in rowing, gymnastics and middle-distance running. The most progress has been made in rowing so far, he said.

The university is also hoping to give the community greater access to its athletic facilities. A modest fee will enable any member of the community to use the facilities in the McKinnon Centre this summer, and next year the centre may be made available from the first of May, instead of the first of July as is the case this year.

In developing its athletic policies, however, the university should be careful not to eliminate "free-time" athletic activities. The growth of intramural sports (there were 79 intramural volleyball teams at the university last year) has been "phenomenal," and there is a need to reserve time for unstructured use of athletic facilities for individuals who only want to swim or run around the gym, Petch said.

Yukon takes step closer to self-rule

WHITEHORSE, Yukon (CP) — The territory's legislative assembly has taken another step toward responsible government by passing a bill which would create a council with greater powers than the federally-appointed territorial commissioner.

The bill calls for a chairman and three members drawn from the legislature to be appointed by the commissioner on a recommendation by the assembly.

The commissioner would be required to act with the advice and consent of the council and, if he acted without it, the council could void his decisions.

Art Pearson, current commissioner, says he has recommended to Northern Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner that "this is something we must do. Really, it's doing nothing more than formalizing what is really happening."

'Diploma' for Jubilee

Royal Jubilee Hospital has been granted accreditation by the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation for the maximum term of three years.

The certificate of accreditation "demonstrates that the whole hospital staff have accepted outside appraisal and have substantially met or exceeded standards which have national and international approval," Jubilee executive director Dr. Archibald Pickles said.

He noted that 50 per cent of Canadian hospitals are accredited, but only 35 per cent of accredited hospitals have certificates for the maximum three-year term.

Lake Hill honors

Nancy Ferguson was awarded the academic plaque Thursday at the Lake Hill School awards day.

Brenda Porterfield was presented with the citizenship cup while Corene Gillies and Gerrie Schoffer shared the girls sportsmanship cup and John Noble captured the boys' cup.

Probe fee $500 a day

Industrial inquiry commissioners Richard Bird and Bert Blair are receiving $500 a day for their work on two separate labor disputes, Frank Rhodes, assistant deputy labor minister, said Friday.

Bird has been handling the Victoria firefighters' pay dispute, while Blair is handling the Vancouver police dispute dealing with two-man patrols.

Rhodes said in an interview that the payments are not out of line. He said if a private lawyer were hired by the government to look into the disputes, he would most likely charge $85 to $90 an hour for his services.

Fleeced keys hold power

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Burglars who snatched the master keys to 700 transformer stations could use them to enter any station and black out large areas of Sweden's capital, Anders Oreland, the city's energy security chief said.

First the fleet show, today the Princess Pats

Pacific command fleet set festive mood for holiday weekend in Greater Victoria Friday with its annual regatta, and among onlookers were Lady Patricia Brabourne in photo at left, daughter of Earl Mountbatten of Burma, and her husband John, a producer of films such as Murder on the Orient Express, shown chatting with Lt. Rick Lambier, executive officer of HMCS Miramichi. In photo at right, a navy diver cavorts on mockup of a rooster aboard float entered by civilian employees of CFB Esquimalt. Today it's military's turn, with the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry parade at 11 a.m. on the lawns of the Legislative Buildings. The battalion will hold open house at Work Point barracks at 1:30 p.m., followed by a two-hour grandstand show at 3 p.m. Lady Brabourne, the regiment's colonel-in-chief, will be in attendance. Grandstand show will include helicopter demonstrations, a mock battle, a parachute display, and two CF-5 Freedom Fighters displaying tactical flying manoeuvres. And this weekend brings Sidney Days, with a parade at 11 a.m. today and from noon to 6 p.m. a fun fair featuring a salmon barbecue. Sunday events include a 10 a.m. sailing regatta and a noon visit from Captain Cook.

Hospital society may admit staff

Employees at Victoria General Hospital will be eligible for membership in its governing society if bylaw recommendations of the board of management are approved at the next annual general meeting of the society in September.

Bob Milne, chairman of the board's ad hoc bylaw review committee, recommended to the board Thursday deletion of a clause prohibiting employees from membership in the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society which runs the hospital through the board of management.

Employees will still be prohibited from running for directorships on the board of management.

Director Cliff Horwood expressed concern that the change could result in eventual domination of the society by employees and physicians.

"I'm not against it, but there is a danger down the road that there could be a preponderance of doctors and employees in the society."

The suggested bylaw change was passed unanimously by the board.

Proposals to permit election of replacement directors at any general meeting of the society, rather than only at annual general meetings, and to eliminate corporate memberships, went through without difficulty but proposals to eliminate the president of the medical staff as a member of the board, and to reduce the term of directors to two years from three ran into trouble.

Medical staff president John Lewis said the medical staff had not been allowed to discuss the change affecting them, and told the board he thought the matter had been handled poorly. Lewis said he did not regard the question itself as significant but objected to a directive from another director of the board not to bring the matter up at a meeting of the medical staff.

The suggestion was eventually tabled.

Brewing folks called it a holiday too

Where have all the brewers gone?

That could have been a popular (or in this case, unpopular) hit song Friday as the province headed into a big summer holiday weekend with the brewery lockout still firmly in place and some of the key figures apparently off to holiday land.

A public relations spokesman for the brewery industry said she understood Canadian Brewery Workers Union chief negotiator John Langley had gone to Prince George.

She said it was obviously just a coincidence that beer is now plentiful in Prince George because of an independent brewery there that isn't caught in the labor dispute with Carling O'Keefe, Molson's, Labatt's and Columbia Brewery.

As the weekend dawned, it became difficult to reach some other negotiators.

Talks broke off last Tuesday and it appeared no one was in a hurry to get them back on track—at least until the holiday is out of the way.

GOLF CLUBHOUSE SKIPPED IN PROVINCIAL GRANTS

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said Friday that money for renovating the clubhouse at the Cedar Hill Golf Course has not been included in provincial government grants to his municipality.

Grants amounting to $161,363 for recreational facility projects in Saanich were announced Friday by Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, on behalf of Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf.

"Actually, we're grateful for small mercies, but the grants didn't include renovations to the Cedar Hill clubhouse," Couvelier said.

"Because we're not going to get the (money for the) clubhouse, it will be a little difficult for us. The tenders are in for the clubhouse renovations.

"We'll have trouble with the membership. They'll be a little annoyed," Couvelier said.

Club members had already offered about $50,000 toward the roughly $100,000 in renovations, he said.

The three grants Saanich did get were $86,666 for development of a driving range and pro shop for the Cedar Hill Golf Course; $52,902 for additions to the G.R. Pearkes Arena, including a lobby and lounge, and $21,795 for the addition of exercise equipment to the Gordon Head Recreation Centre, including saunas and a whirlpool.

Grants were from the Recreation Facilities Assistance Program, providing up to one-third of the capital construction costs.

36 yachts vying in race to Maui

Most people go to Hawaii with their heads in the clouds.

But every second year a select salty group, far removed from the friendly (or otherwise) skies of the big airlines, makes the long trip the hard way.

Today at 11 a.m. they'll be heading out again in 36 yachts on a journey to paradise that may take two weeks or more to complete.

The winner of the first such race in 1965 had an elapsed time of 15 days and almost 17 hours. The next race came three years later and the event has been held every two years since.

Lawyer Louis Lindholm's Annie Cadby is the only local boat entered this time.

The starting shot will be fired by Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving who will do the noisy honors from aboard the yacht Sea Q. The starting point is off Dallas Road between Brotchie Ledge and the Sea Q.

With Lindholm aboard the Annie Cadby will be his wife, Helen, deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel, Malcolm Anderson, David Shepherdson, Colin Huggett and Lindholm's 23-year-old son, Marshall.

The lawyer has made his mark in racing circles. He has finished second in his divisions of the classic Swiftsure, and also took second place in the 1976 Southern Strait of Georgia event.

Faculty given 4 per cent hike

Faculty salaries at the University of Victoria will cost UVic an additional 6.4 per cent next year, the board of governors has determined.

University president Dr. Howard Petch said Friday that the board of governors had awarded the faculty an across-the-board salary increase of four per cent. The salaries are set by the board following consultation with the faculty association.

In addition, most faculty members will get the standard merit increment of $824, Petch said, with a few getting less, and a few getting more. The increment is applied to most salaries, but ceilings are set so that above a certain salary level the increment is only $412, and at an even higher level, only $206.

Over-all, the university's revenues will rise by 6.5 per cent, and the total operating budget by 3.4 per cent. Last year, $1.1 million was taken from the university's surplus to supplement revenues and cover non-recurring expenses, but this year individual departmental budgets will cover these costs.

Leechman papers welcomed by provincial archives

By PAUL De GROOT
Colonist reporter

Five hundred or more published articles, an internationally-acclaimed film, several books, and a reputation as one of Canada's foremost anthropologists might seem an adequate gift to posterity, but Dr. Douglas Leechman's idea of what is important is somewhat different.

Now retired in Victoria, the anthropologist, lexicographer and writer has donated to the Provincial Archives not only all the papers associated with those important credits but also much of his "ephemera," the various papers and artifacts that we take for granted but which the anthropologist of the next generation may find most useful in reconstructing the spirit of our age.

"The flyers people get with their telephone bills, the cheques they write—everyone throws them out, but 50 years from now they will really mean something to the researcher."

And what does the anthropologist's wife, Ruth, think about a man who keeps his bills for posterity?

"She thinks I'm mad," he says with a laugh.

"No, no, I'm very much in sympathy," she responds.

The provincial archives are now taking inventory of about 30 boxes of Leechman's papers, ephemera and otherwise, and again, it was Leechman's anthropologist's sense that made him donate the papers before his death.

"When I was with the National Museum in Ottawa, one of the most common complaints was that when a man died, the first thing his relatives did was take his papers out in the backyard and burn them. We agreed that the first thing the anthropologist should do is dash over there before the body was cold to rescue the papers."

Although troubled with ill health in recent weeks, Leechman, 87, still leads an active life, one that cannot be wound down just because the years are piling up.

The gift of most of his papers constitutes a major acquisition, archivist Brian Young says. More items in the collection will have to wait, because Leechman is continuing to use them in various writings.

Educated in England, Europe and Egypt, the London-born Leechman came to B.C.'s Nicola Valley as a lad to shake off a bad case of asthma. He fought in the First World War and ended up in Esquimalt, where some experience in the Victoria library fortified a life-long interest in words and books.

He began studying library science at the University of Washington, but a course in anthropology persuaded him to change to that field, and he came within one exam of obtaining his degree when he took off to help a friend.

He later applied through a civil service examination for a job as an assistant at the National Museum in Ottawa, where he worked for 31 years, eventually becoming senior anthropologist at the Museum of Man.

Leechman

In working his way through the ranks he finally managed to acquire a degree, and even to teach writing, a favorite and profitable sideline, at Carleton University and other schools.

Leechman did much original research among Canada's Indian and Eskimo peoples, and wrote several books on them, including The Native Tribes of Canada which remains a standard text on that subject. The Loon's Necklace, an Indian legend told in film through the use of Indian masks, for which Leechman wrote the script and provided technical direction, received 14 international film awards.

He also wrote two radio series on the peoples and mammals native to Canada.

His first retirement, in 1955, was short-lived. He stepped down from the Museum of Man and immediately became the first director of the newly-formed Glenbow Foundation, which now has the most comprehensive collection of Western Canadian artifacts in the world.

His retirement from the Glenbow Foundation in 1957 enabled him to indulge in an avocation which he continues today—lexicography. Leechman was a member of the editorial board of the Dictionary of Canadianisms, a consultant to Eric Partridge's dictionary of English slang, and is still active as a consultant to the Oxford English dictionary, to which he estimates he has sent 100,000 entries in his lifetime.

Although most of these would be duplicated by other consultants, Leechman says it is his job to send new words in when he sees them, and the job of the dictionary's editors to select words and definitions for inclusion in the OED, the final authority on the English language.

"There are some beautiful words coming out these days," he says with the air of a connoisseur tasting a fine wine.

A batch of cards at his desk lists a few, some of them noteworthy—"snail darter," "serendipity," "Yippie"—while one hopes that a few less worthy constructions, such as "upgunned" or "workability" get the blue pencil from lexicographers.

While already part of everyday language, these words are not necessarily in the dictionary, as Leechman can well tell. In addition to the 13 great volumes of the OED, which occupy a place of honor along a four-foot bookshelf in his study, another 40 or 50 dictionaries line the walls.

It is clear that his scientific bent continues.

"The extraordinary thing is the large number of English words of which we have no knowledge of their origin," he says.

Kelp, for instance, is a common enough sight in B.C., but the origins of the word itself are unknown. Leechman, with his inquiring mind, still hopes to find the answer to this and other mysteries.

Ottawa to probe 'priority chemicals'

Chemicals known or suspected to be harmful to human health or the environment will be investigated by the federal environment and health and welfare ministries.

The chemicals are named in a new list of "priority chemicals" published in the Canada Gazette, and a second list of "candidate chemicals" which may warrant detailed investigation.

Division of chemicals into "priority" and "candidate" lists is similar to hazardous product regulations of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The Canadian list of priority chemicals is divided into three categories:

- Category I—substances for which regulations are being developed. It includes chlorofluoromethanes (used in aerosol propellants), mirex (a flame retardant), polybrominated biphenyls (flame retardants for plastics), and polychlorinated biphenyls (transformer fluid).
- Category II—chemicals believed to pose a significant danger to the environment or human health. These are being investigated in depth to determine the nature and extent of danger, and appropriate counteraction. It consists of arsenic (a byproduct of gold and copper smelting), asbestos, benzine (a solvent used in paints), lead and mercury.
- Category III—substances which will be studied to determine whether they pose a danger and whether controls are necessary. It includes cadmium (used in electroplating), and six classes of organic chemicals such as chlorobenzines (solvents), phthalate esters (plasticizers), and triaryl phosphates (high temperature lubricants and plasticizers.)

The list of priority chemicals was compiled by the environmental contaminants committee of Environment Canada and National Health and Welfare. Some chemicals on the list have already been regulated under the Environmental Contaminants Act or other federal statutes.

A list of candidate chemicals, also being drawn up by the two departments, will include bromobenzines, bromoethylenes, chloroethanes, chloroethers, chloroethylenes, chloronapthalenes, chlorotoluenes, diethanolamine and triethanolamine, hexachlorobutadiene (HCBD), isocyanates (organic) and polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons (PAHs).

PAHs are byproducts of fossil fuel combustion, that is, from automobiles. The other substances have many uses as solvents and chemical intermediates.

Methanol push tremendous, say environmentalists

By STEPHEN HUME
Colonist Reporter

B.C. environmentalists say they are encouraged by the federal government's recent announcement that a major Canadian industry producing liquid methanol fuel could create tens of thousands of jobs and start the country on an alternative energy path.

Federal Environment Minister Len Marchand said this month an in-depth consultants study reported that a methanol industry could lessen Canadian dependence on imported energy, and make Canada a leader in alternate energy technology in the next 25 years.

Methanol fuel could be produced from coal, wood, natural gas, agricultural residues or municipal garbage.

The fuel has successfully been mixed with gasoline to power automobiles. It is attractive from a conservation viewpoint because it is formed from products which otherwise would be discarded as refuse.

Marchand said: "The methanol study does not constitute federal government policy, but I feel this report contains an idea that should be given the widest possible debate and consideration, as we plan for our future energy needs."

According to the study, developing a methanol industry would require massive capital investments ranging from between $10 billion and $20 billion, while creating from 82,000 to 165,000 man years of employment in direct construction of methanol plants across Canada, and an estimated 50,000 to 60,000 permanent jobs in the mathanol production industry.

The study also said:

- Methanol plants using renewable forest products could locate in regions where economic development is most needed.
- A methanol industry would give Canada greater security of energy supplies and have a positive impact on the balance of trade deficit, while offering new export opportunities.

Marchand's promotion of a methanol industry was "tremendous, it's right on the line as far as we're concerned," Terry Chandler of the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society said Thursday.

Chandler said in an interview from Vancouver that employment prospects of a methanol industry made it attractive for B.C.

There wouldn't be the boom-and-bust phenomenon associated with large projects that utilize available resources and then fold following the initial influx of workers, Chandler said.

A methanol industry might require large amounts of capital, he said, but so did trying to produce energy from vanishing fossil fuel resources.

The Sierra Club's Western Canada chapter said Thursday that Marchand's approach was like "a tremendous new light in a dark room."

Sierra spokesman Bob Nixon of Victoria said in an interview: "When one weighs renewable energy projects which are job intensive and require relatively low capital investment, to prestige-style, traditionally larger and larger dams and thermal plants, it clearly indicates that the current thinking of many energy planners is bankrupt.

Two sought in Moro case

ROME (UPI) — The chief examining magistrate investigating the kidnapping and assassination of former Premier Aldo Moro has issued two more arrest warrants, police said. The name of the two wanted persons were not disclosed, but police said they were connected with nine others so far charged in the March 16 Red Brigades kidnapping of Moro.

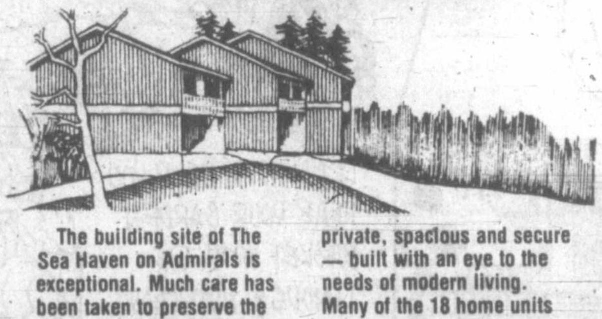
MUCH CARE HAS BEEN TAKEN TO PRESERVE THE ENVIRONMENT



The building site of The Sea Haven on Admirals is exceptional. Much care has been taken to preserve the environment and take advantage of the natural beauty — a setting of over four acres, spreading through trees and down across rock outcroppings, to within a stone's throw of the harbour.

The Sea Haven townhouse complex is a strikingly modern development — private, spacious and secure — built with an eye to the needs of modern living. Many of the 18 home units now for sale — with two or three bedrooms and several alternative floor plans — provide easy access to natural and professionally landscaped common areas. And many have a harbour view, where ships of all sizes may be observed through every season of the year.

Island boys' town man's dream

Meunier proof any criminal can be saved?

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

He has been paddled, he has been lashed, and he was chained to a wall by his neck.

He spent 17 months on death row at Kilby, Alabama, and did time with some of the most infamous criminals at 105 penal institions in Canada and the U.S.

Arthur Meunier is 53 years old. He was released on March 18, 1977 after spending 42 years behind bars, 24 of them in solitary confinement.

HE SAYS he has seen every rat hole and snakepit designed by society to incarcerate criminals.

But since coming out, he has met U.S. President Jimmy Carter, had lunch with Prime Minister Trudeau, several premiers and a string of mayors across Canada.

He says he is living proof that any criminal can be rehabilitated if someone takes the trouble to reach out to him.

SOMEONE GOT through to him in 1970. It was a 14-year-old boy who visited prisoners in U.S. federal institutions as part of a Christian ministry.

And today, Meunier says he is living for a dream which formed in his head shortly after he was "converted."

He wants to establish a Boys' Town on Vancouver Island. The idea came to him when he saw the famous Spencer Tracy movie about Father Flanigan's Boys' Town.

"I'm sure today that I've been kept alive for that purpose," he says.

AND CONSIDERING the course of his life, it's the next-best thing to a miracle that he is still alive.

In an interview in Victoria Thursday, Meunier told his story. He didn't hold back anything. He didn't try to embellish the story of his life.

He was born in Moncton, N.B., and was placed in a foster home at the age of three after his parents died in a boating accident.

HE SAYS HIS foster parents told him to steal and punished him when he was caught.

When he was 11 years old, he was caught stealing a toy watch and was given an 18-month suspended sentence. But when his foster parents refused to take him back, the court ordered him to serve his sentence.

FROM THAT moment on, he says, the pattern of his life was set. For the following 42 years, he would spend only 10 weeks "on the outside."

Arthur Meunier
. . . 42 years behind bars

He says he was scared to leave the closely-knit prison society and would commit petty crimes immediately following his releases and turn himself in just to get back into prison.

"As the years went by, I became filled with hatred for society and established a reputation for being one of the toughest prisoners."

WHEN HE WAS 35 years old and standing trial for an offence he committed inside a prison, he killed a sheriff in a courtroom.

He says he became so enraged when the sheriff lied to the court that he grabbed a chair and threw it at him. The sheriff collapsed and was dead.

Meunier was accused of first-degree murder and sentenced to die in the electric chair. For the next 17 months he was on death row at Kilby, Alabama, but the sentence was eventually commuted by the U.S. Supreme Court and he received a seven-year sentence for manslaughter.

"IT WAS proven in supreme court that the sheriff had died from a heart attack, not from the blow by the chair," Meunier says.

"But society got its revenge. For 31 months, I was chained to a wall by the neck. Once a day, I was given a piece of corn bread and some watery soup. There was no toilet in the cell. I had to do my toilet business on a piece of paper and hand it out through the bars," he says.

MEUNIER continued to drift from one penal institution to another.

"I've seen every rat hole and snakepit you can imagine. The claims that prisoners are mollycoddled is a myth. The penal system is cruel and not geared to rehabilitation," he says.

Meunier did time with some kingpins of the underworld. He spent several years in Alcatraz in the company of Bob Stroud, who became famous as the Birdman of Alcatraz. He did time with Fred Sobel, the Russian spy, Jimmy Hoffa and Vito Genovesi on whose life The Godfather was based.

IN 1963, at Kilby, he needed an operation to remove gallstones. Prison authorities refused to have him admitted to a hospital or to call in a doctor.

"Two fellow inmates operated on me with a razor blade and closed the wound with ordinary household thread." He has the scar to prove it.

Over the years, he says, he became bitter and filled with hatred. Revenge on society became his obsession.

"I STABBED an assistant warden, I once stole 40 pounds of cyanide to kill 285 prison officers. Fortunately, that plot was foiled.

"I lost complete contact with reality. I had never known love. All I knew was prison life and hatred."

And then, in 1970, a 14-year-old boy, a member of a church group which visited prisons regularly to talk to inmates, spoke to him.

"AT FIRST I was abusive, but the boy eventually got through to me and succeeded in making a Christian out of the most hardened criminal," Meunier says.

From then on, he says, his life changed. He began to study and got his associate-of-arts degree. He began preaching to his fellow prisoners.

HE SAYS THEY never ridiculed him for his conversion to Christianity, partly because he was known as one of the toughest characters, but also because they sensed that he wasn't a phoney.

In 1976, inmates from all federal US. penal institions declared him Father of the Year.

Seven years after he renounced his criminal ways, he was released. He had served every day of his last sentence. When the prison doors closed behind him, he walked into a world he didn't know.

FASHIONS were strange to him, prices seemed unreal; he had never been on an escalator and spent about an hour riding up and down the stairs in a department store.

One of his favorite ploys to get back into prison had been to write threatening letters to U.S. presidents. That assured him of a minimum sentence of five years.

The only president he had never threatened was Carter. When he was released from prison after serving 42 years behind bars, 24 of them in solitary confinement, his case attracted world-wide attention.

TELEVISION cameras recorded the last few hours of his life in jail. When he left prison, a free man after all that time, an invitation from Carter was waiting for him.

Back in Canada, Trudeau asked to meet with him. Since his release, Meunier has served on a royal commission probing into conditions in the federal penitentiaries.

"I still am a little frightened by freedom. I think you can tell, but I have met with so much love, friendliness and courtesy, I can hardly believe it."

AND MEUNIER is determined to fight for his dream—the establishment of a Boys' Town on Vancouver Island.

Next week, he expects to get the federal and provincial charters enabling him to start lining up funds for his project.

It is an ambitious plan. Meunier believes that eventually, costs will run into the millions, but a modest beginning would make him happy.

HE HOPES funds will come from grants, contributions and bequests. He will also sink the proceeds from a movie based on his life, which is to be made later this year, into the Boys' Town project.

And the purpose of such a project?

"I want to enable young people who have been rejected by society to get spiritul, academic and vocational training and, above all, I want them to find love and acceptance."

MEUNIER FEELS that it would have been easy to save him from a life of crime, degradation and agony 42 years ago when at the age of 11, he stole a toy watch.

"But there was no one to help me then," he says.

Drill halted in Greenland

COPENHAGEN (AP) — The Amoco group has stopped drilling for oil off the western coast of Greenland and has cancelled its concession effective the end of this year, Denmark's ministry for Greenland has announced.

Ministry chief Uffe Strandkjaer said several other of the 21 concession holders are expected to follow suit because of "very disappointing results."

Paring of the green

By PAUL De GROOT
Colonist reporter

There were piles of the green stuff, one impressive batch in a bucket, another piled on a table, and more in the hands of Sealand's employees.

It was Victoria Ald. Bob Wright's way to dramatizing to his employees at Sealand just how much of their money goes to government. Wright paid his employees their gross wages in $1 bills Friday, and then had them return the amounts withheld for income tax, Canada Pension Plan, and unemployment insurance, which would normally be automatically deducted from their paycheques.

One packet of 469 bills was rapidly trimmed by income tax—$111.40—$12 worth of unemployment insurance, and $12.90 for Canada Pension Plan, to become a svelte $323 bundle.

"It became evident that some of our people didn't realize they were paying their share of government taxes and overspending," Wright said. One employee commented recently that it was a good thing the company paid the employees' taxes, and that got Wright to wondering how he could dramatize the fact that taxes come out of the employees' pockets.

So he picked up his $7,500 payroll in $1 bills, prepared some signs (on which he paid five per cent provincial and 12 per cent federal taxes), and staged the demonstration to show his employees just how much money they hand over to government each time they pick up their pay packet.

Another large pile gave an idea of the corporate income taxes and property taxes paid by the company itself.

"It makes it more vivid," one of Wright's employees ruefully agreed.

"It's just like buying groceries," another said.

The difference, he noted, is that one has a certain amount of choice in buying groceries but taxes go up without any recourse.

"Nobody's complaining about paying for the cost of government," Wright said, when asked why he hadn't listed the services which employees get for their taxes.

"But when it gets to 45 per cent of the Gross National Product . . ."

As a Victoria alderman, Wright said he had to take some of the responsibility himself for government spending.

"But believe me, it is as frightening looking at it from the inside as from the outside."

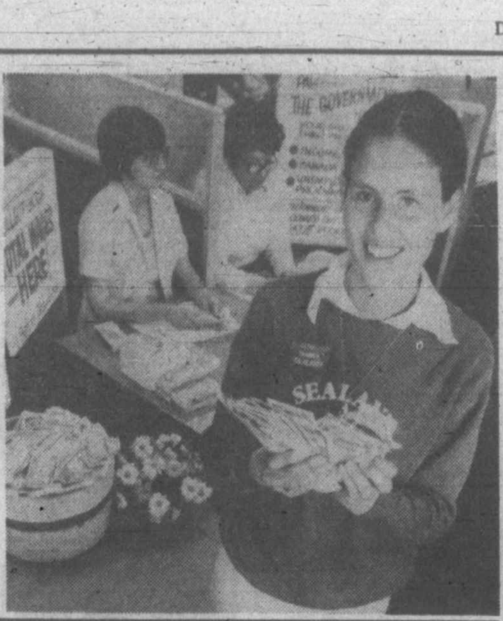
"We don't spend our own money foolishly, so we don't want the government to spend it foolishly either."



IT FELT good—for a while. Then Cathy Denny, an animal care supervisor at Sealand, had to pay the government its share of her income and it didn't feel so good any more.

GILLNETTERS ANGRY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fraser River gillnet fishermen have complained to the federal government about a closure of the commercial salmon fishery on the Fraser, saying that commercial trollers and sport fishermen are allowed to fish the same stocks in the Gulf of Georgia.

The Fraser River District Council of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union also told Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc they could not understand why a larger number of permits for the native Indian food fishery had been issued this year than in the past.

The council said it is concerned about the possibility of native Indians' fish finding its way into the commercial market and claims it has evidence of this happening.

"The Fraser River District Council demands that all must share in the conservation of salmon stocks and that the river remain open for the commercial gillnet fishery for at least one day per week during the season," a council spokesman said.

'We ate, slept and steered—we're exhausted'

Rough voyage all for friend

VANCOUVER (CP)—Rosemary Toms and Roger Johnson of Capetown, South Africa, spent six months on two oceans as a favor for a friend living here—so how was the fishing?

"Don't ask us about fishing, please," Toms said. "That's a sore point. We didn't catch one the whole time!"

Instead, the pair battled winds, freezing temperatures and rotting sails to steer themselves halfway round the world and deliver a 31-foot sloop, the Poudre d'Or, to their friend.

Waiting for them Monday when they arrived was Buddy Hulscher, who built the sloop, then arranged for his two friends to deliver it when he moved to West Vancouver from Capetown earlier this year.

The two said it had been no easy voyage.

"We ate and slept and steered—we're exhausted," said Toms, 31, who took a year's leave of absence from her job as an x-ray technician.

Their problems began just out of Capetown, when the engine broke down, and sails had to be relied on for the rest of the trip.

They said the sloop's nine sails took an enormous beating. The main sail was in tatters, while others were so rotted they could no longer be mended and patches were glued on. Temporary lashings held the Genoa sail.

James Bay group boycotting bank

To protest support by Canadian banks of totalitarian and racist regimes, the James Bay Residents' League has decided to withdraw its funds from the Bank of Montreal.

The decision not to do business with any chartered bank was taken at the league's last regular meeting a few weeks ago.

The funds, about $300, will be withdrawn this week and transferred to a credit union.

The move was proposed by James Hennebury, second vice-president of the community organization.

In an interview Thursday, Hennebury said it was a matter of conscience. The community group decided that it could no longer do business with any of the chartered banks that were supporting totalitarian regimes, such as that of Chile.

The banks also invested money in "racist countries" including South Africa, he said, and that was another reason why they shouldn't be supported by the Canadian public.

TV ads: improve or else

TORONTO (CP)—Federal Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve warned this week that the government would impose standards for television advertising if broadcasters did not improve advertising on their own.

Noting that a recent survey showed most Canadians found television advertising offensive, Mrs. Sauve told a meeting of Canadian and U.S. broadcasters it would be better if the industry tightened up its own advertising codes.

"If this doesn't happen and if public interest groups become more insistent, then the government will be called upon to step in," she said in a speech to the Canadian Association of Broadcasters and its American counterpart, the National Association of Broadcasters.

French ban in air ruled valid

OTTAWA (CP)—The Federal Court of Appeal has ruled that an Aug. 27, 1976, federal order limiting the use of French in Canadian air-space is valid.

"In my view, the fact that a language is official does not necessarily mean that it may be used under all circumstances," Mr. Justice Louis Pratte wrote in a judgment upholding the order.

The court ruled 3-to-0 against Association Des Gens de l'Air du Quebec, a Quebec aviation association which argued, among other things, that the federal government did not have the power to pass the order and that it was contrary to the Official Languages Act.

The court's ruling was made public Thursday. The Quebec group can seek to appeal it to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The orders officially prohibited the use of French at the busy Montreal-area airports of Dorval, Mirabel and St. Hubert. Bilingual communications are allowed at smaller Quebec airports, but only for visual flight, not instrument flight rules.

Gens de l'Air argued that the Official Languages Act made English and French equal and therefore French could be spoken by pilots and air controllers.

Wrote Justice Pratte:

"The fact that it was more dangerous to speak French in the air than English would be a circumstances that would justify treating the two languages differently."

His decision was supported by Justices Gerald Le Dain and G.M. Hyde, a deputy judge of the appeal court.

It is the second court defeat on the issue for the Gens de l'Air. Early last year, Mr. Justice Louis Marceau of the Federal Court trial division, said he could find no grounds for ruling the order invalid. Marceau is a former Quebec ombudsman.

The order was issued about two months after the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association went on strike to protest use of French over Quebec. That association said English was the international language of aviation and that use of French was dangerous.

A decision on whether the case will be appealed to the highest court will be made in one to two weeks, according to lawyer Guy Bertrand, who represents Gens de l'Air.

He said his clients were extremely disappointed and didn't know whether they should continue to pursue the fight through the justice system.

After the Marceau decision, Quebec Premier Rene Levesque promised government aid for the association to continue the court battle.

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Tom Okker, a 34-year-old Dutchman, turned the clock back 10 years Friday and hustled the highly-rated Guillermo Vilas out of the Wimbledon tennis championships with a dazzling display of volleys.

Okker crushed the Argentine left-hander 6-3, 6-4, 6-2—and it was as one-sided as it the scores indicated. Okker sped around the court much as he did in the 1960s when he first burst upon the world circuit to be nicknamed the Flying Dutchman.

"I haven't played so well for years," Okker said as he moved into the last 16. The 25-year-old Vilas was seeded No. 4.

After rain had blanked out Thursday's program the fans—around 35,000 of them—crammed into the All-England Club to see a fairly full day of tennis. Rain caused only brief stoppages this time.

Bjorn Borg of Sweden, seeking his third straight Wimbledon title, rolled past Peter McNamara of Australia 6-2, 6-2, 6-4 and reached the third round. Borg is one round behind his rivals because of the weather holdups.

Jimmy Connors of the United States, seeded No. 2 behind Borg, did not play Friday. Vitas Gerulaitis, the third seed, downed fellow American Sherwood Stewart 9-8, 6-0, 6-2 and advanced to the last 16.

Four other seeded players went through to the round of 16. Sandy Mayer of the U.S. eliminated Mark Edmondson of Australia 6-4, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, and Raul Ramirez of Mexico ousted Bob Frawley of Australia 6-4, 7-5, 6-3.

John Newcombe, three-time Wimbledon champion, defeated Phil Dent 6-1, 1-6, 6-4, 6-4, continuing his string of all-Australian duels. He defeated countrymen Dale Collings and Ross Case in the other rounds.

Still another Australian, 14th-seeded John Alexander, came from behind to beat Anand Amritraj, one of two Indian brothers, 5-7, 6-3, 7-5, 6-2.

American winners included Tom Gullikson, who swept Mike Machette aside 6-4, 6-4 6-2, and Tom Gorman, who ended Britain's title hopes by disposing of Mark Cox 4-6, 8-6, 8-6, 7-5.

With the tournament not yet at the halfway point, only 11 of the 16 original seeds in the men's draw still are in contention for the $34,200 first prize.

Vilas, with his flowing ground strokes, generous backswing and follow-through, appeared perfectly at ease in the first six games, as both held service. But then Okker suddenly sprang to life.

In five unbelievably one-sided games, the Dutchman won 20 points out of a possible 21 and went from 3-3 to win the first set and take a 2-0 lead in the second.

Briton Virginia Wade, the defending women's champion, pleased the partisan crowd by hitting her way past Lesley Bowrey of Australia 6-1, 6-4 in the second round.

Six-time singles champion Billie Jean King of the U.S. defeated Maria Pinterova of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-2.

Only seven of the first 53 NHL draft picks this year came from the QMJHL, and for the last seven drafts the count for the first two rounds is 111 for the Ontario major junior league, 90 for the Western Canada Hockey League and 29 for the Quebec league. Lack of size has been cited as one reason, and former QMJHL-president Bob Labelle says another is that "Too many players in this)eague try to prove themselves by fighting, and a lot can't take a jolt."...veteran Yvan Cournoyer is the golf champion of the Montreal Canadiens for the second time, a 79 winning him 1978 honors...Betty Stanhope Cole, who has lost only once in the event, is the Edmonton women's golf champion for the 19th time...senor Sam King is having an interesting weekend, getting reacquainted with Bill King of Oxford, England, a brother he hasn't seen since 1919...Toronto Maple Leafs, who raised the price of box and rail seats to $13.50 and the Reds to $11 last season, have been making refunds. McCovey

McCovey in 500-homer club

"It was more of a relief than a thrill to get it over with," Willie McCovey said Friday night after smashing the 500th home run of his major league career.

The 40-year old San Francisco first baseman became the 12th player in baseball history to reach the 500 mark when he drilled an 0-2 pitch off Atlanta's Jamie Easterly in the opening game of a twi-night doubleheader.

The homer, his seventh of the year, came in the second inning of a game the Giants lost 10-9, despite hitting four other homers, one a grand slam. San Francisco also dropped the second game 10-5.

"I was kind of anxious to get it behind me so we can concentrate on a more important thing, the pennant race," McCovey said.

He said that his 500th was not that great a thrill because, "It is not something spontaneous. This is something I've been aware of the last three years."

He said he wasn't certain when he hit the ball that it would carry out of the park.

"I just didn't realize what park I was in," he said. "I hit it pretty good, but the fact I hit it in the opposite direction I just wasn't sure until it went out."

He said the loss of the game somewhat tainted the accomplishment.

"Naturally, I'd feel a lot better about it had we hung on to win," he said.

Asked if he had any further goals, McCovey said, "I'll just take all I can get from here on out. I really expected to have 500 long before I hit it."

McCovey became the third player in Giants' history to hit at least 500 homers, although not all the first-baseman's clouts were hit for San Francisco. Mel Ott cracked 511 for the old New York Giants and McCovey's former teammate in San Francisco, Willie Mays, had 660 homers.

The 6-foot-4, 220-pound slugger from Mobile, Ala., has been one of the most feared hitters in the National League since his first day in the majors in 1959 when he went 4-for-4 off Robin Roberts of the Phillies at Seals Stadium in San Francisco.

After 13 seasons with the Giants, McCovey spent nearly three seasons with the Padres from 1974-76. He hit 52 of his homers in a San Diego uniform before being traded to Oakland near the end of the 1976 season, then returning to the Giants at the start of the 1977 season.

In other National League action, the slumping Cincinnati Reds dropped a doubleheader to the Dodgers, 5-2 and 5-3. Cincinnati fell into third place in the NL West, while the Dodgers take second, one-half game over the Reds and three games back of San Francisco.

In the American League, Baltimore Orioles edged Boston Red Sox 3-2; New York Yankees stunned Detroit Tigers 10-2 and Cleveland Indians blanked Toronto Blue Jays 3-0.

Picken moves to semi-finals

John Picken of Burnaby advanced to the semi-finals of the 80th British Columbia Open Friday, by coming from behind to defeat Roclan Maguire 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

Maguire, an unseeded but highly regarded Californian, appeared to become unnerved by the combination of Picken's calm and the highly partisan crowd.

Picken, 20, the only surviving Canadian in men's singles at the $15,000 Challengers Tournament, kept his cool and neatly put Maguire away with deadly backhands and superior finesse.

Picken's victory was received with a prolonged standing ovation that provoked Maguire into making a grossly obscene gesture for which he was reprimanded and warned that a repetition would result in disqualification from doubles play.

In other men's singles action top-seed Bill Lloyd of Australia advanced over Chip Fisher of Palo Alto, Calif. 7-6, 6-1, while second-seed Jorge Andrew, of Venezuela, was upset by seventh-seeded Bruce Kleege of La Jolla, Calif., 23-6, 7-5, 6-3.

In other men's doubles action, Richmond's Don McCormick, a former Victorian, teamed with Lars Elvstrom of Denmark to defeat Guy Fritz and Ted Williams, both of San Diego 5-7, 6-3, 6-4.

Crowd-pleasing 14-year-old Kate Brasher of London, England, advanced to women's singles semi-finals with an upset win over fourth-seeded Kate Glancy of Vancouver 6-3, 6-4.

Oldtimers even

Victoria Shamrock Oldtimers and their elderly counterparts from Nanaimo wheezed to an 8-8 tie Friday night in an exhibition lacrosse game at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Approximately 750 fans watched the Timbermen rally from 3-1 and 5-3 period deficits to finally catch up to the Shamrocks.

Ed Hayes played the entire game in goal for Nanaimo, turning aside 38 stops. Barry Forbes started in the Victoria nets but was relieved by George Grover after two periods. The Shamrock goalkeepers made 59 saves.

Mussels shellacked

GRAYS HARBOR, Wash.— Victoria Mussels absorbed their fourth consecutive Northwest League baseball defeat Friday night, bowing 8-1 to Grays Harbor Loggers.

Mussels' record at the bottom of the Northern Division slipped to 3-8, while Grays Harbor evened its slate to 5-5.

Ray Sachs pitched 8⅓ innings in gaining his first victory against one defeat. Victoria starter Dale Mahorcic, 0-1, took the loss. Sachs departed in the ninth inning, when Mussels got their run on three walks and a sacrifice fly.

WHA meets Wednesday

NEW YORK (CP) — The World Hockey Association, after being rebuffed for the second time by the National Hockey League concerning a possible merger, will hold its annual meeting Wednesday in New York, the league announced Friday.

Heading the agenda at the three-day meeting is the question of whether or not the Houston franchise will continue in the WHA. The question of signing under-age juniors will also be discussed.

The WHA's awards luncheon wll be held Thursday as will the announcement of the all-star team.

Betting hits high for Sandown harness meet

By JIM TANG

There is hope at Sandown Park that Friday may have been the turning point for the 57-day harness-racing meet, which ends on Sept.9.

It was the busiest of the 16 days with 1,323 fans setting a meet high by risking $88,966 at the mutuel windows.

It was only the fifth time that the daily handle has exceeded $80,000, but the first time it wasn't on a Saturday. The Friday total was almost $2,700 more than last Saturday and more than $14,000 ahead of the best previous Friday total. The total for the 16 days is $1,092,352.

"I think it may be starting to catch on," said the highly-encouraged Jim Keeling.

What happened on the racing strip certainly helped the wagering. Only once did a winner pay more than $10, but once again there were healthy Exactor returns to go along with formful racing and help prod mutuel action.

Highlighting the racing was the fifth Sandown victory for Joe Hudon's Lennies Choice, which won its first four Vancouver Island starts and then finished fourth, second and third before resuming winning ways.

The five-year-old gelding, an eight-time winner this year, took over from No Dill as the pacesetter and won the third race handily with Mr. Ming and Snagel moving up for place and show money but running out of ground.

Winning for the third time at the meet were Hazels Yankee, which proved best in the four-horse featured ninth race, and Adios Tee Maral, which has won three in a row.

Bethel Champ, Baroness Love, the consistent Flame Comet, Joe Blades and Marc Kimberly all had second Sandown victories.

Hazels Yankee, which broke in its previous two starts to finish far out of it, made good use of the No.1 post in the feature heat, cut to four runners when Yankee Mate and Cut the Deck were scratched. Driven as usual by Bob Boyd, the seven-year-old brown gelding looked sharp in marking up a 12th 1978 win and boosting this year's earnings to $15,605.

Bettors couldn't establish a real favorite, and the winner was a 7-2 outsider. Fort Tilden and Dusty Tex went off as co-favorites at 8-5 and Excel B Mac eound up as a 2-1 also ran. The biggest surprise the race produced was the $35.80 Exactor return.

BREAKAGE: Marc Kimberly, at $21.60 the only outsider to win, was part of the day's two $103 Exactor returns. The other came in the fifth race when Senga Nola finished closest to the well-regarded Joe Blades...Keith Linton, perhaps yielding to the warm weather, shaved off his beard earlier in the week, and comments that he looked seven years younger may keep his razor busy for the duration...Hans Ericsson was fined $25 and given three demerit poimts for backing off while driving Little Duster last week and Dave Sibiga got $25 and one demerit point for failure to come up into position and on the gate while driving Desert Jewel on the same day.

Eaton Langley champion

LANGLEY — Ron Eaton of Tacoma took over from Bill Schmitt of Reading, Calif., in the 22nd lap Friday night and went on to win the Langley 100 division of the Winston Grand National stock car series.

The series continues Sunday at Evergreen Speedway in Monroe, Wash. and concludes Tuesday in Portland.

City bowlers earn provincial berths

Pairs from Victoria West and Burnside went through their sections undefeated this week, to earn two Victoria zone berths in next weekend's B.C. men's championships.

Syd Smithurst and Jack McMillan of Burnside defeated Darrell Prezeau and Bill Van Druten of Victoria 22-17 Friday to complete their week-long sweep at Victoria West greens.

The winning pairs join six other teams in the provincials, opening July 7 at Victoria West and continuing through the weekend.

In another Friday event, Rae Martin and Sally McKnight of Victoria West edged Marjorie Speed and Joan Turner of Canadian Pacific to capture the Rose Bowl ladies' singles competition at the CP greens.

Ethel McFarlane and Hazel Hall of Lakehill defeated Madge Mantell and Vi Marshall of Oak Bay 17-12 in the 'B' event final.

Lions release running back

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League said Friday they have released import running back Bill Deutsh, 25, of North Dakota.

Doby

Doby manages White Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — Larry Doby, the first black to play in the American League, became the second black manager in major league baseball Friday when he was named to replace Bob Lemon as manager of Chicago White Sox.

In making the announcement, owner Bill Veeck said there was "an amicable and mutually agreed on" parting of the ways.

The first black manager in the majors was Frank Robinson, who managed Cleveland Indians in 1975 and 1976 before being fired in 1977 by the American League club.

Lemon, a member of the baseball Hall of Fame, was in his second year with Chicago. The team finished third last year with a 90-72 record, but is mired in fifth place in the West Division with a 34-40 record.

Veeck said Lemon would remain as the Sox' West Coast scout.

Doby played from 1947 to 1959. He signed his first major league contract with Veeck when Veeck was president of the Indians.

When Doby quit as a player in 1959, he had played on six consecutive all-star games and in two World Series.

Doby scouted for Montreal Expos in 1969, was a minor league instructor for that team in 1970, and then coached for Montreal from 1971 to 1973.

He coached for Cleveland in 1974, then returned as a coach for Montreal in 1976.

He has been a coach and batting instructor for the White Sox.

Heck, Fenske drafted by IHL

It may be small consolation but two members of Victoria Cougars passed over in the National Hockey League's amateur draft may have another avenue open to the big time.

Defenceman Leroy Heck and centre Dennis Fenske were among 25 Western Canada Hockey League players chosen by the International Hockey League this week.

Heck went to Saginaw Gears in the first round, while Fenske was chosen by the same club in the sixth round.

The only other first-round pick from Western Canada was Darryl Sutter of Lethbridge Broncos, picked by Flint.

Other WCHL players chosen included Carl Van Harrewyn of New Westminster Bruins, who went to Port Huron in the fourth round, Richard Martens of New Westminster, nabbed by Milwaukee in the fourth round and the Bruins' Randy Betty, taken by Flint in round eight.

The draft was conducted under new IHL-NHL guidelines, which allows an IHL team to draft players that were taken in the National Hockey League draft last month starting with the NHL's 10th round.

However, players drafted in the first nine rounds by NHL teams in Montreal may be assigned to the IHL by their respective NHL affiliated clubs.

Of the players drafted, 23 were from the OMJHL, 25 from the Western Canada league and 13 from the Quebec Major Junior League.

No.1 choice was Peter Luksa from Windsor Spitfires of the Ontario Major Junior League, who went to Grand Rapids.

"Y" wins

PEI won the first game 15-8 but Victoria, the B.C. champion, came back with 15-10, 15-9 and 15-12 triumphs.

WLA clubs rest

No games are slated until Tuesday night when Coquitlam Adanacs, well-rested from a win this week, meet the Burrards in Vancouver.

Adanacs, last in the league, surprised New Westminster Salmonbellies Thursday with a 17-14 win. Dave Durante, who leaves today to join Team Canada at the world field lacrosse championships in England, did most of the damage, scoring five goals and adding three assists.

Adanacs moved to within seven points of New Westminster with the triumph. Victoria Shamrocks remain on top with 21 points, and see their next action Wednesday against Vancouver at Memorial Arena.

Watson, Fezler tied

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Defending champion Tom Watson carded three straight birdies to seize the lead, then bogeyed the 17th hole and fell into a tie for first place with Forrest Fezler on Friday in the rain-plagued second round of the Western Open golf tournament.

Fezler shot a 68 and Watson a 69, with both finishing the day at four-under-par 140. One stroke back were 1975 Western champion Hale Irwin, Bill Rogers and Andy Bean, who is seeking his third victory in five weeks.

Cesar Sanudo, who shot a 67 Thursday and led by one stroke, struggled to a 76 and was three strokes off the pace in a group of seven at 143.

Eight other were at 142, including Lon Nielsen, Marty Fleckman, Craig Stadler, Wally Armstrong, Dave Eichelberger, Charles Coody, Tom Purtzer and Allen Miller, who shot a 74 after tying Bob Gilder for second place with 68 after Thursday's play. Gilder had a 75 for a 143 total.

Rain forced delays three times Friday for a total of nearly three hours. Five threesomes still were on the soggy, 7,088-yard Butler National course when play was halted at 6:24 p.m. PDT. None of the golfers still on the course when play was halted are among the leaders. They will complete their rounds early today.

It was a day in which several golfers grabbed the lead but could not hold it.

When Watson, the top money-winner on this year's tour, strung together birdies on the 10th, 11th and 12th holes for a two-shot advantage at five-under-par, then reeled off four pars in a row, he appeared headed for sole possession of the top spot in a bid for his fourth victory of the year.

But Fezler, who holed a 35-foot putt for an eagle on the par five, 483-yard 12th hole, dropped a 25-footer for a birdie on 16 and ended in a tie after Watson's bogey at 17.

"Today I missed a lot of greens but I putted real well and made up for it," said Fezler, whose only tour victory was in the 1974 Southern Open. "Every time I had a break today I seemed to take advantage of it."

Fezler had an erratic round of five birdies, one eagle, three bogeys and nine pars.

At various times during the second round, the lead was held by Sanudo, who once was seven-under-par but had a triple bogey on a par three hole where he put his ball in the water twice; Fleckman; Gilder; Bean; Terry Diehl; Irwin; Rod Curl; Eichelberger, and Purtzer.

Among those who failed to make the cut of 149 for the final two rounds were U.S. Open champion Andy North, Tom Weiskopf, and last week's Canadian Open winner, Bruce Lietzke.

Islanders selected to national squads

Gerald Kazanowski of Nanaimo and Craig Higgins of Victoria join female counterparts Karen McComber and Luanne Hebb on the 12-member squads.

Kazanowski, who will attend University of Victoria this fall, led Nanaimo Islanders to the B.C. junior high championship in 1978, while Higgins was a starting guard for UVic Vikings in his freshman season, helping UVic to the Canada West title. Higgins is a graduate of Oak Bay Secondary.

Miss McComber played for Reynolds Roadrunners in the Greater Victoria high school girls league the past season and Miss Hebb helped UVic Vikettes to their third consecutive unbeaten Canada West campaign.

Stampeders make trades

CALGARY (CP) — Tackle Mark Percelli and defensive back Andre Johnson have been traded to Ottawa Rough Riders, the Calgary Stampeders announced Friday.

Stampeders also cut running back Bobby Joe Easter, tight end-linebacker Mel McGowann and wide receiver Tim Gillespie.

Earlier, Toronto Argonauts announced a straight player swap with Calgary, sending import wide receiver Kelvin Kirk to the Stampeders in exchange for homebrew Brian Gervais.

Kirk, from the University of Denver, caught 32 passes for 577 yards and three touchdowns last year, his first in the Canadian Football League.

Brentwood crews win in two of three races

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (AP) — The Bulgarian national team, making its first appearance at the Henley Royal Regatta, served notice on British and Unitged States rivals Friday it intends to take home four of Henley's major trophies.

In the only heat raced thus far in the Grand Challenge Cup, the Bulgarians rowed to a comfortable 1¼-length win over the British national heavyweights in a time of six minutes, 31 seconds. That's 15 seconds faster than anyone else has negotiated the one mile, 550-yard River Thames course this week.

"We don't have any excuses," British coach Chris Blackwall said. "They just went like hell."

Syracuse University's varsity heavyweights meet the Bulgarians in today's semi-final and it shapes up as the toughest race of the season for the Orangemen, U.S. Intercollegiate Rowing Association champions.

The other Grand semi-final is an all-American clash between the University of Washington, which beat the British national eight to win the Grand last year, and Northeastern University.

The final of the Grand climaxes regatta week and, along with the finals of Henley's 12 other events, comes Sunday.

Brentwood College of Mill Bay reached the third round of the Wyfold Challenge Cup, leading the Eton Excelsior boat club of England by almost two boat lengths at the finish line with a time of 7:23 in the second round of the event for coxless fours.

The Brentwood crew in the Princess Elizabeth Challenge Cup, also had an easy victory by some four boat lengths over Emanuel School of England.

Another Brentwood crew, in the Thames Challenge Cup for eights, lost by two boat lengths to Northeastern University of the U.S.

Eight U.S. boats entered Friday's second round of the Ladies' Challenge Plate for heavyweights and the Thames Challenge Cup in which most entries are lightweights, and six crews emerged unscathed.

The Bulgarians beat a Potomac Boat Club coxed four in the Prince Philip Challenge Cup Friday and look a cinch for the trophy. They enjoyed a walkover in the Stewards Challenge Cup for fours, another trophy they will take home, and their powerful single sculler, Mintcho Nikolov, ranked ninth in the world, is challenging for the Diamond Sculls.

Colwood topples leaders

Host Royal Colwood upset league-leading Uplands 4½-1½ Friday in one of three Vancouver Island Senior Golf League meetings.

Fred Cowan and Mickey Bartkow won their matches and second-place Colwood captured both best-ball competitions in moving to 18½ points, 1½ points behind the first-place team.

Meanwhile, Glen Meadows moved within three points of the leaders with a 4-2 decision over Victoria. The winners upped their total to 17 points, while Victoria is fourth in league standings with 13½.

Last-place Cedar Hill gained ground on Gorge Vale by dumping the fifth-place visitors 4-2. Cedar Hill, with 9½ points, is two back of Gorge Vale.

GORGE VALE 2, CEDAR HILL 4
Harvey Anderson lost to Lionel Miller 3 and 2; Fred Barnes halved with Ron McInnes. Cedar Hill won best ball.

UPLANDS 1½, ROYAL COLWOOD 4½
Chet Neilson lost to Mickey Bartkow 4 and 3; Rip Reprasse defeated Art Bryant 1 up. Colwood won best ball.

VICTORIA 2, GLEN MEADOWS 4
Brian Hunnings defeated George Sherriff 5 and 4; George Bigelow lost to Ron Shearer 2 and 1. Victoria won best ball.
Bill Thompson lost to Jim Richards 3 and 2; B. Jernberg lost to Terry Whittaker 5 and 4. Glen Meadows won best ball.

The Gorge Hotel catcher had a league-leading 21 hits in his first 47 trips to the plate and with a .447 average held a big lead over teammate Gary Brooke at the midway point in the 32-game schedule.

The Farmers' duo of Wayne Krimmer and Terry Painter lead the pitching. Krimmer, 7-2, had the most wins in the first half and was third in earned-run-average at 2.33 while Painter, 6-2, topped the league with a 1.28 ERA and 77 strikeouts.

Rick Cook posted a 5-1 record for Gorge and teammate Mike Squire had an ERA of 2.00.

Brian McLean Talks About New Car & Truck Specials

Why is this a good time to buy? Because we are in a "buyers" market due to high inventories and consequently lower prices.

Right now we are probably at our "peak" for availability of 1978 models. With 327 vehicles in stock and another 165 on the way that's a total of 492 cars and trucks for you to choose from!

Also, we've had a real good year so far on both new and used sales and to keep up our volume we'll give you a very good price on a new vehicle and as an extra bonus an attractive allowance for your trade.

So come in today and take advantage of us. Remember — it's a "buyers" market.

Life ban over for Trognitz

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Willie Trognitz, banished for life last year from the International Hockey League for an attack on another player, was reinstated Friday.

The reversal by IHL commissioner William Beagan cleared the way for Trognitz to open the season Oct. 20 with Grand Rapids Owls.

Beagan said his decision did not mean he had changed his view of the Oct. 29 stick-swinging incident that led to the suspension. He said he would probably do the same thing over again.

Trognitz was playing for the Dayton Owls, which later moved to Grand Rapids, when he cracked Port Huron Flags player Archie Henderson in the forehead with a hockey stick during a brawl on the ice.

Henderson, a former Victoria Cougar, was not seriously injured and recently signed a contract with Washington Capitals of the National Hockey League.

Qualifying format changed

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — The Royal Canadian Golf Association announced Friday it has adopted a new format for amateurs to qualify for next year's Canadian Open golf championship.

The RCGA said that the four amateur qualifiers will be selected on the basis of their performances at this year's Canadian amateur championships in Laval-sur-le-Lac, Que., Aug. 23-26.

The Canadian amateur champion will be exempt as will the next three low Canadian finishers. In the event of a tie for the low three Canadians, a playoff will be held immediately following the Canadian amateur to determine the three exemptions.

Argo tackle sidelined

TORONTO (CP) — Mike Wilson, the Toronto Argonauts giant offensive tackle who threatened at one point this year to sit out the season if the Canadian Football League team didn't give him his release, is gone for the duration of the 1978 schedule.

Wilson, a six-foot-six, 280-pounder from the University of Georgia, had his right knee operated on Friday to repair ligaments damaged in Thursday night's 16-11 exhibition victory over Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

He sat out most of the training camp, protesting Argos refusal to let him out of his multi-year contract to join Cincinnati Bengals of the National Football League.

England takes advantage

LEEDS, England (Reuter) — England pace bowler Bob Willis took two wickets in successive balls to snatch the advantage away from Pakistan in the rain-hit final cricket test at Headingly Friday.

That advantage may not mean much, however.

Like Thursday playing time on the second day was halved because of rain and by the close Pakistan's first innings had only advanced to 153 for three.

Orr set for Hawk training camp

Orr

. . . skating slowed

NEW YORK (AP) — One sight regrettably missing from National Hockey League games the last two seasons was that of Bobby Orr streaking down the ice. But there's an outside chance he may be able to make a comeback next season.

"I can't skate as well or as fast or as smoothly as I once did; I don't expect to," said Orr in a telephone interview from his office in Chicago, where he is an assistant to Black Hawks coach Bob Pulford. "But I would like to play again very much and I intend trying in training camp."

That comes as good news to hockey followers of the only defenceman to have scored 100 points in a season and the winner of The Norris Trophy eight straight times (1968-1975) as the best defenceman in the game.

Orr is only 30 but he has missed the last two seasons with recurrences of bothersome knee injuries. Orr says he's fully recovered from his sixth knee operation, which sidelined him for all of the 1977-78 campaign.

"I've been working out in the gym, using bicycles, weights, and the legs have reacted well. I've kept my weight steady and I've done a bit of skating. I'll really test it beginning in August at a hockey school I work at with Tony Esposito and Lou Angotti.

"There's not been much skating, especially like in a game, so I'll just have to wait and see what shape I am in."

Orr feels that his oft-injured knees may force a change in the wide-open style he made famous.

I'll probably have to play more of a defensive game, stay back quite a bit, especially in Bob's system:

"I haven't played in a system like it but because of my physical situation I'll probably have to be more defensive. I may not have a choice."

After appearing in just 10 games for Boston in 1975-76, Orr signed a multi-million-dollar deal with the the Hawks, who gambled that he would be able to play. His on-ice contributions to the club, just 20 games, have amounted to four goals and 19 assists.

But he has been an integral part of the Hawks' resurgence, working as an assistant coach and part-time scout.

"The opportunity to stay close to hockey has been great. I love the game and I'd like to play again but at least I've been able to work for the team the last two seasons."

Vachon move stalled

DETROIT (AP) — It could be the end of July before a deal can be worked out that will bring star goalkeeper Rogie Vachon from Los Angeles Kings to Detroit Red Wings, Detroit general manager Ted Lindsay says.

Vachon became a free agent in May but any team which signs him will have to compensate the Kings.

Under National Hockey League rules, if Detroit and Los Angeles can't come to terms, Vachon could still sign and the compensation would be settled by an arbitrator.

But Lindsay said Thursday that Detroit would not sign Vachon unless an agreement is reached.

There have been reports that Vachon, 32, has already consented to the basic terms of a five-year, $1.5 million contract with Detroit.

Lindsay said he has been talking about a deal since May with Kings owner Jack Kent Cooke.

"He's got a fine product so naturally, he's going to get the most he can," Lindsay said, "and you wouldn't respect him as a businessman if he didn't."

But Lindsay is confident Detroit will get Vachon.

"I don't see why not . . . but I don't believe anything until I've got the guy in uniform and I have him in my dressing room."

Detroit is also interested in the Kings' Butch Goring, another free agent, but Lindsay is not as confident there.

"That remains to be seen," he said. "He's got about seven clubs that are after him."

NBA deal shaky

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The operator of the Sports Arena said Friday that a major stumbling block has developed to moving Buffalo Braves professional basketball team to San Diego.

Vancouver native Peter Graham said six changes, including one which "alters the spirit," were made in the contract by management of the National Basketball Association team.

The tentativee agreement reached Thursday in Los Angeles with lawyers for Graham, Braves owner John Y. Brown and Boston Celtics' owner Irv Levin, calls for transferring the Boston franchise to San Diego and the Braves to Boston. NBA directors plan to take it up next Friday in Chicago.

Although he declined to say what snags developed, Graham called it "funny . . . funny pathetic."

"Here we've got this 18-year lease with these great big millionaires and they're quibbling about $20 here and $20 there."

The problem, he said, evolved after Levin became involved in negotiations with Brown. Said Graham of the talks: "At one point, I said to Brown, 'Listen, John Y., one more change out of you and you'll be spending the winter in Buffalo.' "

Provincial COURT

A preliminary hearing in a charge of second-degree murder against a 40-year-old casual farm laborer was set Friday in Victoria provincial court.

Avtar Singh Gill, no fixed address, is charged in the stabbing death Monday of 55-year-old Joseph Pelkey of the West Saanich Indian Reserve. The incident allegedly occurred in a farm field in Central Saanich.

Gill, who spoke no English and needed an interpreter on his first two appearances before Judge William Ostler this week, was represented by lawyer Tim Singh of Duncan.

Singh agreed to a preliminary hearing date of Sept. 21.

Ostler called it "grossly insulting conduct" before sentencing a 27-year-old man to one month in jail for two counts of indecent exposure.

Brian Robert Shaw, 1235 Balmoral, pleaded guilty to the two charges and was given the concurrent sentences of one month each.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court Shaw asked a woman for a ride in the 700-block Esquimalt Road at about 8:30 p.m. Monday and, after he was refused, exposed himself to her.

Later, Laughton said, Shaw did the same thing in front of two others at 1116 Colville Road and was arrested a short time later by Esquimalt police.

Legal-aid lawyer Brian MacKenzie said Shaw had been drinking that evening.

A 24-year-old was fined a total of $225 after pleading guilty to filing false claims for unemployment insurance benefits.

Dennis Boylan, 2610 Graham, pleaded guilty to the three counts and was fined $75 on each.

Crown counsel Harold Turnham said Boylan claimed he wasn't working when he actually earned $744 during the period in question while working for Imperial Building Supplies.

Turnham said the $561 Boylan was overpaid had been paid back.

Ostler granted the release of a 32-year-old man on conditions that he not be alone with anyone under 17 years of age except his own child.

The release was granted following a bail hearing for Gerald Patrick Rushford, 63 Kingham Place, who is charged with three counts of indecent assault and two counts each of buggery, gross indecency and assault causing bodily harm.

Rushford was remanded to July 12 for psychiatric assessment and election of trial method.

Roads, then plans for Akamina

Environmentalists question wilderness-area priorities

By STEPHEN HUME
Colonist reporter

The B.C. Forest Service has not prepared a comprehensive harvesting plan for logging the Akamina-Kishenina wilderness, although construction of logging roads into the region will begin in late July or early August, an official in the forest service's resource planning division says.

A plan is underway, but it likely won't be completed by the time roadbuilding starts in the next two months, he said.

Despite the fact that no plan had been prepared, logging in the controversial region was announced in May by the cabinet-level Environment and Land Use Committee, chaired by Environment Minister James Nielsen.

A comprehensive harvesting plan was important, according to foresters interviewed on Friday, because it would identify problems associated with wildlife, erosion, soil stability and quality, slope of the land, water quality, fisheries, scenic resources, recreation, and merchantibility and quality of timber.

The Environment and Land Use Committee said in May that a mountain pine beetle infestation in one section of the wilderness required salvage logging, but it was later learned that the infestation was based on federal studies of the wrong forest.

The decision to go ahead with logging in the wilderness without the benefit of a comprehensive project assessment has outraged B.C. environmentalists, who maintain that the provincial government is pushing the logging project to set the stage for mineral development.

"That's not right, that's not right at all," Committee for Responsible Forest Legislation spokesman Paul George of Victoria said Friday in an interview.

"The harvesting plans should be in before the roads are constructed. This government makes a decision beforehand, then tries to placate the public. It's all window dressing, that's pretty obvious."

The Akamina-Kishenina wilderness has been heavily leased for petroleum and mineral exploration to mining companies, including Shell Canada and Crowsnest Industries, a subsidiary of Shell Resources Ltd.

The region adjoins Waterton Lakes National Park in Alberta and Glacier National Park in Montana.

Major conservation groups opposed to logging in the wilderness include the Canadian National and Provincial Parks Association, the Alberta Wilderness Association, the Canadian Society of Enviromental Biologists and the Sierra Club.

Environmentalists in the U.S. and Canada warn that roadbuilding and logging would ruin wildlife habitat and affect the quality of creeks draining into the North Fork Flathead River, part of the U.S. wild and scenic rivers preservation system.

Sierra Club spokesman Bob Nixon of Victoria said in an interview that the provincial government should carry out a public assessment and review of all proposed projects for the Akamina-Kishenina.

Nixon said it was clear that the provincial cabinet had made a decision behind closed doors to log in the Akamina-Kishenina, and that the decision was based on incomplete and innacurate information.

He said guidelines prepared by the federal environmental assessment panel name four steps to proper environmental assessment of a project.

Applied to the Akamina-Kishenina valley, the four steps are the following:

● The initiator, in this case the forest service, should be required to accept full responsibility for eliminating adverse environmental impact which may result from the proposed project.

● The proposed project must be reviewed in terms of local, regional and provincial needs, allowing for social, economic and environmental considerations.

● The forest service should describe alternative means of satisfying its harvesting requirements, including the alternative of not salvaging timber at all, or salvaging infested timber outside the Akamina, in sufficient detail to allow both the public and the government to compare the costs, benefits and environmental risks.

● The forest service should describe how its proposed logging project may stimulate or result in future development in the Akamina-Kishenina valley that could have an adverse impact on the environment.

The Akamina-Kishenina was named a recreational reserve in 1956, but was recently removed from reserve status, after nearly 50 years of calls to name it a national park.

The Colonist reported in June that an internal provincial government policy paper said the wilderness may be developed in the future for logging and gas exploration, despite public assurances from the government that some of it would be protected.

Responding to questions in the Legislature on June 22, Nielsen said the government had no plans to cancel proposed logging in the Akamina-Kishenina.

It's the real thing! Imagine real leather: the touch, the texture, even the smell! We've taken a great idea from Cadillac and Lincoln in designing this affordable luxury seating. Seat and back cushions and bolster arms are top upholstered in rich genuine leather, for long-wearing luxurious pleasure. Non-wear areas such as outside back and side panels are covered in fine matching vinyl, so carefully and artfully matched it is difficult to know where leather ends and vinyl begins. Come experience it!

Revised list covers Vancouver Island

Kingfish weigh-in sites ready for vacation fishing

With school holidays started families will be taking vacations on Vancouver Island ... and in this fish happy area a vacation usually means some fishing.

Wherever an angler fishes on Vancouver Island there is a handy spot to enter the fish into The Daily Colonist King Fisherman Contest.

Some 200 marinas, resorts, service stations and other spots are set to weigh-in the fish and also to take subscriptions to the Colonist.

An angler doesn't have to be a subscriber to enter a five-pound or heavier salmon or a one-pound or heavier trout or small-mouth bass from a lake, but only subscribers get the big merchandise prizes, like the CP Air trip for two to Fiji, so it pays to be a subscriber. If the subscription is ordered before the angler goes fishing the entry counts as from a subscriber.

Weigh-in stations are all marked by the display of the colorful King Fisherman Contest poster. Contest continues until Oct. 29, with prizes and Expert Crests each month and contest-long trophies and big prizes at the end of the contest. Actually, each fish entered gets two chances to win — during the month it was entered and at the end of the contest.

Here are the weigh-in stations:

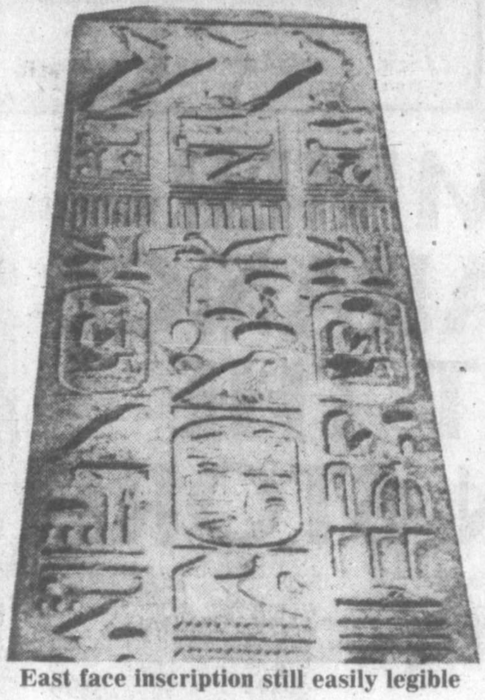
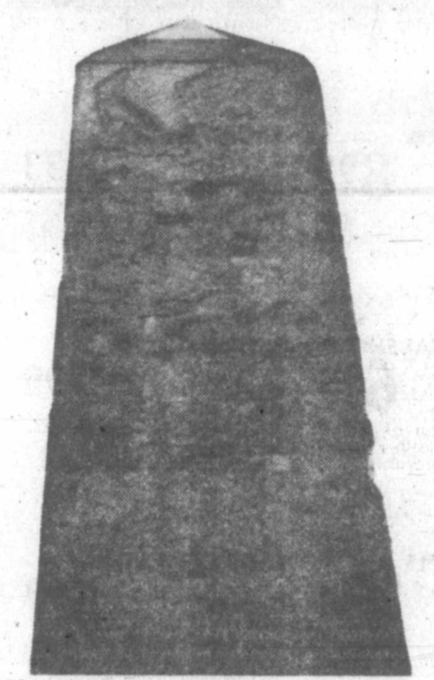
Chemicals in air carried by wind hit environment



East face inscription still easily legible



Chemicals have obliterated west face

Needle cited as example

A 3,500-year-old defaced monument in New York City was recently cited by the United Nations Environment Liaison Centre as an example of what destructive modern chemicals can do.

The centre, based in Nairobi, Kenya said this month that Cleopatra's Needle was sent from Egypt to New York in the 1890s, but the inscription on the west face has been destroyed by chemicals in the city's air, carried by prevailing westerly winds.

The inscription on the east face is still legible.

"Ninety years in New York has done more damage to the stone than 3,500 years in Egypt," the centre said in a news release.

"Thirty thousand chemicals are now commercially produced and several hundred more are being put onto the market and into the environment each year.

"The long-term effects of chemicals in the environment are still largely unknown."

Tale of a tiger

The shirt will be an antique some day. Mrs. Pierce, a member of the first class of students at Tolmie school, in 1912, held the Tolmie Tigers T-shirt for Robie Durance, a member of the last class of students to graduate from the school, which closed for good Friday, a victim of declining enrolment.

MURDERS, NOISE HIT STORES

VANCOUVER (CP) — The recent murders of two persons during convenience store holdups and noise caused by late-night customers have prompted a unanimous decision of city council's community services committee to recommend closing late-night corner grocery stores at midnight.

Committee chairman Harry Rankin said noise caused by customers disturbed sleeping people in nearby residential areas.

Rankin said that the earlier closing hours will not hurt the stores financially.

No particular store will lose business to the others because they will all be forced to close at the same time, he said.

However, Dave Boyer, district manager of 7-Eleven Food Stores Ltd., disagreed with Rankin.

"We do close to 40 per cent of our business between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.," he said.

The early closures will mean a serious loss of service to customers, he said.

There are at least nine stores in Vancouver that will be affected by the new proposal.

Boyer said closing the stores at midnight will have little effect on noise levels because most of his firm's stores are on busy intersections.

There is a similar noise problem with 24-hour service stations, he said.

Boyer said the committee's decision would have little effect on the murder rate because most of the recent murders occured before midnight.

Erik DeSmet, 25, was shot at 11:30 p.m. June 14 during a holdup in a Mac's convenience store on Denman Street.

Robert Jealous, 27, a part-time clerk at a 7-Eleven store on Main Street, was found shot to death May 4 about 5 a.m. The store had been robbed.

The controversy started with residents' complaints of noise at a Mac's store on Denman Street but the issue quickly escalated to all convenience stores.

Order for deportation stayed against tots

VANCOUVER (CP) — The immigration department has stayed a deportation order against three children from Fiji but their mother eventually will have to leave Canada.

Dorothy and Paul Polson have offered to adopt Mary Brectefield's children, aged 8, 9 and 10, if she has to leave Canada.

Following an immigration appeal board ruling that the children must leave the country, Brectefield, 32, appeared Thursday before immigration officials to show that arrangements had been made for all four to leave the country.

However, officials decided that none of the four has to leave, pending a Federal Appeal Court decision on the children's fate.

Wally Beck, Brectefield's lawyer, filed a notice of motion Wednesday with the court asking for leave to appeal the immigration appeal board ruling on the children.

Jim Cowley, program specialist at Canada Immigration, said Thursday that the department is allowing Brectefield to stay until the courts have determined whether the children will be allowed to stay in Canada, but she will have to go eventually.

Beck agreed that Brectefield will have to leave the country but said he hopes Immigration Minister Bud Cullen will issue a permit allowing her to return almost immediately.

If the permit was granted, she could go to nearby Bellingham, Wash., then come back into Canada, Beck said.

Brectefield came to Canada in 1975 under a 28-day visitors' visa to visit her four children who were living with their father, Hassan Raza, and his wife.

Brectefield and Raza were married in a Moslem ceremony that has no legal standing.

Raza, his legal wife, and Brectefield's oldest child returned to Fiji, but she had moved in with the Polsons, who had helped her get legal custody of the children.

Vander Zalm suing Times over cartoon

Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm filed a writ in the B.C. Supreme Court registry office in Victoria Friday alleging the Victoria Times libelled him in a cartoon published June 22.

The writ, filed on Vander Zalm's behalf by Victoria lawyer Rodney Taylor, names Times Publishers, a division of F.P. Publications (Western) Ltd., 2621 Douglas, and publisher Stuart Underhill, editor Barbara McLintock and cartoonist Robert Bierman as defendants.

In the statement of claim, Vander Zalm charged that the defendants "falsely and maliciously printed and published . . . the cartoon."

He said the cartoon "purports to be a likeness of the plaintiff and was so understood by members of the public."

The writ stated that the defendants "meant and were understood to mean that the plaintiff is a person of cruel and sadistic nature who enjoys inflicting suffering and torture on helpless beings who cannot protect themselves.

"Further by the said cartoon and the said words the defendants meant and were understood to mean that the plaintiff was not a fit and proper person to be minister of human resources of the government of the province of British Columbia and that he discharged the duties of his office in a cruel and inhumane manner."

In claiming damages, costs and any other action the Supreme Court may deem appropriate, Vander Zalm said he had been "seriously injured in his character, credit and reputation and in the way of his office and has been brought into public scandal, odium and contempt."

The writ of summons must be answered within seven days or judgment may be taken against the defendants without notice.

'It takes three or four to get a handle on it'

By time parents learn child-raising they quit

A slightly different perspective on child-raising was presented by Al Mollberg, regional manager for the human resources ministry, at a meeting of the Arbutus Crafts Association recently.

"The first child has a tough job training a set of inexperienced parents," Mollberg said. "It takes us three or four children to get a handle on it, and by then we've quit."

"What amazes me is that children do live through this . . . and I'm just talking about the normal family, not the family with special problems."

Mollberg went on to comment that foster homes were once the only resource available to social workers. Group homes and treatment centres were brought in later, but now social workers are going back to foster homes because "the best place for care is in the child's own home and neighborhood, or a good substitute for it."

McCarthy's smile blitz held up

Reporter's Notebook

Tourism minister Grace McCarthy launched her super-smile campaign two weeks ago but she must have expected a super-human effort from the post office.

Literature for the province-wide campaign, which began June 19, was mailed on June 27!

However, on the positive side of the super-smile campaign, the buttons, which read "British Columbia has a SUPER SMILE for you!" can be obtained in French, German, Hebrew, Dutch, Portuguese, Spanish, Russian, Swedish, Italian, Chinese, Japanese, Danish and Greek—as well as English, of course.

It's not true the German one says "You WILL smile" or that the Hebrew one says "We have such a smile for you."

Three Beaver Lake beauties are featured in the July Playboy, but don't expect to run to the nearest store and get a peek.

That is, unless you happen to be in Japan.

Even then you'll have to be content with just the smiling faces of Marilyn Rougier and her daughters Karen and Nina. The three, with Marilyn's husband Michael, are part of a look at West Coast lifestyles from Tijuana to Victoria in the Japanese edition of the magazine which made the word centrefold famous.

The two-page spread features shots of the Rougier family on a misty day at their Beaver Lake acreage. Along with shots of Rougier in his woodworking shop where he turns out furniture and objets d'art are photographs of his daughters and their horses.

You may have looked in vain for the cannon at Laurel Point which was to greet every noon-hour with a loud bang. The cannon was fired once, on the day the hotel opened its doors for business, and then it mysteriously vanished. Just in case you like cannons, you may rest assured it will be back in place soon. A hotel spokesman says an encasement is being built for the cannon "so that if someone steps in front of it when it's fired, he won't won't get hurt."

Simply divine

WELLS, Me. (AP) — Mail-order Bishop H. Carlisle Estes says he received a divine inspiration to open a Temple of Bacchus along a U.S. highway after town zoning officials refused to allow him to open a restaurant.

Estes, who holds his clerical credentials from the Universal Life Church, outlined the nature of the services he plans in a letter to the town code enforcement officer: "Divine food, heavenly music, esthetic painting and sculpture, sacramental wines, spiritual beverages, inspired writings, ethereal dancing."

Lebanese desperate

She fights deportation

CP

Mrs. Ghossein, her five children unable to stay in Ottawa home

OTTAWA (CP) — Samira Ghossein and her family are desperate. The 34-year-old Lebanese Christian and her five children could be deported to the war-wracked homeland they fled in 1976 because attempts to become landed immigrants here have failed.

She applied for a permanent visa after she arrived here two years ago but immigration officials told her she could not apply for immigrant status while in the country.

Joseph Haddad, her brother-in-law, says the immigration department is trying to get rid of her.

"The government wants her to sell her house, vacate her apartment and take her children to the United States to make the application," he said this week. "She could be left waiting for a response for six months and then refused a visa. Then she would be forced to go back to Lebanon."

Mrs. Ghossein and her children arrived in Canada with tourist visas obtained in Damascus after fleeting the basement bomb shelter they lived in for six months during the bombardments of their native Zahleh region, 35 kilometres east of Beirut.

"The only things we could take were the clothes on our backs," she said. "We were just trying to get out of the country. We didn't decide to come to Canada until we reached Damascus."

They came here because they have relatives in Ottawa.

"We had to go through territory held by leftist guerrillas to escape the country," Mrs. Ghossein said. "My husband, George, had to stay behind in Zahleh because the guerrillas would have killed him. They were killing all men who might be soldiers."

Haddad said Ghossein, also refused a visa, wrote his wife from Lebanon and told her to stay in Canada because the situation in their country is so bad. The government here says it is safe to go back and wants her to leave, he said.

"We have exhausted every channel that we could use," he said. "We have hit a road block. We have made thousands of phone calls and written 15 letters over the past two years but have gotten nowhere."

He said Mrs. Ghossein even met Immigration Minister Bud Cullen who indicated he could do nothing for them.

But an immigration official said she has a good chance of getting a permanent visa if she follows correct procedures.

"The Immigration Act doesn't allow people to apply for a permanent visa while they are in the country," said Peter Current, Cullen's departmental assistant. "I think she has quite a good chance of getting the visa if she leaves the country and applies for it."

Mrs. Ghossein works here as a waitress and hairdresser.

Food policy turn endangers health

EDMONTON (CP) — The city's environmental health officer says federal Health Minister Monique Begin is endangering the health of Canadians by reversing government policy on sanitary food handling.

Dr. Ken Pennifold said in an interview that Miss Begin's plan to allow ethnic barbecued-meat vendors to display their food in traditional ways will open the door to food poisoning.

Dr. Pennifold said display of meat in uncontrolled temperatures should continue to be banned.

"We're dealing with food safety. We've all got to be treated equally. There's no room for silliness over ethnic or cultural backgrounds."

Michael Alexander, an information officer with the health protection branch in Ottawa, said his department wants to be flexible so storekeepers can use traditional methods that they say would not change the nature of their product.

Alexander said public health standards and tradition can both be maintained.

The federal government set up a federal-provincial committee to re-examine temperature control guidelines following Chinese community protests.

The Alberta government will participate in the review but Dr. M. L. Webb, director general of local health services, said he has seen nothing to convince him Chinese or other ethnic butchers should be allowed to display meat at uncontrolled temperatures.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Gift shopping at the Art Gallery. . .

We don't often go overboard nowadays . . . not after 15 years of visiting stores of all kinds . . . but we must say that the Art Gallery's gift shop . . . just back after four months of extensive alterations . . . left us speechless when we dropped by last Monday! . . . They have such perfectly beautiful and unusual things, not limited to Canadiana, but from many parts of the world . . . (Right off the bat we bought a lovely Corinne Boychuk bowl to give as a wedding gift) . . . Many other delightful pieces of pottery by this excellent potter . . . Now let's give you a quick rundown of things you won't find elsewhere . . . Color Windows and Kinetics, which you must see to appreciate. They're absolutely fascinating . . . great gifts for children, the elderly, or hospitalized adults. Guaranteed to take your mind off your troubles! . . . Japanese netwukes . . . Ashanti gold opium weights from West Africa . . . Pure Thai silver jewelery, little boxes, etc . . . reproductions of antiques . . . Beaten copper and brass objects made here in Victoria . . . Beautiful blown glass and gorgeous paperweights . . . Thai silk scarves and men's ties . . . Appleton's crewel wool and patterns . . . Gordon Huchens raku pottery . . . Delightful stuffed animals by Rockinhorse Crafts of N.S. . . . Lidded casseroles, soup bowls and mugs by Roger Stripley of Vancouver . . . Lots of things which complement the oriental art pieces shown in the Gallery . . . Art books, and baku hasti-notes and lovely postcards . . . And a lot of jewellery you definitely won't find anywhere else . . . Open daily from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. . . . The Gallery Shop, Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, 1040 Moss St., 384-7012.

The chic look of transition . . .

Any fashion-conscious woman knows how very important the "transition" look is . . . those clothes which are dark in color, but very lightweight in fabric . . . which you start wearing in August when light summer clothes are beginning to pall . . . and keep on wearing right through the autumn! . . . Gibson's have just received some exciting new clothes with the new look of transition . . . and we'd like to suggest that you go have a look at them soon . . . One is a 3-piece suit in a copper grey and black print polyester resembling fine cotton . . . Black georgette blouse with soft tie neck, all-round pleated skirt and tailored jacket . . . A wonderfully understated dress is a copper, gold, brown and navy paisley with bow tied neck . . . This too a polyester with the look of gossamer wool . . . Then there's the "Four O'Clock" dress . . . perfect for cocktails and such . . . very pretty dress in a black green and gold print chiffon, with soft sleeve and slightly blouson top . . . A real August dark dress! . . . A 2-piece dress, in black or mushroom crepe has a short-sleeved tucked top and a clever skirt tucked over the stomach . . . These new skirts less full than last season's . . . We saw an outstanding black disco dress . . . Floaty chiffon with tucked high bodice, wide shoulderstraps and separate long tie . . . Dressy envelope style ultrasuede purses in black, brown, and two shades of grey . . . Detachable straps . . . and real roomy to hold all your impedimenta! . . . Gibson's, 708 View St., 384-5913.

A regal stone for a July birthday . . .

So nice to see de Goutiere's open again . . . and all their precious jewellery back on display! . . . Bearing in mind that the ruby . . . "the sun's own gem" . . . is the birthstone for July, we hovered over the new ruby rings which glow so richly in their diamond settings! . . . One is a cluster of rubies and diamonds . . . another has a centre ruby with three diamonds on either side . . . and a third in a rich red ruby surrounded with small diamonds . . . Admired a danty little gold earring and pendant set with a small ruby in each . . . and gold flower earrings with a ruby in the centre . . . (Noticed this same gold and ruby flower used as a catch on a string of cultured pearls!) . . . De Goutiere has some quite unusual and little-seen stones mounted in rings . . . Tanzanite . . . which is purplish blue, is in a ring with marquis and round diamonds . . . Diamonds also surround the pale green oval garnet set ring . . . Another ring is set with tawny brown andralusite, circled with green garnets . . . and there's a lovely dark green emerald-cut garnet set off by diamonds . . . We admired a free-form malachite pendant on a gold chain . . . such interesting patterns in the stone! . . . Saw a necklace and bracelet of cultured pearls with jade and gold beads . . . and another of lapis with pearls and gold beads . . . Lots of unusual styles in engagement and wedding ring settings . . . Loose diamonds which you can select yourself. . . . de Goutiere Jeweller Ltd., 2542 Estevan Ave., 592-3224.

Thinking of a summer perm? . . .

Has the advent of these hot summer days caught you with your hair down . . . meaning it's limp and fractious . . . looks like the dickens when you come in from a swim or finish up a game of golf? . . . Then what you undoubtedly need is a really expert haircut (which doesn't necessarily mean short!) . . . and a perm for body and manageability, right? . . . This time why don't you try OUR hairdresser, the Charming Lady . . . a salon whose expertise half the town is buzzing about? . . . We can promise you unconditionally that . . . no matter WHAT type of hair you have . . . you'll be completely happy with the way you look when you leave the shop with your new hairdo . . . And delighted with the way it stands up between appointments . . . (We know women who never NEED appointments between their periodic cuts and perms!) . . . As for whom to ask for . . . well, all the staff are amazingly proficient in all phases of hair care, custom perming, cutting, coloring and styling . . . and they're tremendously nice people, to boot . . . If you ever have a hair problem, discuss it with Tibor whose knowledge of hair is downright awesome! . . . Ask for Tibor, or Mary, or Donna or George . . . you'll be delighted with any one of them . . . As for the salon itself, it's cool and relaxing . . . a really good atmosphere you'll enjoy! . . . Charming Lady, 1712 Douglas St., 385-8133.

Delightful fashions in half sizes . . .

We can remember when half-size dresses tended to be somewhat short on style . . . but this is no longer true . . . They're getting better and better . . . and certainly look smarter on many women than the regular sizes do! . . . At Charmante's this week we saw some beautiful sunny prints in half sizes, starting at 12½ and right up to 22½ . . . A very pretty print . . . beige background with apricot, white, and touches of soft pink . . . Another dainty blue print with soft flared skirt, short sleeves and low jewel neckline with rows of stitched piping . . . This one we'd like ourself! . . . Another smart style in a short-sleeved dress with tie neckline has a long-sleeved jacket to complete the ensemble . . . Comes in navy or green with white . . . A long-sleeved dress which is actually polyester thought it looks like cotton, is completely lined, buttons down the front. Cool and attractive green and white print, it's the perfect summer dress for a heavier figure . . . Sizes 16½, 18½ and 20½ . . . For those hot sunny days there's a pretty 100% cotton red/white/navy print sleeveless sundress . . . The sort of thing you'll wear happily now then take on a cruise next winter! . . . Charmante's have a nice assortment of printed skirts, some with matching stoles . . . Well priced, too . . . Some very pretty flounced skirts complete with stole, are tagged at just $27 . . . Charmante's Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Here's a Mecca for needlecraft devotees! . . .

Surprising the number of people from as far afield as southern California who are beating a path to the Victoria Needlecraft Centre on Oak Bay Ave. . . . Guess it's a case of good news travelling on the wings of light . . . because the tremendous variety and high calibre of the needlecraft supplies to be found here is certainly good news for any man, woman or child devoted to the ancient art of stitchery! . . . There's a big tramme needlepoint picture of Empress Eugenie and her court . . . the faces already worked in petit point, exciting a great deal of interest . . . Only two of these in the world, and Mrs. Brandt has them both! Price is $525 . . . We saw a lot of new tapestries . . . all imported . . . either pre-worked or painted . . . New painted canvases from Eva are here again . . . If quilting is your thing, you can now get a big quilting frame at Victoria Needlecraft . . . with extensions to make it into king size . . . And big round or oval hoop frames which can be used for either quilting or punched rug making . . . Quilting batts are also obtainable here, and quilting classes will start again on Sept. 18 (Store closed Sept. 1-16 for well-deserved staff holidays) . . . Along with all the supplies needed for needlepoint . . . there's also everything that goes into the making of rugs and wall hangings . . . Complete kits or separate rug canvases and yarn . . . A new line of rugs and wall hangings never seen here before . . . arriving in September . . . Victoria Needlecraft Centre, 1863 Oak Bay Ave., 592-3711

Discover the joys of going by train . . .

It's donkey's years since we were last on a train . . . yet our memories of boarding a train in Toronto and travelling through to Vancouver . . . with nose glued to the window practically every inch of the way . . . are as green as if it all happened yesterday! . . . Well, train travel is coming into its own again . . . with the creation of Via . . . that happy blend of CN and CP Rails . . . Trains are ungraded . . . fare structures have been formulated so that everyone benefits . . . you even book ahead for coach now so you can be sure of a comfortable seat! . . . Believe us, this is the way, par excellence, to really see and appreciate Canada! . . . You can cross the country one way on the southern route via Calgary and Banff and return via Jasper, or vice versa . . . there are dome cars from which to thrill to the wonders of the Rockies . . . Package tours to the Maritimes and Eastern U.S. . . . especially in the fall when nature's colors are so glorious . . . When you go by train you'll probably see more than you've ever seen before! . . . And just to give you an example of some of the fares . . . Vancouver to Toronto costs $113 but if a man is accompanied by his wife, SHE only pays $84 . . . and fares for other people travelling together are correspondingly low . . . Do your booking through Paulin's . . . They can give you all the details about tours, etc. Hurry though . . . there'll be a great demand for train travel this year! . . . Paulin Travel, 532 Broughton St., 382-9168.

Victoria ace in limelight again

Checkmate

By RAY KERR

Colonist Chess Writer

Mrs. Stringer, left, with defending champion Smilja Vujosevic of Toronto

Darrel Hunt, who came up in the same batch of young stars as Harold Brown, Danny Scoones and a number of others, has really been doing well in recent months.

Not only has Darrel been doing consistently better in local tournaments, but he was also B.C.'s only representative in the recent Washington State Amateur Championship, where he did not lose a game.

Darrel also played excellently in another B.C. tournament, and if he keeps it up, no one really knows how far this talented chess-player will go.

Speaking of talent, there should be plenty of it on display during the coming months in a number of tournaments.

To start off there is the Interior Open in Kelowna, being played this weekend. From what I hear, it should be an excellent tournament.

Next comes Abbotsford Open, a Fraser Valley special scheduled for Aug. 5-6. The person to get in touch with on that one is Simon Constam at 853-4625.

Then the big news for Vancouver Islanders — this year's Labor Day Open is slated for Victoria.

Which is only fitting as Larry Kirstein a number of years ago inaugurated this event in B.C.'s capital city.

I don't have any other details on Labor Day Open, but I should get plenty of info on it later this summer, so watch for it in Checkmate.

Another biggie is to come the following month, and that's the B.C. Open in Vancouver Oct. 7, 8 and 9.

"That is usually a really big event and I have it from a good source that this year's B. C. Open will be exceptional.

Not to be forgotten, of course, it the Canadian Women's Closed, which this year will be held at Empress Hotel Aug. 5-13.

It should be noted that this will be the first time a Canadian chess championship of any description will be held in Victoria.

Organizer Lynn Stringer of Victoria — 4984 Georgia Park Terrace — notes that spectators will be welcome and anyone interested in helping with this event in any way at all should contact her at 658-5207.

It should be quite a tournament, all right.

Incidentally, the annual general meeting of our provincial chess federation now will be held Thursday, July 6, at 7 p.m. at 1254 West Seventh in Vancouver.

Another great tournament, as I'd mentioned here already, was the Statham event at Lone Pine, Calif., earlier this year.

It was a great performance by that hot Danish star Bent Larsen, who probably picked up his biggest paycheque ever — $12,000.

He finished half a point ahead of Soviet ace Lev Polugaevsky, who won a measly $7,500 for second place.

But Larsen had to do it the hard way, as he was facing the bright, young American Ken Rogoff in the final round.

It is risky to play for a win against a strong man like Rogoff at the best of times, but Larsen went all out anyway.

And he was rewarded with one of the best efforts of the tournament, blasting Rogoff off the board in 23 moves and showing once again that when it comes to fearlessness, Larsen has no peer...except perhaps for Soviet refugee Viktor Korchnoi.

Oh well, we can't all be like Larsen.

But we can admire the man, and that's why it will pay you to study his great effort against Rogoff, our Game of the Week.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: My, such a hubbub over breast-feeding babies in public! I'm surprised you didn't suggest the obvious solution. Or didn't you know?

The nursing mother can buy a simple-to-use, inexpensive breast pump at a drugstore, use it in the privacy of her home, fill the baby's bottle with her precious mother's milk, refrigerate it and feed her baby in public. This way no one is offended and she doesn't have to go to a filthy bathroom at feeding time. Yo're welcome, Ann. Just sign me — Discreet in Boston

Dear Discreet: Sorry, dear, after the shellacking I took on that one I'm not about to suggest to nursing mothers that they buy a breast pump.

Thousands of women have let me know that in this day and age when nobody bats an eye at a topless waitress and when see-through, no-bra shirts and blouses are "in," a nursing mother should not be made to feel uncomfortable if she performs this beautiful and natural act in a restaurant — or anyplace else she may choose.

Dear Ann Landers: We live in the "Rude Capital" of the world. I'm talking about Berkeley, Calif. Over the years my husband and I have become accustomed to smart-aleck answers in shops, being shoved around in banks, supermarkets, restaurants, on buses, etc.

We've become highly skilled at dodging cars and bikes. People seem to take delight in seeing how close they can come without actually hitting you. The skate-board addicts act as if the sidewalks were built exclusively for their use and no one else has a right to walk on them.

Last night was the pits. My husband and I were out for a stroll. A jogger came up from behind. As she passed us she yelled a string of obscenities that ended with, "You don't own the sidewalk, Fatso."

I'd have given anything for a putdown that would have landed her right on her Adidas. My husband says you are the one who can supply the perfect comeback. How about it, Ann? Or — with so many lunatics running around losse — maybe it's better not to infuriate strangers. What do you think? — Had It In Berkeley

Dear Had: Snappy comebacks aren't worth the trouble they might provoke. What good is a moment of satisfaction if you get a knife in your back or a bullet in your head — or even a fist in your mouth? As president Kennedy said, "This is a dangerous and untidy world." My advise is keep your cool and resist the temptation to respond to kooks.

Color infused into dull facts

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist Reporter

It took six hours for Lee Ann Johnson and her party to get to the headwaters of a Malaysian River, where the native people still live an aboriginal life, hunting and fishing in traditional ways.

"After this long trip we found the tribal people sitting outside a thatched roof hut which was the local store—and they were watching television.

"Of all things, here were these children who still use blowpipes for hunting, and they were watching Combat.

"IT'S PROBABLY the most vivid memory of my years overseas," Johnson said in a recent interview.

"I can't think of anywhere where there have been no American television programs, and this has to have an effect on people's lives."

With memories like this it is not surprising that she, and another traveller, Lynn Jones have joined the Victoria International Development Education Centre.

Purpose of the centre is to stimulate public awareness of development issues and of the interdependence of the developed and undeveloped parts of the world.

THE CENTRE is operated by its members, and the two women work part time under a CUSO grant.

Members of the centre are travellers with firsthand experience overseas who will give presentations about countries or issues.

Most of them have worked overseas with various organizations such as CUSO, Canada World Youth, and Canadian Crossroads International.

"WE HAVE put together some programs for schools, and some schools have already put in pilot projects," said Johnson. "So often programs in school are dull text book affairs that are totally out of date. We can put people into the schools who have lived in the countries, and can add some color to dull facts.

"They can explain about ticks and snakes and other hazards of overseas existence that simply don't get into the social studies books."

VIDEC HAS only been in existence since March but has already made an impact on the local scene.

Apart from information evenings organized for community events, VIDEC has provided a program and 12 hours of staff time for a fast at Lansdowne junior high school, with sponsored students contributing money to UNICEF.

They have arranged a program for elementary school students which deals with the problems of food in underdeveloped countries, which takes a look at hunger, analyses the problem, and discusses possible solutions. That program has already had trial runs in some schools.

VOLUNTEERS who have either lived or worked in countries are ready to go into schools to give presentations or programs.

In addition, a program has been set out for high school students dealing with specific problems of international development such as rural agriculture, the education systems and illiteracy.

Jones, who has a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Victoria, became interested in international affairs and went to Barbados with Crossroads International in 1971, working in recreation centres around the island.

WHEN HER tour finished, she stayed on as a teacher for a year, and then returned to Victoria and to university.

After doing her professional year in secondary education she went to Sierra Leone in West Africa as a lecturer in a teacher training college, spending three years there before her return to Victoria in 1976.

Jones graduated from San Jose State in California in 1964 with a bachelor of arts degree in sociology and anthropology, and has lived abroad for much of the time since then.

SHE SPENT some time in Korea, and then during a 10-month stint in the Philippines worked as an English tutor. During 18 months in Nigeria she worked in a crafts co-operative and also did research in the international museum.

Then came a move to Malaysia where she helped set up a school for English-speaking foreign students in a small town and where she developed a social studies program about Malaysia for elementary school students.

"THE THING that I found, and that other travellers have found, is that reality differs substantially from generally-accepted views, and that there is a rapid rate of change in the Third World.

"People are having to make cultural and economic changes on a par with leaping off a country ox-cart into a 747," said Johnson.

"It's the kind of leap that Canadian Indians have been forced into attempting."

For instance, in Malaysia many natives live in primitive villages in a hunter-gatherer culture, but most have been into Kuala Lampur, an up-to-date, industrialised city with a population of 700,000.

"IN ONE generation these people are trying to make the change from traditional ways of doing things to modern industry, modern methods of agriculture, and economy."

But, she pointed out, in accepting American methods there are dangers.

"America accepts the idea that agricultural soil can become worn out, and little is done to prevent that," she said. "But in these countries people are still farming the same soil that has been farmed for 3,000 years, and that soil s still good.

"THIS IS just one of the things that people here should know about. And it's something that doesn't get covered in the social studies books."

Johnson said she suspected that one of the reasons people lack knowledge about other countries is the impossibility of assembling all the knowledge available.

"But even if we can't assemble it all, we do need to brush with it and realize that there were civilizations in other countries long before the European culture came along, and before America was settled by white people.

"WE NEED to be more aware of the things we can learn from these other countries instead of just trying to educate others to our ways."

VIDEC is non-partisan and non-political, she said.

The aim is to encourage Victorians to help develop solutions to some international development problems from a basis of real knowledge of the countries.

VIDEC members, she said, already have programs available about several countries, and issues, and they would welcome new members, particularly people with recent overseas experience.

DAVID KNAPTON,
B. Sc., M. Sc.

Mr. David Knapton has been appointed to teach physics at St. Michaels University School, Victoria, starting in September. Born and raised in Bella Coola, B.C., Mr. Knapton attended Victoria College, Royal Roads, and the Royal Military College, in Kingston, Ontario, where he took Honours Maths and Science. For three years, as a naval officer, he taught electronics and computer science, before entering Queen's University for postgraduate research leading to an M. Sc. degree. For the past seven years, Mr. Knapton has taught in a community college in London, Ontario. His interests — apart from computers, which he regards as "the ultimate toy" — include judo and rugby. Mr. Knapton is married with two small children. His appointment to St. Michaels University School will add still further strength to a strong science department.

Impressive lineup for Paradise fest

By KING LEE
Colonist Reporter

If you're an impulsive type with a weekend to spare, you might just grab your knapsack and head for Paradise Bowl on Grouse Mountain for this weekend's Canada Days Festival.

There is a three-day extravaganza going on up there and if the weather's right, it should be a fun weekend with lots of good music.

The shows today and Sunday get under way at noon while a shortened version Monday will start at 1 p.m.

Today's lineup includes Ray Materick, David Bradstreet, Danny O'Keefe and Jesse Winchester in the afternoon and Fosterchild, Stonebolt and Doucette in the evening until 10:30.

On Sunday, it's Bradstreet, Materick, Victoria's Paul Horn, Cano and Doucette from noon to 6 p.m. and O'Keefe, Winchester and Fosterchild from 7 to 10:30 p.m.

Monday's lineup includes Christopher Ward at 1 p.m. and J.D. Sumner and The Stamps at 3.

Gates will open at 9 a.m. each day and tickets are $10 for the two-day pass. North Pacific Presentations, the shows' promoters, are offering early bird prices of $6 on the day of the show from 9 to 11 a.m.

If you're looking for more information you could phone 682-8711 in Vancouver.

Monday's show is a different story. Advance tickets for that are $5 while tickets at the gate with be $1 more. It's called the Memories of Elvis show.

The good news is that Fleetwood Mac is set for a series of 10 summer concerts in North America.

The bad news is that the closest concert will be July 21 at Folsom Field, Boulder, Colo.

A release from Los Angeles said the 10 concerts are the only show dates planned by Fleetwood Mac this year.

Air force gets in tune

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — The U.S. Air Force has officially recognized motherhood. By late summer, the air force says, a maternity uniform will be available at base exchanges for the first time.

Until now, women in the air force have had to return to civilian clothes when they became pregnant.

About 2,000 air force women have babies each year, a survey shows.

Gift of coins 'very special'

During the past six or seven months, the class of Brenda Morton at the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children has been taking its coins to school to fill the collection can for the B.C. Save the Children Fund.

This week these nine boys and girls presented Heather Siska, the funds Victoria representative, with a total of $18.30.

The fund receives many donations through the year but to Mrs. Siska and the boys and girls who will benefit from the generosity of these children the gift was a very special one.

Multiple sclerosis attack is advancing

The Multiple Sclerosis Society of Vancouver Island was told at its annual meeting in Nanaimo that advances are being made in attacking the debilitating disease.

Attending were members from Victoria, Nanaimo, Sidney, and other points on the Island.

Dr. Charles Simpson, Victoria neurologist and medical advisor for the society centred his talk around various treatments for the alleviation of pain and discomfort and stressed that certain treatments and drugs might benefit one patient and not another. He said research into the cause and cure of the disease continues throughout the world and that advances are being made.

A report on patient services revealed 3,009 therapy treatments were provided in the Victoria clinic as well as therapy for patients in Nanaimo and Courtenay. The society operates two buses for the transportation of patients to and from treatments.

The treasurer reported reciepts of $117,000 with $111,000 of this being spent on patient-aid related services. The annual Carnation Day held May 12 and 13 in the interest of the research program raised about $17,000.

Mexican food: Some like it hot

CHILAQUILES

- 1 dozen corn tortillas
- ½ cup polyunsaturated oil
- ½ medium onion, chopped
- 2 bell peppers, chopped
- 2 cups shredded or diced chicken leftover (or leftover lean meat)
- 2 chilis jalapenos, chopped
- 1 cup stewed tomatoes (or 4 fresh tomatoes)
- ½ tsp. salt
- ½ tsp. white pepper
- ½ cup Mexican Hoop Cheese (Quezo Enchilado)

Cut or break tortillas into bite size pieces and fry in oil. Drain fried tortillas, set aside in warm dish. Pour all but 2 tbsps. of oil.

(Refrigerate the leftover oil which may be used again if oil did not smoke.) Saute onions, peppers and chicken together in the 2 tablespoons of oil. Add chilis, tomatoes, salt and pepper. Add fried tortilla pieces, heat together. Serve with Mexican cheese sprinkled over each serving. Serves 4.

RED SNAPPER VERACRUZ

- 3 pounds Red Snapper or other white fish
- ½ tsp. black pepper
- 2 pounds fresh tomatoes or chopped canned tomatoes
- 1 medium onion, finely sliced
- 2 bay leaves
- 8 pitted green olives, cut in half
- ½ tsp. salt
- 3 tbsps. lemon or lime juice
- 2 tbsps. olive oil
- 2 tbsps. polyunsaturated oil
- 2 large cloves of garlic, minced
- ¼ tsp. oregano
- 2 jalapenos chilis, cut into strips

Arrange slices of fish in a large oiled casserole or baking dish.

Mix all the other ingredients together in a sauce pan. Simmer together for about 5 minutes. Pour over the fish. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes. Serves 10.

Doctors told to hold pay

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal anti-inflation administrator has ordered 13 medical doctors at Toronto's Mount Sinai hospital to hold pay raises to an average $2,400 a year.

William Oliver said the hospital had contravened anti-inflation regulations by overpaying the doctors. But he did not order recovery of the excess pay.

Disc jockey sets record

OSLO (AP) — Rudolf Kristiansen of Narvik, north Norway, claims his 811 hours of continuous record playing is a world record for disc jockeys. Kristiansen, 20, began his marathon presentation at a restaurant in Narvik on May 19 and did not stop until Thursday, June 22. He was allowed two hours' rest daily.

Food additive danger must be in perspective

EDMONTON (CP) — A food scientist says food additives pose a potential health hazard but the risk must be kept in perspective.

"We can't deny there is a risk," Jack Francis, a professor at Texas Technical University in Lubbock, Tex., told the annual conference of the Canadian Institute of Food Science and Technology this week. "But the hazards are low compared with the other risks we face in life."

Francis said heart attacks, home and automobile accidents are far greater risks to life than food additives.

He said it would be extremely costly to remove all additives from food.

"We're going to have to live with chemicals in our food that are carcinogenic."

Instead of trying to ban all carcinogenic material from food an effort should be made to determine the level at which such material has no effect on humans.

"That's the problem we've got today. We've got to quantify the risk."

Francis said it would be a mistake to ban food coloring agents because naturally-colored foods would have too much of an advantage. "That is no way to run a national nutritional policy."

He said many natural foods contain toxic material.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am troubled with an illness that has been diagnosed as polymyalgia rheumatica. I have never heard of anyone with this, nor can I find any printed material on it. Can you be of help? — J.M.

Your doctor was on the ball to have recognized this sometimes overlooked disorder. It is not a greatly publicized problem, but it has been receiving increased attention of late.

Polymyalgia rheumatica, which we can call 'PR" for short, is a disease that can be mistaken for rheumatoid arthritis. However, there are few specific symptoms. It does not, for example, cause the deformities of arthritis. As with many "mystery" diseases the cause is unclear. The patient is usually an older woman, often in the 60s or over.

There is not the muscle weakness found in similar disorders, but it does limit activity because of the pain and stiffness that occurs with movement. These symptoms are not present when at rest. The areas affected are the back, neck, and shoulder and pelvic regions chiefly.

The brighter side of the picture is that it can be treated effectively, even cured. But it is important to begin early. Steroid drugs (prednisone) administered over a long period can help. The symptoms may disappar without return.

One important allied symptom is arteritis (inflammation of arteries), particularly those in the temporal (head) area. In fact, if not treated soon enough blindness can occur. Blood sedimentation tests are important in detecting this complication.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Why is it that when I'm in the hospital they don't give me any pills at all and when I'm home I have to take 22 pills a day? — R.U.

That's an open-ended question. If I were to guess I'd say that the medication is halted temporarily so that the drugs do not interfere with tests being run on you. But for a meaningful answer, ask your personal physician — 22 pills is a lot, to be sure.

"The sea and I have been together for 55 years, says Pablo Brito who, at age 69, is really a youngster - many of his friends on the Dominican Republic hamlet of Bayahibe are 100 and older. This hospitable sailor and his unspoiled village are representative of the people and sights found on Caribbean island whose first tourist was Christopher Columbus.

By PHILIP SOUSA

LA ROMANA, Dominican Republic — Pablo Maria Brito shares this corner of his country's spectacular southeast coast with a flock of rather famous folks.

Alas, he hasn't seen a movie "in quite a few years" — so he wouldn't recognize Sophia Loren if the talented Italian star were to swim or sunbathe within sight of his boat, which she often does.

I met this simple and hospitable man in Bayahibe, a primitive fishing hamlet about 21 kilometres down the coast from where he lives and works taking visitors around in a runabout.

For this village, which hugs incredibly clear waters and stands amid a riot of tropical trees and flowers, the clock seems to have stopped years ago.

Ditto for Brito.

He's going to be 69 this year, but looks much younger.

A human map the color of ripe tobacco leaves, his face is that of a veteran sailor.

How long have you been at it, you ask. And with that touch of poetry peculiar to Spanish-speaking people he says: "The sea and I have been together for 55 years."

But to call him an old man is inaccurate, you soon discover. Several of Brito's pals in Bayahibe are 100 and older.

His secret?

"The good life in a good place," he says, one leathery arm on the steering lever of his boat, the other sweeping in an arc to take in the scenery around us.

And what a sight, his slice of the good life!

Transparent aquamarine waters. Superb uncrowded beaches of soft white and caramel sands. Lush vegetation thick with flowers and singing birds. Simple houses and fishing boats sporting every color of the rainbow. Men and youngsters plucking fine fish from the bountiful sea. Few visitors, but lots of healthy cows, horses and pigs meandering along Bayahibe's unpaved streets. Lovely children quick to dazzle you with great smiles. And all very peaceful, very gentle.

Remote in pace and feeling, this village. Yet it's only a couple of hours by car from Santo Domino, this country's very 20th century capital with its modern hotels and casinos.

Bayahibe stands at the edge of what may well be the ultimate resort in the Caribbean: Costasur, a 7,000-acre complex built by Gulf and Western.

For sheer luxury, setting, amenities and service, its homes, condominiums and two hotels are unmatched.

La Romana is a small sugar-processing town right on the Caribbean. And it is right next to the sugar mill that Hotel Romana catches your eye with its handsome wood balconies, original tiles, stone walls and graceful archways; in fact, the structure once was a guest house for mill visitors.

A few miles down the coast, linked to Hotel Romana by minibuses that run throughout the day, is Casa de Campo, the resort's piece de resistance.

With rates that start at $35 for a single and $45 double, a casual atmosphere and a swinging nightclub, Hotel Romana attracts a rather young crowd. Casa de Campo, on the other hand, draws families and guests who are more interested in golfing than dancing; rates at this posh collection of hotel rooms, secluded villas and other accommodations whose facilities include private jet airstrip, polo field and two Pete Dye golf courses, start at $80 a day for a single.

Both hotels serve outstanding food. And, of course, both have swimming pools.

The one at Casa de Campo boasts a two-level thatched roof bar and lounge; you swim or wade your way to the bar, which is at water level, and climb a flight of wood steps to the breezy wall-less lounge.

But, as mentioned, golf is big here.

No less than 36 championship holes. Seven holes of the 6,700-yard course skirt or cross the sea. And every hole has three separate tees. Golf magazine's verdict: the finest golf resort in the world.

You can also go snorkeling through coral reef gardens; cruise aboard the resort's 52-foot schooner; go deep-sea fishing; visit horse and cattle ranches; tour the sugar mill, which is the largest privately owned sugar refinery; shop for Dominican arts and crafts here at La Romana or in nearby Santo Domingo or, if the mood strikes, do nothing more strenuous than turning yourself into a luxury version of a beach bum.

Upper Canada Village: 20th century 'creation'

UPPER CANADA VILLAGE, Ontario — This 18th century village, much like Virginia's Williamsburg, located about 160 kilometres west of Montreal along the St. Lawrence River, is a 20th century "creation."

However, even though a bit ersatz in character, it offers a delightful day of enjoyment and instruction in life as it was over 200 years ago.

The village might be said to be part of Canada's effort to establish something in the way of a national heritage or historical tradition. As such, it is as successful as Williamsburg — complete with old blacksmith shop (except the smithy is a labor union man and does not work Saturdays and Sundays when most tourists are here.)

There is a working farm here, managed in much the same way as farms were managed in Revolutionary War times — and it was Tories from the United States who fled here when the colonies triumphed over mother England in the war.

Upper Canada Village, even though it depicts life 200 years ago, came into being as a result of creation of the St. Lawrence Seaway in 1959. In order to build the seaway, it was necessary to flood about 100 square miles of farmland, including eight historic villages on the Canadian side of the river. These villages were the sites of some of the earliest settlements in Upper Canada (much of which now is the province of Ontario), so-called because the area was upstream from older areas like Montreal.

To the casual eye, this village looks like it might always have been here. The Ontario provincial government, however, moved most of the buildings here from the eight towns that were sacrificed for the St. Lawrence Seaway. Even doing this, there were not enough buildings collected to re-create a complete village. Other buildings were moved from other areas of Eastern Ontario — thus the composite village that now exists.

Canadian historians presided over the work, to the point that a total of 531 buildings were moved here — all in one piece, even including the two-story Cook's Tavern — and were furnished in the mode of 1784. Guides are in what North Americans would call colonial costume, furnishings are authentic to the time depicted, horse-drawn carriages take visitors on tours, an old sawmill operates daily and actually provides lumber for work still under way.

A visit to Upper Canada Village is a must and part of history classes for Canadian school children. Canadian senior citizens are admitted free (U.S. seniors pay the going rate of $2.) About 5,000 tour the village on summer weekend days.

Those who preside over the village (the official agency is the St. Lawrence Parks Commission) also seek to teach a lesson with a 20th century application.

Trip into Red China now an easy procedure

Travel Tips

By STAN DELAPLANE

Going through Hong Kong and at the last minute decide you'd like to visit Red China? Well . . .

"Now it's as easy to spend a weekend inside China as it is to go between Los Angeles and San Francisco," my Hong Kong correspondent writes. "You need a passport, three passport photos and $185 U.S.

"Travel advisors in the lobby of the grand old Peninsula Hotel on the Lowloon side of Hong Kong handles it. You have to give them your passport, photos, and money by Wednesday noon for the Friday trip.

"Friday you take the Hong Kong train to the border. Get off. Walk across the famous Friendship Bridge. Board the People's Republic train bound for Canton. (Seats are first-class. Which means they're padded, and they serve you hot tea immediately.)

"The price gives you train fare, hotel, meals and sightseeing. Canton only. Monday you come back the same way."

"MY BOY friend is left-handed. He says it's impossible to get a cigarette lighter with a wheel that spins for him. Apparently the wheels you spin with your thumb are made for right-handed people. For lefties, they spin out of your hand . . ."

They have golf clubs, can openers, scissors. Even greeting cards that open on a southpaw turn.

CAMBRIDGE, the University town 60 miles north of London, is the gateway to East Anglia, a rural part of England that was untouched by the industrial revolution. (I think England is the most rewarding driving country in Europe.)

Our reporter there now says: "We put up one lilac-scented summer night at The Swan in Lavenham. A medieval village that was big in the 14th and 15th centuries of the wool trade.

"A good place to base. Second World War American airmen left their signatures on the bar. Painted a nude on the ceiling."

"JUST OUT of town is one of those rare culinary surprises you find on England's back roads. Robert Carrier — (TV and cookbook man from America) — rescued Hintlesham Hall seven years ago.

"It's a Queen Anne cream-and-white manor house. He turned the lower floor into a restaurant that must rank with the best in Britain. Grilled guinea fowl with limes. Fillets of trout braised in lettuce leaves.

"Lunch $12. Dinner $14.

"A long-ago owner, they say, dressed his wife in a French maid's uniform and made her pull him around in a cart. Much to the amazement of the locals. Naturally, she haunts the place. No extra charge."

CP AIR'S Ernie Beyl reports from Tokyo: "In one of the big department stores on the Ginza, I broke the language barrier by drawing a picture of an umbrella.

"I came up with a little umbrella that sits on your head. Like a Chinese coolie's hat. Really very practical, leaving your hands free to carry packages. About 18 inches across when opened. Folds to 12 inches in length.

He says: "The pencil-and-paper communication is the best I've found where you can't speak the language. However, I tried to buy a mosquito net in Mexico. Drew a picture of an arm with a mosquito biting savagely.

"The shopkeeper brought out a fly swatter."

Aztec capital

Heavenly altitude excitement

By EVELYN KIERAN

I keep a bag packed in hopes someone will invite me to Mexico City. It is always ready, for no place in the world continues to fascinate, to offer such pleasures, such excitement and such wonderful feelings of joy, merely to be there, as the ancient capital of the Aztecs. I love Mexico City.

When the most recent invitation came, to assist at the opening of the new El Presidente Chapultepec Hotel, naturally, I was there.

The hotel fronts on the famed Chapultepec Park in one of the prettiest districts of the city.

But remember, please, it is also in a heavenly altitude. Go slowly at first. Take a little walk from the hotel.

The neighborhood is one of the best. Not new, but gracious. Lovely old stone and brick houses. Well tended gardens with magnificent flowering shrubs. The fragrance of the city assaults my memory.

Soft music invites conversation, romance among the tea and cocktail drinkers.

The music rises a little, soft voices murmur, ice tinkles; it is a paseo indoors. In one corner a balloon man offers wild-colored bubbles to two enchanting little brown-eyed girls in hand-embroidered pinafores. A smiling senorita cuts her eyes toward an elegant young caballero and heads for the elevator.

Dinner is at El Lago, a great rustic building on the park lake, flashing colored fountains on many, well-planted levels. Cork ceilings keep the conversations on a hearable level. Corks popping accent the mesmerizing rhythms of the mariachis. And the dinner!

An icy soup of velvet avocado and cream, served with a white, fragrant wine. A terrine of red snapper, with a mousse of a delicate local white fish, sauced ever so lightly with a quiet veloute. And duck in a golden sauce, cooked to perfection with a lingering tartness, complemented by a rich red wine. A feast from the gods themselves!

And then to the Zona Rosa to dance the night away. Tomorrow we will return to the beautiful shops to buy leather and onyx.

Tomorrow. There is always tomorrow.

The day reaches out before us.

We walk just a few pleasant blocks under great shade trees to the fabulous Museum of Anthropology. And for hours we are lost to the ages. Miniature copies of pyramids of 2,000 years ago, reproductions of whole cities, artifacts from many cultures. It is vast, cool, crowded with history, philosophy, religion, revolution.

Then suddenly we are at the Museum of Contemporary Art. The great canvases seem to leap from the walls and grab us. What color! What light! What enormous vitality! Here is the spirit of rebellion which finally broke the dictators' backs. Here, rising from the very heart of the people, is the beginning of self-expression.

NEW ORIENT/CHINA CRUISE

We are pleased to announce a new 54-day Orient/China cruise sailing roundtrip from San Francisco/Los Angeles September 21/22, 1979, aboard the Royal Viking Sea.

The highlight of this new cruise will be a 4-day call at Shanghai, with a choice of two optional excursion programs that offer a remarkable and exciting adventure in today's China.

The first program includes sightseeing Shanghai, plus an overland excursion to Peking, to visit the Great Wall of China, and the Palace Museum—the former Forbidden City—which houses some of China's greatest art treasures.

The alternate program features three days exploring Shanghai's major attractions, with insights into the daily life of the Chinese people, plus one day traveling to the ancient city of Soochou. You will see exquisite works of Chinese art, and visit the Children's Palace, where the musical artistry and other skills of Chinese children are nurtured and developed.

And on both programs, you will have ample time to explore Shanghai's "Friendship Store," for once-in-a-lifetime shopping for scrolls, carpets, antiques, furniture, silks, and many other treasures.

Speaking of once-in-a-lifetime shopping, this cruise also features extended stays in two of the great shopping capitals of the Orient: three days in Hong Kong, and two days in Manila.

Rock singer badly hurt

Rock star Peter Frampton was seriously injured in an automobile accident near his home in the Bahamas Thursday night and was flown Friday to a New York City hospital.

Paul Bloch, Frampton's publicist, said the 27-year-old recording star suffered three broken ribs, three cracked ribs, a broken arm and a head injury that required 12 stitches. Bloch said Frampton was in "stable condition."

John Louis Evans, 28, a death row inmate who wants to be put to death on the operating table so his organs can be used for transplants, was ordered Friday by the Alabama Supreme Court to die in the electric chair Aug. 4.

Dr. Ronald Rivers, a forensic pathologist and Jefferson County medical examiner, said electrocution would not damage any of the organs normally used in transplants.

Richard Nixon will be welcomed to the mountain village of Hyden, Ky., in something of a presidential style—a 21-gun salute and ruffles and flourishes—when he arrives today to dedicate a new recreation center named in his honor.

County Judge C. Allen Muncy, who arranged the naming of the $2.5 million facility for the former president, said he also wanted the Army Band to play "Hail to the Chief," but the Pentagon vetoed the idea.

Composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein has been named the sole beneficiary of his wife Felicia's estate, worth an estimated $750,000.

Mrs. Bernstein, who was an actress known as Felicia Montealegre, died of cancer earlier this month at the age of 56.

Twiggy, the British-born number one cover girl and model of the 60s, is expecting a baby in November it was reported in London.

Twiggy now lives in the United States with her American husband, actor Michael Witney, and plans a new career in movies.

Carl Bixby, a writer who created the long-running daytime radio drama Life Can Be Beautiful and later wrote the television soap opera Edge of Night, died at his home in Southbury, Conn., on Thursday. He was 83.

Willa McLean, 36, wife of national television talk-show host Bob McLean, was in satisfactory condition in a Moose Jaw hospital following a three-car accident Thursday night.

Police said Mrs. McLean, her husband and daughter Addie, 18, apparently were passengers in one of the cars.

All three were taken to hospital, although only Mrs. McLean was admitted.

Farmers squeezed for credit

Canadian Press

Escalating land prices, inflation and increased mechanization have increased demand for farm credit financing, the Legislature's standing committee on agriculture says.

The committee report said proportionately more capital is now tied up in real estate assets than machinery and equipment or livestock and poultry.

Consequently, farmers' demand for long-term credit has grown in spite of the fact that chartered banks have not been actively involved in long-term lending previously, it said.

Milfoil threat workshop topic

PENTICTON (CP) — The threat posed by Eurasian milfoil to the Okanagan's $177 million tourist industry was discussed at a workshop on the weed held here Friday.

The workshop, sponsored by the provincial Water Investigations Branch, was attended by senior level management of several government departments in B.C. and Washington state.

Peter Scales, seminar organizer from the Penticton WIB office, said it was estimated that a single adult plant can produce 2.5 million fragments.

He said the fragments—as small as a centimetre—readily take root and grow as much as 4.5 metres in a single summer.

He noted that in 1975 there were 550 acres of the weed in the Okanagan lake system, but by 1977 there was an increase to 1,600 acres with no decline in sight yet.

Scales said machinery is 98 per cent effective in removing the weed in small areas, but is time-consuming and costly.

He said that while 2,4-D does do a good job, it too is not 100 per cent effective.

The provincial government currently is engaged in programs featuring both mechanical and chemical methods of dealing with the weed. Also a quarantine program aimed at stopping the spread of the weed to other lakes has just started.

Japan group visiting B.C.

The group is spending 10 days in the Pacific Northwest, visiting both Canada and the United States.

Lumber, plywood and the 10-per-cent duty on spruce, pine and fir will be among the topics of discussion.

Premier backs lottery-ad lid

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bennett says lottery advertising should be curbed and suggested there should be only one lottery in Canada.

Speaking on a radio talk show, Bennett reacted to a complaint by a caller about the proposed computerized lottery to be introduced by Loto Canada, a federal agency, in November across the country. It will operate in competition with the Western Canada lottery supported by the B.C. government.

Bennett did not elaborate on how the creation of a single lottery could be accomplished.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy earlier said the lottery sales market should be limited and said Loto Canada is being unfairly extended without provincial consultation.

FERRIES FULL BUT DOCK CLEARED

Almost 2,500 vehicles left Swartz Bay on Thursday despite problems which a B.C. Ferries official said were no fault of the provincially-run system.

William Bouchard, assistant traffic manager, said Friday that the 18 sailings were all full except for the final run, the scheduled 10:15 p.m. run of the Queen of Tsawwassen which actually left at 11 p.m. Bouchard said 42 passenger vehicles, five trucks, two overheight vehicles and two buses were loaded on board and he denied that anyone had been left behind.

Bouchard agreed that there were up to four-hour delays for some travellers hoping to get away early Thursday for the long holiday weekend but he said there was no gross incompetence on the part of ferry officials.

He said the breakdown of the Queen of Victoria and the fact the Queen of Vancouver was not ready for service as expected stretched the system beyond the breaking point.

The Queen of Victoria had a fuel pump problem and was taken off its run at 7 a.m. and was not back in service again until it left Swartz Bay terminal near Sidney at 8:51 p.m.

Bouchard said both vessels had recently undergone major engine installations which brought its maximum horsepower from 66,000 to 85,000 and that German engineers had advised B.C. Ferries officials that neither vessel would be ready by Thursday.

However, Bouchard said, the Queen of Victoria was in action with its new equipment while the Queen of Vancouver, not scheduled to be in service for another two weeks, managed to get operational Friday.

The breakdown, the unserviceability and the pressing into service of the Queen of Tsawwassen, Bouchard continued, meant there was no standby vessel on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen run.

The Queen of Tsawwassen inaugurated the "midnight" run Thursday which was clamored for by Victoria Chamber of Commerce officials and businessmen on Vancouver Island. Bouchard said the 12:15 midnight ferry from Tsawwassen will be continued until Sept. 15 and the ferry officials will evaluate the situation after the trial period.

On the first midnight sailing from the mainland, Bouchard noted, there were 19 passenger cars, five overheight vehicles, four commercial vehicles, one bus and a total of 70 passengers in the Queen of Tsawwassen, which has a capacity of 138 vehicles.

Teachers drop leftist

MONTREAL (CP) — Yvon Charbonneau, one of Quebec's best known labor leaders, was unseated Friday as president of the 80,000-member Centrale de l'Enseignement du Quebec which represents most of the province's French-speaking teachers.

Gaulin, 39, campaigned on a need for new blood in the CEQ leadership, claiming that rank-and-file participation in federation decision-making has dwindled in recent years as Charbonneau became more dogmatic as leader.

The new president insisted throughout that he had no quarrel with the federation's current socialist and nationalist orientation, but he promised to dispense with the pro-Marxist rhetoric the CEQ became known for under Charbonneau.

He warned reporters before the convention not to interpret his candidacy as a sign that the federation was moving to the right.

Nevertheless, Gaulin's campaign was thought to have benefitted from conservative and nationalist elements of the federation which have resented Charbonneau's style and political orientation.

Gaulin was supported by the 8,000-member Alliance des Professeurs de Montreal, with whom Charbonneau has frequently been at odds.

The new president has coordinated the CEQ's negotiating strategy for the province-wide contract talks in 1972 and again in 1975-76. He holds a master's degree in business administration from Laval University in Quebec City.

Charbonneau, 37, succeeded Raymond Laliberte in 1970.

In 1972, he spent three months in jail along with two other labor leaders for counselling defiance of a back-to-work order during a general strike by 200,000 teachers and hospital workers.

Buildings corporation borrowing authorized

The B.C. Buildings Corporation has been given the authority to borrow $35 million for general purposes, the government disclosed.

An order-in-council showed that the crown corporation will obtain the money from the Canada pension fund at an annual interest rate of 10 per cent during the next 20 years.

Teacher school guides coming

Canadian Press

Guidelines for district-based assessment programs will be issued this fall to answer teachers' questions on grading and reporting procedures in the public school system, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Friday.

McGeer said that a recent survey revealed confusion about how to evaluate, what to evaluate, and how to communicate the information obtained to parents and other teachers.

"My overwhelming impression is that individual schools and teachers are trying very hard to help each student through their policies in areas of evaluation and promotion, but a gross lack of direction has led to an inconsistency of effort," the minister said in a news release.

He said assistance to teachers would include resource books dealing with the development and use of teacher-made tests, the selection and use of standardized tests, and classroom grading practices.

McGeer said that in conjunction with this, a series of tests—similar to the one already in place for Grade 12 algebra—geared specifically to the B.C. curriculum would be developed and made available to teachers.

The education ministry was preparing to rewrite administrative bulletins which affect grading and reporting policy in elementary and secondary schools, and also planned to conduct a series of seven regional workshops to provide assistance to teachers and administrators, he said.

KING FISHERMAN

It may be great despite weight

You don't have to catch the heaviest fish to win one of the major trophies in the King Fisherman Contest.

The Molson Fish of the Year Trophy is for the outstanding quality, and most sportsmanlike catch of the contest.

There are also up to 10 Molson Fish of the Month crests each month for outstanding catches and for Colonist subscribers, a Little Chief Smoker each month for the outstanding quality catch.

Anglers who catch fish they consider eligible for the Fish of the Year or Fish of the Month should make a notation in block letters on the side of the front of the entry form and then enter particulars on the reverse of the entry form—weight, girth, length, how caught, reel manufacturer, line, lure or bait, and other pertinent information.

Take a picture of the fish. It need not necessarily be a big fish. Judges will also consider how it was caught.

Profit low on sample of wines

A spokesman for the liquor distribution branch said Friday the provincial government isn't making much profit from its sale of about 195 free sample bottles received by the branch.

Janet Wilson said in an interview that while government liquor outlets are selling the bottles for $3.50 each, overhead and handling costs mean that profit on each bottle is minimal.

She said the sale was a one-time only affair, and was prompted by a change in the branch's system of receiving sample wines.

The wines appeared in Victoria and Vancouver speciality liquor stores this week bearing, along with their price tags, type-written labels saying: "Samples supplied free. For analysis. Not for sale."

'No favors' in guide licensing

VANCOUVER (CP) — A public inquiry into the licensing of guide outfitters in British Columbia ended this week with several members of the provincial fish and wildlife branch refuting allegations they overstepped their powers in the granting of hunting licences.

The inquiry had been told conservation officer Jack Mackill granted a guide outfitter's licence to Gene Overton because they were related and had grown up together.

"He's never done any favors for me and I've never done any favors for him, said Mackill. "As for the allegation that we grew up together, all)I can say is that he must have done his growing up pretty fast because when I was 23, Gene Overton had just been born."

Mackill said he favored Overton for the licence because he "was an excellent guide and the branch never had a complaint against him."

Les Cox, regional protection officer in the Smithers area, was alleged to have granted a sundry permit (which allows guide outfitters to hunt in areas other than their own) to guide Doug Robertson because of pressure from superiors in the branch and private parties.

Cox said that though the granting of sundry permits was not common, it was not against fish and wildlife policy to issue them when an area was being under-utilized.

Cox also denied there had been any pressure from his superiors in Victoria to grant a sundry permit.

Charles Estlin, a retired branch official, was alleged to have awarded free guiding rights to a guide for an area near Dease Lake in 1970 after he asked that guide to keep quiet about an apparent scandal within the branch.

Under examination from investigation counsel Ace Henderson, Estlin told the inquiry in provincial court that there was never any question of a reward.

In earlier testimony Wednesday, John Holmes, the guide in question, said he didn't agree he was given a payoff as had been alleged, but that he acquired a guide-outfitter's licence through normal process.

Judge J. L. McCarthy, who is heading the inquiry, said he would make a final report to the attorney-general soon.

ICBC helping lawsuit loser

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corp. of B.C. says it will contribute towards the medical expenses of a woman who sued the corporation and lost.

Susan West, who lost an eye in a 1975 car accident, turned down a $40,000 out-of-court settlement offered by ICBC in January, 1975, when she was 16.

She took the case to a jury, wanting to prove she was not at fault for the accident but she lost the case and ended up owing medical bills and legal expenses.

Earlier this year, the matter was raised in the Legislature and ICBC offered to pay her medical costs. However, when the corporation showed up with an offer to pay her bills it wanted receipts. Mrs. West said the receipts were lost in a fire.

Mrs. West said Thursday she was told she would get $750 for medical costs for which she has no receipts, plus $300 for a glass eye and $90 for glasses if she produces receipts. As far as future costs are concerned, she said she was told ICBC would pay for a new glass eye which she needs.

ICBC also said it is waiving its right to collect $7,500 to which its lawyers are entitled under terms of the court decision.

Pay demands 'worrisome'

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien modified Thursday an earlier statement on union wage demands, saying most "are planning to be reasonable but there are a few cases which are worrisome."

Chretien made the statement in the Commons following hasty consultation with Labor Minister John Munro, who has been attempting to improve government-labor relations.

Chretien said Tuesday in a speech to the Conference Board in Canada "there are some disturbing signs" that labor groups in the public and private sectors plan to demand big pay raises after compulsory wage and price controls are lifted.

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) said Thursday Chretien was "attempting to shaft the minister of labor" and he asked Munro for his views on Chretien's earlier statement about wage demands.

"My colleague, the minister of finance, and myself are just having a chat about that now," said Munro.

After talking to Chretien, Munro said: "I think the minister of finance was looking at a few contracts that might be a little too high which he perceived were coming down."

Alexander suggested to Chretien and Munro that they should "get their act together" and he pressed Chretien to tell the Commons why was alarmed about new wage demands.

Chretien said "there are some contracts, which have been negotiated at this time, which look a bit loaded in the second year."

FRUSTRATING NIGHT FOR TAX-WEARY

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist reporter

Some 200 angry property owners, some with tax increases up to 300 per cent, were baffled Thursday night by five smooth-talking politicians and bureaucrats.

By the end of the marathon meeting, Metchosin and Albert Head residents still did not know where to point the finger of blame for their spiralling property taxes, although most of their anger seemed to be directed against the Capital Region.

A round of cheers greeted a recommendation that the regional board be abolished, and there was a lot of support for the abolition of tax assessments so that property taxes would be paid equally by all who received service.

Residents wanted frills such as family-life education cut out of education, unless approved by referendum.

THEY WANTED A chance to vote on all major expenditures, including salaries, within taxing authorities.

They thought perhaps they could lower their own taxes by "knocking off all the white stucco, and putting weeds into the flower beds."

They agreed vociferously when Esquimalt Social Credit MLA Lyle Kahl said he thought it time local people were given an opportunity to vote on "the large increases in salaries" in the CRD, school district and provincial government.

And to give immediate relief, they want the provincial government to roll back all tax increases to last year's level, plus six per cent.

As Metchosin resident John Ranns put it toward the end of the three-hour meeting: "You've all given millions of figures showing how all the raises are justifiable, or not your fault.

"I ONLY KNOW two things for sure — my wages went up four per cent this year, and my taxes went up 100 per cent.

"Of my total wage increase for the year, one half went to pay taxes.

"All you have been doing is passing the buck this evening, but all of you have been guilty of raising taxes more than the cost-of-living index, and yet you are supposed to be working for us."

The occasion was a meeting of Albert Head and Metchosin Ratepayers Associations to discuss property tax increases.

The first 2½ hours were devoted to listening to explanations and answers to questions from representatives of the provincial tax assessment authority, the Capital Region Board, Sooke School Board, Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre, and the provincial government.

CRANSTON BROWNING of the B.C. Tax Assessment Authority said that only 157 of the 14,000 property owners in the area had appealed their assessments at the beginning of the year.

He said there was a policy of phasing in increases over three years for people subject to large jumps.

That brought a reaction from one questioner who said he had bought and upgraded a rundown property.

"As a result the amount I have to pay in tax has risen by 363 per cent," he said.

"What I want to know, so that I can save up for it, is if increases are being staggered over three years, how much will I have to pay at the end of that time?"

HE WAS ADVISED to visit the assessment authority for explanation.

There was a good deal of argument about the basis of tax assessment, with many residents upset about the use of market value as a basis for taxation.

This meant that those who allowed their property to become rundown got a tax break, while those who improved their property, even though they had no intention of selling, had to pay a higher share.

They contended that all residents are provided with the same services and therefore should pay the same amount, with differences coming for the amount of use, such as water and power rates.

One suggested that the only hope of reduction of taxes under the present system was to tear off all the stucco, paint the tarpaper black, and turn the landscaping back to weeds.

REPLIED BROWNING: "If you want to lose $20,000 worth of property when you come to sell you can let your property run down."

"We don't want to sell," his audience howled.

Kahl said the subject had been discussed frequently by the Social Credit caucus, seeking a means of not penalizing people who improve their homes.

"If you can come up with a better way of raising taxes we want to hear about it."

CRD treasurer Ken Ball, explaining regional budgets, pointed out that the region's share of Metchosin taxes had risen less than that of any other taxing body.

UNDER NEW ASSESSMENTS, he said, the total mill rate was up by 14 per cent, but the actual total of taxes collected was up by about 28 per cent.

Increases in taxes levied ranged from a low of 8.1 per cent by the region, to highs of 40.4 per cent by the school district, and 48 per cent by the hospital district.

Although regional salaries had been held down by Anti-Inflation Board rules, inflation had still brought increases in the costs of providing services.

"The cost of living has inflated more than six per cent, so that to give the same kind of service that we gave last year we have had to go beyond the six per cent increases.

School trustee Brian Killip said there had been a 10-mill increase in the education tax.

PART OF THAT total came because there was no surplus in the budget as there had been the previous year, and some because of a decrease in the defence department's contribution through a decrease in their students. The provincial government's basic levy for education had increased by 22.5 per cent, he said, and the three items accounted for 7.96 mills of the increase.

The reason for the rest of the increase was increased cost of such things as power, oil, and transportation.

Doug Ruttan of Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre also blamed electricity and oil increases for part of his problem, although the recreation budget is down a little this year because last year the area paid just over $10,000 for the new Isobel Reader Theatre.

Killip fielded some tough questions.

Said Ranns: "There has been a decrease in pupils but the levy on my property has gone up. I can't see why this monstrous increase which puts me into the poorhouse, when the standard of education has not improved."

HIS MOTHER, Anna Ranns, asked if it was true that the district hires one half teacher to go into homes and help students who have been suspended from school.

Killip acknowledged that was so, and Mrs. Ranns responded: "In that case I recommend that everybody's kids act so badly that they can be sent home and get individual instruction."

She wanted to go back to referendums before "frills" become part of the education system, pointing out that Metchosin parents have decided that they don't want family-life education in their own school, but they still have to pay a portion of the cost of the program in the district.

Former school board chairman John Williams said the school board's mill rate has increased 92 per cent since 1974.

"What has this achieved with the end product?" he asked.

"THE PURPOSE of education is to prepare boys and girls for the world after they leave school. To say that the standard reached now has increased in any way in proportion to the money being spent is pure and utter garbage."

When Killip said the teacher-pupil ratio in the district has gone down to 1 to 19, he was told classroom size still averages 25, and was asked what the ratio of teachers is to administration. He couldn't answer that question.

Several times the meeting bogged down into political discussions as Killip, and some members of the audience, wanted to know what the Social Credit government is doing to fulfil a campaign promise to remove the cost of education from property. Kahl said he had a letter from the premier saying the matter is still under active review to determine alternative sources of money.

Ruth Crockett was concerned about the present-day cost of social services.

"There was a day when if you had troubles you paid for them yourself," she said. "I don't think the community should be doing all the social services that are going on in the schools.

"AND," SHE ADDED, "we used to have direct contact with the provincial government, and I would like to see the abolition of the regional board so that we can get back to that."

Chairman Shirley Wilde suggested that taxpayers join a letter-writing campaign to the provincial government, and told them that if they wished they could withhold a portion of their taxes, although she warned they would be assessed a small interest rate on any outstanding amount.

Humble sauce for goose

Esquimalt Social Credit MLA Lyle Kahl showed a little humility at a ratepayers' meeting Thursday night in Metchosin.

He had busily advocated that the provincial government, regional boards and school boards go to referendums for approval for employee salary increases.

Someone asked him:

"Do you feel you, or any other politican, would ever get an increase in salary if you had to go to referendum?"

"I don't suppose I would ever get one," Kahl replied.

Scare talk hit in tariff trim

OTTAWA (CP) — Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen called on the opposition Thursday to stop scaring Canadians with talk of loss of thousands of jobs due to trade and tariff negotiations under way in Geneva.

MacEachen assured the Commons there would not be large tariff reductions in either textiles or footwear, two of the most sensitive industries.

He said any industry adversely affected by the government's move to make Canada part of a free world trading community was likely to receive assistance from both the federal and provincial governments.

"It is a mistake, unnecessary, unwise and in a certain sense tragic for honorable members to suggest hundreds of thousands of Canadian jobs will be lost," MacEachen said.

He also dismissed as false reports that Jake Warren, Canada's negotiator at the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade talks, has threatened to leave the negotiations.

The report, as quoted by Newfoundland Tory John Crosby, said Warren told representatives of Japan and the European Economic Community that Canada would walk out of the negotiations unless they improved their trade liberalization offers.

MacEachen acknowledged, however, that Canada was displeased with the the positions that Japan and the EEC had taken and may withdraw its own offer if they refused to move any farther to open their borders to Canadian fish and agricultural products.

Payout order in death

VANCOUVER (CP) — Domtar Chemicals Group was ordered Friday by the B.C. Labor Relations Board to pay $21,000 in insurance money to the parents of a part-time worker killed in an industrial accident at one of the company's plants.

University student Rory Fielkowich died in the summer of 1976 in an accident at Domtar's Blubber Bay plant on Texada Island.

The United Steel Workers union had taken the case to the LRB when Domtar refused to pay the insurance money. The company claimed it had an agreement with the insurance company that only full-time employees would be covered.

The union said, however, there was no such agreement in its contract with Domtar.

Green 60th

We sincerely want to thank all our dear friends and relatives who helped us celebrate our 60th Wedding Anniversary. It was such a pleasure to greet and visit with everyone on our big day. We would like to express our sincere appreciation for all the lovely cards, flowers and gifts we received, from friends, relatives, Queen Elizabeth, City and Government Officials. Also "thank you" to Members of the Oak Bay Chapter No. 42, O.E.S. Thank you one and all. — Gertie and Vic Green

L'Ami 50th

On June 30, 1978, Mr. and Mrs. R. O. L'Ami, of Saskatoon, Sask., and various locations in British Columbia, observed their 50th Wedding Anniversary. Because it was difficult for all members of their immediate family to gather together at one time, a happy observance took place in Oak Bay, Victoria, one week early June 24, 1978. Children and grandchildren met at the home of their son Terry L'Ami, and his wife Dawn. A late afternoon reception was held, followed by dinner at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel. The celebration was arranged by their son and daughter, the latter Dolores, now Mrs. James Sawyer of Port Alberni, B.C.

Mr. and Mrs. L'Ami were married in Saskatoon where he was employed with the Star-Phoenix and she, the former Muriel McPherson, taught at Victoria School.

THE ACES® ON BRIDGE

by IRA G. CORN JR. TEAM CAPTAIN

"Suspicion strongly rests on the unfortunate side." — Judge E. A. Scott Jr.

Today's West was indeed unfortunate when declarer scored his touchy vulnerable slam. A bit suspicious too as he moved farther away from the table before bidding the next hand. However, there was more to the play than lucky guesses and here's why declarer played as he did.

The bidding was aggressive and most optimistic and the slam was not a very good bet. Against a diamond lead, there would have been no chance and, even with a favorable lead, there were plenty of finesses to take.

West chose to lead a spade for reasons best known to himself and soon to become known to declarer. Declarer wondered about West's intentions and came to these conclusions:

Under any normal circumstances, any West would lead a diamond. Since West chose a spade instead, he must have felt that dummy's suits were not going to behave. Further, East must have the spade queen — who would dare lead away from the queen after having bid and supported a side suit?

Having read West's mind, declarer hopped up with dummy's spade king and led another spade to his own nine. The spade ace brought forth the first good news and declarer was on his way. A low heart was led to dummy's jack and the heart ace brought more good news. After cashing the heart king, a low heart was ruffed to establish the suit and the rest was easy.

Declarer took five spades, five hearts and three clubs to post the slam and declarer and West should share the credit. Declarer drew the winning inferences and played boldly; West made a silly lead and he paid the price.

YOUR CITY WATCHDOG REPORT
Number 64 — Congratulations go to John Cooper Chairman of the United Transportation Union Committee for his efforts to improve the Esquimalt Nanaimo Railway service. Many thanks to Mary Ann and the information girl at Butchart Gardens for their assistance during a visit to the gardens. It is hoped that Vicki H. will be more careful, how she opens locks in the future. It was a pleasure meeting Mary, in what appears to be the only downtown grocery. Your city's Watchdog wishes to know how many people would be interested in riding the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Dayliner on a Sunday this summer to Nanaimo, for approximately $10 return. Your City's Watchdog feels that it is not right for those businesses that continue to advertise that the Tall Ships will be visiting Victoria's Inner Harbour. Please continue to phone 383-6259, Your City's Watchdog, C. Joe Richards, if you wish information regarding city matters. Taxpayers should pickup the four-page information pamphlet by the city's comptroller explaining where your 1978 tax dollar goes, at city hall. Postscript: Please enjoy the Dominion Day Holiday. Drive Safely, the life you save may be your own.

Salmon work begins for Nimpkish

By JACK FOSSUM
Colonist Correspondent

ALERT BAY — Work has begun on a salmon restoration program for the Nimpkish River, to be undertaken by members of the Nimpkish Indian Band with the co-operation of three resident biologists on a $290,000 grant under the Salmonid Enhancement Program.

The four-year research and restoration project will be under the management of Basil Ambers of the Nimpkish band and will provide jobs for 16 workers, many of whom are graduates of the band-North Island College sponsored aquaculture program.

A target of two million eggs hatched and released is set for the four-year program, with further increases in the following years.

Biologist Gillis said the Nimpkish River sockeye run is unique in that the runs spawn early and the fish are considered extraordinarily tasty.

The run has declined from a million annually to approximately 20,000.

Under the program, a three-year study of the Nimpkish Lake system will be undertaken to determine among other things the abundance of plankton and if fertilization is needed. Juvenile sockeye spend a year in the lake and the presence of plankton determines the number of smolt that can be supported.

The study will also seek to pinpoint the problems each species of fish in the system encounters, and correct them.

Coho and spring salmon spawn in the feeder streams of the Nimpkish. These have been jeopardized by logging, according to Gillis.

The streams will be cleaned up where necessary and incubation systems will be developed for chum and pink salmon.

These species have also declined in numbers, says Gillis, but have reached a low but steady level of survival.

A counting fence is also planned for the river as well as studies to determine what kind of fish spawn in what habitat.

Folkfest

Today filled with events

PORT ALBERNI — The city will celebrate Canada's birthday with the 1978 version of Folkfest, to be held at Glenwood Centre today.

The event will begin unfolding with a parade along 10th Avenue to the centre at 9 a.m.

Official opening ceremonies will begin at 11 a.m., with Mayor Jim Robertson, Judge Francis Elford, Miss Alberni Valley Sandra Raeder and Comox-Alberni MP Hugh Anderson all in attendance.

The day's activities will include a parade of nations, fashion show, a showcase of talent, a special show and free pony rides for children, booths for many nations and an international soccer tournament.

Events at Glenwood will come to a close at 5:30 p.m., but celebrations will continue at the Alberni District high school auditorium at 8 p.m., featuring the Supertones Steel Band from Trinidad.

Admission to all events will be free.

Meanwhile in Nanaimo, there will be a different show after the weekend as that city's heritage committee will meet the bulldozers when they show up Tuesday morning to begin razing the fire-charred Haslam Hall.

The committee will be trying to preserve something cheaper than the two bay windows it had originally hoped to salvage.

The windows, which are part of the building's distinctive exterior, are on the first and second floors. Although the glass is gone, they are otherwise intact. Fire gutted the historic structure last Christmas Eve day.

The committee changed its plans when estimates for the removal of the window sections came in as high as $15,000.

The committee, armed with a budget of about $2,000, will be on site to try and pick up some of the more reasonably priced items from the former Nanaim landmark.

Learning what it's all about

Boy dies

COURTENAY — RCMP said Scott Foster, 12, of Richmond, died in hospital early Friday from injuries received June 18 in a two-vehicle collision 30 kilometres south of here.

Average Joe eyed

NANAIMO — The next step in the project to revitalize this city's downtown core will be the establishment of a development corporation to provide the vehicle to do the job.

Response to a public meeting on the redevelopment project was great, said Nanaimo architect Dave Spearing, who is co-ordinator for the project, and now the group must organize itself to get the job done.

About 200 people attended the meeting to discuss the downtown revitalization possibilities, and some of those 200 pledged $100 each as seed money for the development corporation.

Also to be considered by the group is another type of membership, for the average citizen, who does not have the $100 that a business may be willing to put into the project, but still wants some means of input.

The development corporation for the downtown, Spearing said, may go out and sell development opportunities, or it may do the development itself.

But, however it works, it will be a medium for the community itself to guide the redevelopment of its own downtown.

This type of development will give the downtown more character than any overall shopping mall development could ever have, Spearing said.

Downtown merchants, in Nanaimo and elsewhere, have a history of being individualistic, with difficulty getting together on a project, he said.

But, if the development corporation can build on that individuality instead of letting it become a stumbling block, the result will be a city centre with character and appeal, he said.

Individual problems and complaints will be tackled one by one and merchants and residents alike will be guaranteed an input into the planning of downtown redevelopment, he said.

"There were a tremendous number of excellent comments. For example, people who had previously given up on Nanaimo as a place to invest had come from Vancouver to offer their support for the project," Spearing said.

Spearing said that he was encouraged by the number of community groups that were represented at the meeting to ask for different types of input and features in downtown development. He cited the request for facilities for the handicapped, and the request for a means for the average citizen to participate in the group as examples.

"We do want all of the people of Nanaimo to be involved."

Smile show

PORT McNEILL — Grace McCarthy's request that the regional board proclaim a Smile Week has met with nothing but frowns from board members at their regular meeting June 21.

Instead of complying with the minister's request, the board passed a motion asking the provincial secretary to stop wasting taxpayers' money on "phoney campaigns."

When a letter from the minister asking reginal support for this year's Super Smile campaign came up on the agenda, director Fred Mantic of Holberg observed "they spent something like $2 million on the smile campaign, and I've just read they are spending another half-million for the super smile campaign. When I read these figures, as a taxpayer, I don't smile."

Mantic then introduced a motion that "we write to Grace McCarthy and tell her that if she would refrain from spending two and a half million on phoney campaigns, we would really smile."

Litter bits of hope on Wellington front

NANAIMO — There may be a glimmer of hope in solving Wellington junior high school's litter and vandalism problem.

At this week's school board meeting, there was dialogue on the subject between board members, Wellington's student council, the superintendent of schools and various other interested individuals.

The discussion was sparked by a memorandum from Trustee Dick Winkleman, who proposed various ways of dealing with the situation — including the cancellation of all field trips and sports activities until the problem was solved.

Student council members said they thought Winkleman's proposals were too harsh, but they did vow to make a concerted effort next year to keep the school in better condition.

After a lengthy discussion, the board agreed to act on at least some of Winkleman's proposals, one of which will see the school building and grounds upgraded over the summer months.

When the next school term begins, the students will be given a two-month trial period to prove themselves. If litter and vandalism continues, stricter measures will be taken, including the possibility of extracurricular activities being cancelled, and students being suspended.

Nanaimo school board trustees will meet with the student council in November to receive reports on how they are dealing with the problem.

Also at the meeting, a local resident who wants the return of the strap to Nanaimo schools, appeared before the board. Armed with a petition, Mrs. Marlene Haskins told the board she believed that corporal punishment in the schools would teach children to respect the rights and privileges of others. The board passed a motion calling for a public meeting on discipline. The date of the meeting will be announced later.

In other business, the board agreed in principle with a suggestion from the Qualicum school board on how to solve a boundary problem.

The agreement opens the way to further discussion with the Qualicum board on how to deal with the problem of School District 69 children attending Nanaimo schools. Qualicum has suggested that the issue can be straightened out by establishing new boundaries through an equitable trade-off of taxable lands.

In other business, trustee Winkleman said he wants to see salary negotiation for both teaching and non-teaching staff opened up to the public. That touchy issue will be discussed at the board's next meeting in July.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

Next time you go fishing in Saanich Inlet, take a good look at the rocky shore between Brentwood and the Goldstream end.

After all that preparation of soil in our gardens, it is somewhat disconcerting to see so many trees and plants growing in those weatherbeaten rocks, thriving in cracks with not much more than a cupful of washed-in soil to support them.

Actually, there are quite a few plants which will not only eke out an existence in a crack in the rocks, but will actually flourish in the vertical face of a rock wall with little or no soil around the roots.

Wallflowers, of course, come immediately to mind — that's how they got their name — and under suitable conditions, snapdragons will seed and reseed themselves in the crevices of a rock wall and seem perfectly at home there.

Certain carnations and pinks are found in nature growing in chinks of chalky cliffs — the Cheddar Pinks are a good example, growing in inaccessible steep walls of the Cheddar Gorge in England.

The pickings must be pretty slim in such a spot, and one would be inclined to think that such plants have learned to live on air!

Actually air does play a very important part in the nutrition of plants, as it is the source of all the carbon which plants must have in order to grow, but air is not the only source of food in such cliff dwellers.

Rain, for instance, contains small quantities of plant-nourishing minerals, particularly during and following flashes of lightning in thunderstorms.

The mortar in an old wall and the limestone in the rocks contain lime, providing calcium for the plant's growth, while the acid excretions from the plant's roots can dissolve and make available other minerals contained in the stone. And in this way the essentials for plant growth are gathered — even from apparently bare rock.

Another interesting aspect of plant nutrition is the way plants deal with their food as compared with the same process in humans and other animals.

We obtain our food requirements by eating highly complex compounds, all obtained directly or indirectly from the leaves of plants, and we break them down within our digestive systems into simple essential elements, excreting the useless residue.

Plants reverse this process. They take in only simple mineral salts through their roots, pump them up in solution into their leaves, and there, through a marvellous process powered by the light of the sun, the leaves build up or elaborate the complex nutrients required — the sugars, starches, proteins and carbohydrates.

Man has succeeded in duplicating this process in the laboratory as an experiment, but the process takes more than a month to complete. The plant makes this conversion from simple minerals and gasses to complex nutrient compounds in a matter of seconds.

I have mentioned before that every scrap of food we eat comes directly or indirectly from the leaves of plants. If you look over your pantry shelf and refrigerator, I don't think you can find a single item — except salt — that didn't originate in the vegetable kingdom.

Grains, seeds, fruits and root vegetables are all formed from nutrients manufactured in the leaves. All our meat animals are fed with grains and leaves.

This holds even for seafood. Big fish eat little fish, and so on down the line to the last link in the biological chain, tiny floating sea plants called plankton.

Whether you like it or not, all of us, in the final analysis, are strict vegetarians!

Stuart Rosenberg

Recently, a newspaper story of the untimely, accidental death of one of the world's great men sent a shiver down readers' spines. Not that he died — but how he died.

The report described how Sir Raymund Hart, the man who developed Britain's radar defence system at the outbreak of the Second World War, and one of the great geniuses in the field of electronics, came to his end: He picked up the live end of a 240-volt electrical connection while barefoot.

"It was the sort of mistake a chap who could not change a fuse would be unlikely to make," said his son. "And yet my father, a genius in electronics, made just such a mistake. Maybe he became over-confident about electricity."

Of course, Sir Raymund may have been daydreaming while intricately involved in pondering a serious scientific problem and in the pursuit of the complicated got struck down by the obvious. Most likely, however, he made a foolish error in judgment — even scientists are prone to fatal mistakes — errors of judgment in their own area of expertness, which even laymen wouldn't think of committing.

Ours is an "expert" society so highly involved and so technical that most of us leave decisions and conclusions to those whom we think are more competent. We worship the specialist and deify the technician. But, truth to tell, while they often look like gods, they sometimes act like fools. They take the adulation of the public far too seriously, imagining themselves really to be what the less-informed public thinks they are.

There are no greater follies than those of the so-called wise man. When he errs — he errs big! He may be sure of his knowledge; he is, often, much less sure of himself. Sometimes his overconcentration and "expertness" serve to trip him up; he thought he knew everything, and he should have known better.

Hitler's professors were men of great scientific achievement who stood in the forefront of human intellectual attainment. But they were capable of being used and prostituted to destroy human life barbarously — in cheap, efficient and scientific ways. They were outstanding technicians — but as men, they were dupes and knaves. They made no small, insignificant errors — theirs were big, massive — expert!

We admire proficiency and mastery and in our technological age, those who know a lot about precious little reach top status. In blind unsophistication, we snub broad, human knowledge in favor of "specialized" information. Or what is worse: We disqualify the good man on the grounds that he is not the best man. The obverse is more likely: The best man is not always a good man.

Over-confident in what he thought he knew about electricity, Sir Raymund went to his death. Here is a parable for our times, when men are so certain that they will get to the moon and master the heavens. What about this poor earth? What has their confident knowledge achieved for them here — here, where the "experts" know not enough to save their own lives?

Taught the prophet with incisive understanding:

"Let not the wise man
glory in his wisdom;
Neither let the mighty man glory in his might;
Let not the rich man glory
in his riches . . ."

The real wisdom lies not in the confidence that we know, but in humble recognition of how little we do.

Humility, not arrogance, may yet lead us to that greater wisdom which can help save us all.

Melvin Maddocks

One of the glories of summer that excites the imagination — say, about February — is the picnic. Idyllic, with a slight accent of nostalgia, the picnic (as viewed from winter) depicts itself in the style of fin-de-siecle Impressionism.

Ladies in hoop skirts, sensible shirtwaists, and hats with ribbons sit across a spread tablecloth from men in Norfolk jackets, flannel trousers and boaters hats. Everything is seen through a filter, as in a dream — the grass, the river, the trees on the other side, the sky above.

Not an ant is visible. No breeze lifts the corners of the tablecloth from the grass or blows dust on the open loaf of bread until one's teeth grit on edge. The portents of rain are nil. What Garden-of-Eden bliss! Everybody looks as if it would be possible to sit or semi-recline in those propped-L positions forever.

In February, in March, in April the picnicker can hardly wait. Then in May when summer dreams become possibilities and in June, when there are really no excuses, the picnic-fantasist backs off as if he had set up this scene under a beehive. Why?

Partly it is that business of dismal actuality — ants on the watermelon, sand in the sandwiches, the patter of unpredicted raindrops on melting ice cubes. But even more than Nature's little irregularities the real picnic-damperer is people. We late 20th-century folk, who know how to do everything, no longer know how to picnic.

The plastic basket of peanut butter sandwiches and potato chips, the Styrofoam chest of soda pop ("Did we forget the bottle-opener again?") — this picnic of expediency, so resembling a highway stop at a gas station's slot machines, is not the answer. Leisure, grace, the whole sunny serenity of the picnic-in-our-February-head is missing.

But if not the fast-food-picnic route, where does one go? Once upon a time there were catered picnics — the stuff Edith Wharton novels are made from. The picnickers journeyed to their site in chauffeur-driven limousines. One imagines liveried servants smoothing down unruly blades of grass as they lay out the white linen, the sterling silver, the Wedgwood, and — voila! — the pheasant under glass.

We would not go that far. But every June about this time we do read the chapter on Picnics in Emily Post. The menus are enough to make a picnicker go happily mad in the June-day sun. Steak, lamb chop, swordfish, chicken, lobster, baked potatoes, corn, mixed green salad, and for dessert angel cake and fresh strawberries.

Mrs. Post is one of those picnickers who accept no gormandizing limitation. If one were to lift the roof off the Ritz, that would be about what a Post picnic guest is entitled to.

Every June we slap Etiquette: The Blue Book of Social Usage — with all decorum, of course — and shout out loud: "That's the picnic for us!"

But then every June we read on about "check lists" and the imperative need for picnics to be "organized" and "well managed."

"It is important," Mrs. Post writes very firmly, "to make as careful preparations as you would were you inviting people to dine or to lunch with you at home."

The vexations, it seems, even begin with the fellow picnickers you invite. "Nothing," Mrs. Post warns, "is so dampening to the enjoyment of a picnic as the presence of one or more faultfinders who never lift a finger, but sit and complain."

Well, that's our friends all right.

At any rate, whether our fellow picnickers are complainers or not, we're just not up to slaving over a hot briquet. Nor do we wish the task on anybody else. We just want to pose there like the people in Impressionist paintings and be miraculously fed Mrs. Post's menu — we're very partial to angel cake.

The difference between fantasy and actuality always has been one of our problems anyway. When we get it sorted out in all the other areas of life, some June, we swear, we're going to have an nice, simple — and absolutely perfect — picnic.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Don't know whether it's some kind of modern record, but the wedding of Marjoe Gortner and Candy Clark the day after the final day of shooting on When You Comin' Back, Red Ryder? is unique.

Location romances between the stars of movies happen all the time. There's always so much time between camera set-ups. What else are you going to do? Play chess like Duke Wayne?

Last one I remember was Buddy Rogers and Mary Pickford, when they made My Best Girl in the late 1920s. And they're still married.

Ingrid Bergman was so intense in her acting that she fell in love with most of her leading men. Gary Cooper once told me that during Saratoga Trunk, he never had a woman so in love with him as Ingrid was. The day the picture finished, he couldn't get her on the phone.

On the same subject, Burt Bacharach, following his successful tour of South America, embarks on a tour of the United States with the gorgeous Jane Oliver. First two stops are Niles, Ill., and Pine Knob, Mich.

Now, what's a sex symbol like Burt going to do in a place called Pine Knob with a beautiful girl singer in his show?

Got a call from a friend in London who said he listened to me on the BBC tribute to Bob Hope on his birthday. Said Lord Laurence Olivier was my opening act and Danny Kaye the narrator-host.

Bet the show played big in Eltham, England, where Hope was born 75 years ago.

Told Charles Thompson, the producer of the show when he taped it here, that Hope is so rich he doesn't even carry an American Express card. He takes Karl Malden with him on all his trips.

45-acre freeze brings dispair

The 45-acre land freeze in the Highlands district has put at least one resident on the verge of foreclosure, Capital Region Board chairman James Campbell told board members Wednesday.

He said the subdivision restriction had been imposed some years ago when high density, low cost housing had been planned for the district, and the provincial government was doing land banking. At that time it was the quickest way of ensuring that individuals did not subdivide until over-all development had taken place.

Since that time, Campbell said, he had had a number of requests to have minimum lot sizes reduced and the planning department had been asked to recommend changes.

"Unfortunately the planning department has fallen into the habit of thinking the 45-acre parcel size is an end in itself, rather than a temporary means to achieve an objective, and nothing much has happened," said Campbell.

Some residents, he said, were acutely distressed because they bought thinking that at a later date they would be able to do some modest development on the land to offset costs.

"Now we have one person who is being foreclosed because there is no way this person can realize anything from the property."

The board had on hand a letter from Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis who said he had had requests for assistance from four property owners who were concerned about their plight within the 45-acre minimum parcel freeze.

"They see no means of reducing the extent of their capital assets and overhead without surrendering everything they have worked so hard to build up," said Curtis.

Curtis asked the board to examine the problem and to consider the fact that the minimum parcel size across the border in Saanich is 10 acres, and that people who can afford to hold large acreages within such a short distance of downtown Victoria would probably support the 45-acre minimum.

Curtis said that continuation of the freeze now that a local settlement plan had been prepared might be construed as denial of reasonable use to allow the district to gain a greenbelt without paying compensation.

Campbell said he had some sympathy with Curtis' position.

It was decided to write to the lawyer representing the person threatened with foreclosure and tell him that active consideration was being given to lifting the freeze in the Highlands.

Langford director Ed Lubick said he hoped that people would not interpret the move as meaning that vast changes were in the offing.

"We haven't given any sort of commitment, but we do want to give some sort of relief where we can and where it is necessary."

Over-all changes, he said, would come only after careful planning.

"We want to do this properly, and I don't want to raise false hopes that vast changes will take place overnight."

Satellite marks world day

A Toronto weather satellite data station was inaugurated this month by federal Environment Minister Len Marchand to mark United Nations World Environment Day.

The receiving station has a 10-metre dish to receive and process earth pictures from an international weather-watching satellite.

The satellite was launched by the United States and was one of five put into stationary orbit as part of a global atmospheric research program sponsored by the World Meteorological Organization.

Seattle tourist link to go

By DON COLLINS

Colonist reporter

The strong Victoria-Seattle tourism link is due to be snipped Wednesday by a labor dispute that will idle the Princess Marguerite.

The strike is set for the early stages of a promising tourism season, although the union involved said Friday it was postponing action until after the current holiday weekend out of respect for the travellers.

"We were in a legal position to strike Thursday following a vote favoring a strike by 87 per cent," said an official of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild. "But obviously the ship's officers felt they didn't want to disrupt the public holiday weekend. They didn't want to take any action without first giving the public fair warning."

The guild covers the Marguerite's 17 officers, who include the ship's master, chief engineer and other top personnel.

The crew belong to two other unions, the Seafarers International Union and the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks.

Guild officials say they have been assured the other two unions will co-operate, although action on the part of the officers alone would be enough to idle the vessel.

Capt. Arnie Davis, western secretary of the guild, told the Colonist the strike has been called as a result of failure to negotiate a new contract.

The plan is to complete the weekend sailings, as well as those for the American July 4 holiday Tuesday. The Marguerite would then sail back to Victoria from Seattle on her usual early run Wednesday and tie up for the duration of the strike.

Union officials said the sides had failed to reach agreement on a number of points and indicated that the main barrier involved working conditions. They said the B.C. Steamship Co., the company established by the province to operate the Marguerite, had offered a wage increase within the anti-inflation guidelines.

Reached at Seattle, company general manager Arthur Elworthy was evasive when questioned by the Colonist about the dispute. He said only that guideline conditions had been met.

Oddly enough, the main adversaries were reportedly aboard the Marguerite together when she set sail at 4:30 p.m. for Seattle. An aide said Elworthy was travelling in the ship and would be away for the weekend. The union officials who informed him of the strike plan in the afternoon also sailed to Seattle and planned to return today. They said they were making the trip to discuss the situation with the officers on shift.

Blind-filled auto hits truck, 5 die

BOSSIER CITY, La. (UPI) — A station wagon returning blind students and adults from a picnic slammed into the back of an out-of-gas 18-wheel truck Friday, killing five persons and injuring another five, two seriously.

State police said the station wagon, owned by the Shreveport Association for the Blind and driven by a woman supervisor with normal vision, crashed into the back of the stalled truck on an eastbound lane of Interstate 20.

Officials said the blind adults and children were returning from a day's outing at Caney Lake in Webster Parish. They said the stalled truck was parked legally on the shoulder of the road and was not blocking highway traffic.

"There was no violation as far as the truck was concerned," a police spokesman said. "The station wagon is demolished."

Police withheld the names of both the dead and injured pending notification of relatives.

The injured persons were taken by ambulance to Confederate Memorial Hospital. A spokesman in the emergency room said the injured, all identified as legally blind, were admitted to the hospital.

Police said four of the five persons killed were adults and one was a teenager. A spokesman said an investigation was underway to determine how the 1976 Plymouth station wagon veered from its proper lane into the back of the truck.

Police said one of the truck's drivers was asleep beneath the truck when the station wagon rammed into the back, but he was unhurt. The other driver had gone for gas.

Barton succeeds Ambassador Mario Rolon Anaya of Bolivia.

Parliament adjourns amid major concerns

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament shut down for the summer Friday amid continuing concern about the state of the country, the economy—and just when MPs will face a general election.

Throughout the parliamentary sitting that opened last October, federal politicians spent most of the time on problems of unemployment, inflation, Quebec independence, government secrecy and RCMP wrongdoing.

However, as MPs and Senators adjourned for a 100-day summer recess, the problems still remain and some of them are worse than they were when the Queen read the Speech from the Throne opening the third session of the 30th Parliament Oct. 18.

And now, as then, they are left guessing about when Prime Minister Trudeau will call the general election that must be held within the next year.

Indications of popular discontent about the way things are going prompted Prime Minister Trudeau to postpone an election that had been expected in June or July. Speculation now centres on an October date.

When the parliamentary session began there were 838,000 jobless Canadians for a seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate of 8.2 per cent. The inflation rate was 8.3 per cent. The Canadian dollar was at its lowest international value in eight years and the federal spending deficit for the year was a projected record $8 billion.

The Parti Quebecois, committed to taking Quebec out of Confederation, had been governing the province for nearly a year. A royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing had been set up to investi-

Pierre forgets theme

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau had written so many Canada Day messages he couldn't remember which was which Friday when asked why one was pessimistic.

"You've got me there," he said at a news conference when asked why one of Trudeau's July 1 messages dwelled on "the negatives of national unity."

"I don't know what particular one you are referring to."

"The July 1 message to Canadians," Trudeau was pressed.

"I know, but let us get a list of them."

"Well, are you feeling pessimistic or optimistic about the national situation, because this is a very pessimistic message?" he was asked.

"Well, show it to me," asked Trudeau. "I can't believe it would be pessimistic."

He said that recently he has "written some messages for St. Jean-Baptiste Day . . . some for Canada Day . . . some for TV . . . some for radio . . . some for various publications who wanted a message from the prime

Crow cooks goose in power knockout

A crow hit B.C. Hydro power station wires in Crofton on Friday, knocking out power in the Crofton area and the Gulf Islands.

The power was off from about 4 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., a Hydro spokesman said.

The collision caused fuses in the main transformer to blow, which knocked out power in the circuit that serves both Crofton and the Gulf Islands.

What was merely a power outage for some, was death for the crow.

"The crow was fried," she said.

Truck blast injures 130

NEW YORK (UPI) — An ice cream truck exploded among lunchtime crowds in the Wall Street area Friday, injuring more than 130 persons in a terrifying hail of smashed glass and shrapnel-like steel.

Police said it would take two days of analysing the debris to determine the cause of the explosion. But officers said two possibilities were a bomb or a faulty refrigerator compressor in the back of the truck.

Manhattan hospitals reported treating 132 persons for injuries in the blast. At least 16 were listed in critical condition. There were no reports of deaths.

A spokesman at Beekman Downtown Hospital, two blocks from the scene, said 114 persons had been treated for injuries, with at least 15 persons listed in critical condition.

Five more were treated at St. Vincent's and seven at Bellevue.

A woman, identified as Pat Badone, 23, was admitted to the New York-Cornell Medical Centre burn unit, where she was reported in critical condition with burns over 34 percent of her body, a fractured skull and two broken legs.

The 23-year-old driver of the ice cream truck, Lee Balter, underwent an operation at Beekman to remove shattered metal bits, but officials said his wounds were not serious.

Mill hunts for bomb

MacMillan Bloedel's lumber mill at Chemainus was cordoned off about 6:30 p.m. Friday because of a bomb scare, but the bomb turned out to be a facsimile made with three sticks of wood taped to a wooden block with a dial.

Chemainus RCMP said the phoney bomb was discovered by a security guard, and that the incident was being investigated.

A bomb disposal specialist from Duncan handled the operation, police said, and no one was working in the mill when the "bomb" was discovered.

Governor calling in

Energy will be the main topic on the agenda when Idaho Governor John Evans and Premier Bennett meet in Victoria next week.

"The governor is particularly interested in exploring the possibility of his state purchasing energy from B.C.," the premier said.

It will be Evans' first visit to B.C. since taking office in January, 1977.

The Colonist will not publish Sunday, owing to staff observance of the Dominion Day holiday. Today's issue contains features including the* Islander *magazine which normally appear as part of the Sunday paper. Next regular editions will appear Tuesday.

1956 Suez plot papers vanish

Sevres deal just too embarrassing?

LONDON (Reuter) — Embarrassed British officials Friday refused to say whether they had mislaid or destroyed the text of a secret agreement between Britain, France and Israel to invade Egypt in 1956.

The charge was made in a report by the Guardian newspaper, which said the signed agreement, drawn up on October 24 of that year at a clandestine meeting in Sevres, near Paris, spelled out the moves made by the three countries in the wake of President Nasser's decision to nationalize the Suez Canal.

The Israelis invaded the Sinai desert on October 29. Britain and France the next day demanded a ceasefire, which was accepted by Israel but refused by Egypt. On October 31, British and French aircraft bombed Egyptian airfields. On November 5 British paratroops landed at Port Said and tried to capture the Suez Canal.

They had to withdraw under international pressure, but controversy has raged since then about the extent to which the three nations colluded in what has often been described as the last imperial adventure.

The late Selwyn Lloyd, British foreign secretary during the Suez crisis, says in a book being published here next week that secret talks were held by the three countries at Sevres.

He says that the document that was signed was only an agreed account of the conversations held in a villa there.

But those conversations noted in accurate detail what happened when hostilities began, the Guardian said today.

A British foreign office spokesman today refused to deny or confirm questions about the Guardian's report that the foreign office "has mislaid, and may have destroyed" the text of the Sevres protocol (agreement). The spokesman took cover behind a government ruling that secret policy documents cannot be disclosed until after an interval of 30 years.

Earlier this week, Sir Hugh Greene, former British Broadcasting Corporation director-general, disclosed he had been told by one of Britain's most senior officials: "Damned good care has been taken to see that the whole truth never does emerge."

Greene attributed this remark to the late Sir Norman Brook, then-secretary to the cabinet. He made the disclosure in a letter to the London Times. "I assumed at the time, and still assume, that he was referring to the destruction of important papers." Greene said.

Artist slashes his own faces

VENICE, Italy (UPI) — A police hunt for the slasher of paintings at Venice's prestigious Biennale Arts Festival ended Friday with the surrender of the artist himself, who said he defaced his works as a "creative act."

Viennese artist Arnulf Ranier, 49, rushed to Biennale headquarters a few hours after a night watchman discovered that several of his paintings had been vandalized.

The night watchman alerted police, who were curious as to how the paintings came to be defaced because the exhibit is closed to the public until Sunday.

Ranier explained that he himself had entered the gallery to slash the paintings—most depicting the human face.

The Austrian said that the "creative act" under his "trangressional" style was complete only with the destruction of the finished product.

Dairyliner just around corner?

The fight to save the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway passenger service is starting to move into the big leagues.

A dairy's money and an advertising company's promotional know-how have been added to the grassroots movement that has been underway for some time.

This comes on top of Wednesday's disclosure that the provincial government is going to throw an unspecified amount of money into the campaign.

A special meeting at Duncan Thursday night to form an Island steering committee for the battle ahead was told an advertising company has been promised $10,000 by one of its clients, a dairy firm, for a massive campaign that will promote both the E&N passenger service and the dairy.

The promoters hope to make much of Premier Bennett's special trip on the E&N July 11.

The 15 people who showed up for Thursday's meeting were told the premier's trip would probably be the media event of the day, and that efforts should be made to have crowds at the various stations to greet Bennett.

The Canadian Transport Commission, acting on a CP Rail application, ruled earlier that the service was an economic loser and would be dropped. The date of execution has been delayed to Dec. 13 to allow the province time to appeal the decision in the courts.

Tribute was paid Thursday night to John Cooper, chairman of the E&N employees committee which has been leading the way in the battle to save the service.

The meeting was told the real fight began about two weeks ago when some 40 employees—members of the United Transportation Union—scraped up $500 of their own money.

On Wednesday, Cooper and others met the premier at his request.

Those at Thursday night's meeting were told that business has been better than usual for some time now on the Victoria-Courtenay passenger run, and that maintaining substantial passenger loads was essential to saving the service.

"It seems to me the last thing the CPR wants is promotion," said Victoria Ald. Larry Ryan. "You know—out of sight, out of mind."

Cooper repeated what had been reported earlier in the Colonist—that VIA Rail is taking over responsibility for the E&N, as it is doing with other passenger services, and will put a greatly reduced fares schedule into effect within days.

Seniors stand up

CAMPBELL RIVER — Some 180 delegates from 135 branches of the Old Age Pensioners' Organization called at the OAPO convention here for a hike in old age security basic pension to $200 a month, with cost-of-living allowance as well as continuation with payment of pension to the spouse of a dead pensioner for six months.

Of 58 resolutions presented, 20 were adopted and these will be passed on to the national pensioner association.

Meanwhile, resolutions for the provincial government will be presented to a full cabinet meeting by the federated legislative council, an umbrella group representing the OAPO and 25 other senior citizen organizations.

The convention passed several resolutions dealing with housing, aimed at the provision of low-rent units by the senior levels of government.

A recommendation that all apartments have a bedroom, a balcony and showers accessible to persons in wheelchairs was approved and will be sent to Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., which provides funds for many senior citizen housing programs.

The federal government also will be asked to reduce the age limit of basic pensions to 60 years of age, on a progressive scale.

A resolution from the Campbell River branch to request the province to expedite housing projects was passed.

The resolution stated that there was an urgent need for personal and intermediate care homes in smaller communities, and "whereas the departments of health and human resources cause long delays in processing these projects, and it takes from two to five years to get plans and financing processed, therefore be it resolved that (these departments) be requested to expedite these necessary projects."

The convention passed resolutions urging abolition of sales tax on fuel and utilities, also asking the provincial government pay basic amounts toward costs of hearing aids with batteries, eye glasses, dental care and artificial limbs.

Two executive board members, vice-president Ollie Travers of Campbell River and treasurer Sara Riffal of Port Coquitlam, were re-elected while two new board members, Rev. Rollo Boas of Cortes Island and Jack Roberts of Victoria, were elected.

Mayor was no boaster

TAHSIS — Tahsis Mayor Bill Lore proved he wasn't boasting when he had vowed to walk 42 miles from Tahsis to Gold River.

He not only completed the walk the other day, but cut two hours off the time he had estimated it would take, by doing it in 10 hours, 50 minutes.

Lore was one of 20 people who entered the walkathon, staged to raise funds for two Tahsis community projects.

Initial figures indicated they raised about $7,000.

The 51-year-old mayor came in fourth and raised $1,600 in pledges from merchants in Tahsis and Campbell River.

First place went to Surrinder Dhillon, who needed seven hours, 55 minutes. Only nine starters completed the walk bit the dropouts were mainly children.

Litter bit of hope on Wellington horizon

NANAIMO — There may be a glimmer of hope in solving Wellington junior high school's litter and vandalism problem.

At this week's school board meeting, there was dialogue on the subject between board members, Wellington's student council, the superintendent of schools and various other interested individuals.

The discussion was sparked by a memorandum from Trustee Dick Winkleman, who proposed various ways of dealing with the situation — including the cancellation of all field trips and sports activities until the problem was solved.

Student council members said they thought Winkleman's proposals were too harsh, but they did vow to make a concerted effort next year to keep the school in better condition.

After a lengthy discussion, the board agreed to act on at least some of Winkleman's proposals, one of which will see the school building and grounds upgraded over the summer months.

When the next school term begins, the students will be given a two-month trial period to prove themselves. If litter and vandalism continues, stricter measures will be taken, including the possibility of extracurricular activities being cancelled, and students being suspended.

Nanaimo school board trustees will meet with the student council in November to receive reports on how they are dealing with the problem.

Also at the meeting, a local resident who wants the return of the strap to Nanaimo schools, appeared before the board. Armed with a petition, Mrs. Marlene Haskins told the board she believed that corporal punishment in the schools would teach children to respect the rights and privileges of others. The board passed a motion calling for a public meeting on discipline. The date of the meeting will be announced later.

In other business, the board agreed in principle with a suggestion from the Qualicum school board on how to solve a boundary problem.

The agreement opens the way to further discussion with the Qualicum board on how to deal with the problem of School District 69 children attending Nanaimo schools. Qualicum has suggested that the issue can be straightened out by establishing new boundaries through an equitable trade-off of taxable lands.

In other business, trustee Winkleman said he wants to see salary negotiation for both teaching and non-teaching staff opened up to the public. That touchy issue will be discussed at the board's next meeting in July.

Three die in crash

PARKSVILLE — A mother and her two daughters were killed Thursday in a three-vehicle accident at French Creek near here.

Dolores Virgin and her daughters Pamela, 13, and Laurie, 15, all of Qualicum Beach, were killed in the crash which tied up traffic on the Island Highway for about two hours. Involved were the Virgin vehicle, one other car and a large truck.

The driver of the other car, Carol Snow of Burnaby, was in hospital in stable condition. The truck driver had only minor injuries.

Folkfest

Today filled with events

PORT ALBERNI — The city will celebrate Canada's birthday with the 1978 version of Folkfest, to be held at Glenwood Centre today.

The event will begin unfolding with a parade along 10th Avenue to the centre at 9 a.m.

Official opening ceremonies will begin at 11 a.m., with Mayor Jim Robertson, Judge Francis Elford, Miss Alberni Valley Sandra Raeder and Comox-Alberni MP Hugh Anderson all in attendance.

The day's activities will include a parade of nations, fashion show, a showcase of talent, a special show and free pony rides for children, booths for many nations and an international soccer tournament.

Events at Glenwood will come to a close at 5:30 p.m., but celebrations will continue at the Alberni District high school auditorium at 8 p.m., featuring the Supertones Steel Band from Trinidad.

Admission to all events will be free.

Meanwhile in Nanaimo, there will be a different show after the weekend as that city's heritage committee will meet the bulldozers when they show up Tuesday morning to begin razing the fire-charred Haslam Hall.

The committee will be trying to preserve something cheaper than the two bay windows it had originally hoped to salvage.

The windows, which are part of the building's distinctive exterior, are on the first and second floors. Although the glass is gone, they are otherwise intact. Fire gutted the historic structure last Christmas Eve day.

The committee changed its plans when estimates for the removal of the window sections came in as high as $15,000.

The committee, armed with a budget of about $2,000, will be on site to try and pick up some of the more reasonably priced items from the former Nanaim landmark.

Learning what it's all about

Average Joe eyed

NANAIMO — The next step in the project to revitalize this city's downtown core will be the establishment of a development corporation to provide the vehicle to do the job.

Response to a public meeting on the redevelopment project was great, said Nanaimo architect Dave Spearing, who is co-ordinator for the project, and now the group must organize itself to get the job done.

About 200 people attended the meeting to discuss the downtown revitalization possibilities, and some of those 200 pledged $100 each as seed money for the development corporation.

Also to be considered by the group is another type of membership, for the average citizen, who does not have the $100 that a business may be willing to put into the project, but still wants some means of input.

The development corporation for the downtown, Spearing said, may go out and sell development opportunities, or it may do the development itself.

But, however it works, it will be a medium for the community itself to guide the redevelopment of its own downtown.

This type of development will give the downtown more character than any overall shopping mall development could ever have, Spearing said.

Downtown merchants, in Nanaimo and elsewhere, have a history of being individualistic, with difficulty getting together on a project, he said.

But, if the development corporation can build on that individuality instead of letting it become a stumbling block, the result will be a city centre with character and appeal, he said.

Individual problems and complaints will be tackled one by one and merchants and residents alike will be guaranteed an input into the planning of downtown redevelopment, he said.

"There were a tremendous number of excellent comments. For example, people who had previously given up on Nanaimo as a place to invest had come from Vancouver to offer their support for the project," Spearing said.

Spearing said that he was encouraged by the number of community groups that were represented at the meeting to ask for different types of input and features in downtown development. He cited the request for facilities for the handicapped, and the request for a means for the average citizen to participate in the group as examples.

"We do want all of the people of Nanaimo to be involved."

Nanaimo gravel clash

Region taking strong steps on soil removal

By DONNA REIMER
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — An Andre Road gravel pit owner has been ordered by the regional district to stop his gravel and soil removal until he can obtain a permit.

Four residents of the area wrote letters and 40 people signed a petition to protest the gravel pit, which is in operation on agricultural reserve land.

The residents asked the regional district not to issue a soil removal permit for the property, and to take whatever action necessary to stop the soil removal.

The board was told that the property owner has received two cease-and-desist orders from the B.C. Land Commission, with no apparent effect.

Regional director for the area, Norm Hobson, told the board that he had visited the property and was amazed at the size of the pit.

"There's a hole in the ground there you could put Beban Park in and never see it."

Hobson said that he had met with the residents of the area, and had come up with a resolution that satisfied the residents' requests.

The resolution, which the board passed unanimously, orders the property owner, John Lussier, to refrain from removing soil from the property until he has a permit.

The region will post the property and take whatever other action it can to stop the operation.

The residents said that in addition to the fact the operation was being conducted illegally on agricultural reserve land, they had been bothered by the gravel trucks in the area, and that the soil removal posed a threat to a nearby dairy farm.

Meanwhile, Nanaimo Ald. Nelson Allen was criticized by a fellow alderman last week for "sensationalism" in a newsletter he had sent to residents of Northfield, the ward Allen represents on council.

Ald. Alex Virostko said that he hoped the residents of Northfield were smart enough to see through Allen's "sensationalism" and criticisms of fellow council members on matters such as the city budget.

Virostko said that Allen had been misleading in his statements about how much the city budget had increased in 1978, by not pointing out how much of the increase was due to school taxes.

But, Allen was not accepting any of Virostko's critique, saying that the city should have been able to cut taxes by the nine per cent that assessments had gone up.

And, he said, blaming other jurisdictions for tax increases was a favorite smoke- screen.

Virostko asked Allen, who was acting mayor, to leave the chair to accept the criticism.

But he was cut short in his criticism when Ald. Ray Brookbank asked if the discussion was going to lead to a motion.

Virostko warned council that he was not finished with his criticism, promising to "hit the nail on the head" at the next council meeting.

Elsewhere, a compromise schedule has settled this year's battle of the Commercial Street mall.

Nanaimo city council has agreed to allow two blocks of Commercial Street to be closed two half-weeks in July, instead of the originally planned two full weeks, for a special downtown shopping promotion.

Commercial Street merchants advocating the mall idea told council that they thought the partial schedule for the mall was a compromise that would satisfy most of the opponents to the mall idea.

Last week, the City Centre Association presented council with the request for the street closure for the mall, saying that the vote by Commercial Street businesses was 29 to 10 in favor of the idea.

But this week, a counter-petition was presented to council with 13 businesses opposed.

A confounded City Centre Association representative told the council this week that at least one of the names on the counter-petition was also on the petition in favor of the mall idea.

And, he said, he had understood that the merchants opposed to the mall idea had agreed to the partial schedule one day before they wrote the letter of opposition.

The council approved the idea of the mall for July 19 through 22, with the mall to be repeated the next week, July 26 through 29, if the majority of the merchants agree it worked well the first week and should be continued the second weekend. Commercial Street will be closed between Terminal Avenue and Bastion Street.

Boy dies

COURTENAY — RCMP said Scott Foster, 12, of Richmond, died in hospital early Friday from injuries received June 18 in a two-vehicle collision 30 kilometres south of here.

Airport soon on air

CAMPBELL RIVER — The local municipal airport will have a new $162,000 air radio station. Provision for construction of the facility has been included in this year's capital works budget of the federal department of transport and will receive top priority, according to Don Mills, superintendent of airways.

The facility will be transferred from Comox to Campbell River and two or three staff members will be transferred here. Mills says marine service will remain in Comox but the air radio portion will switch to Campbell River. Comox is covered by military equipment and a radio service there is becoming redundant.

Plans call for a 17,000 to 19,000-sqare-foot, two-storey building adjacent to the present terminal, with an array of telecommunication equipment, teletypes and radio equipment. Mills also foresees a control tower "in the not-too-distant future." He said the department is doing a study to determine priorities for additional towers.

Department officials are awaiting word of a land transaction between the provincial government and forest companies to clear a section of timberland adjacent to the airport.

Smile show

PORT McNEILL — Grace McCarthy's request that the regional board proclaim a Smile Week has met with nothing but frowns from board members at their regular meeting June 21.

Instead of complying with the minister's request, the board passed a motion asking the provincial secretary to stop wasting taxpayers' money on "phoney campaigns."

When a letter from the minister asking reginal support for this year's Super Smile campaign came up on the agenda, director Fred Mantic of Holberg observed "they spent something like $2 million on the smile campaign, and I've just read they are spending another half-million for the super smile campaign. When I read these figures, as a taxpayer, I don't smile."

Mantic then introduced a motion that "we write to Grace McCarthy and tell her that if she would refrain from spending two and a half million on phoney campaigns, we would really smile."

Salmon work begins for Nimpkish

By JACK FOSSUM
Colonist Correspondent

ALERT BAY — Work has begun on a salmon restoration program for the Nimpkish River, to be undertaken by members of the Nimpkish Indian Band with the co-operation of three resident biologists on a $290,000 grant under the Salmonid Enhancement Program.

The four-year research and restoration project will be under the management of Basil Ambers of the Nimpkish band and will provide jobs for 16 workers, many of whom are graduates of the band-North Island College sponsored aquaculture program.

The three resident biologists are Dan Gillis, Michael Berry and Bill Pennell.

A target of two million eggs hatched and released is set for the four-year program, with further increases in the following years.

Biologist Gillis said the Nimpkish River sockeye run is unique in that the runs spawn early and the fish are considered extraordinarily tasty.

The run has declined from a million annually to approximately 20,000.

Under the program, a three-year study of the Nimpkish Lake system will be undertaken to determine among other things the abundance of plankton and if fertilization is needed. Juvenile sockeye spend a year in the lake and the presence of plankton determines the number of smolt that can be supported.

The study will also seek to pinpoint the problems each species of fish in the system encounters, and correct them.

Coho and spring salmon spawn in the feeder streams of the Nimpkish. These have been jeopardized by logging, according to Gillis.

The streams will be cleaned up where necessary and incubation systems will be developed for chum and pink salmon.

These species have also declined in numbers, says Gillis, but have reached a low but steady level of survival.

A counting fence is also planned for the river as well as studies to determine what kind of fish spawn in what habitat.

Okker bounces Vilas with brilliant display

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Tom Okker, a 34-year-old Dutchman, turned the clock back 10 years Friday and hustled the highly-rated Guillermo Vilas out of the Wimbledon tennis championships with a dazzling display of volleys.

Okker crushed the Argentine left-hander 6-3, 6-4, 6-2—and it was as one-sided as it the scores indicated. Okker sped around the court much as he did in the 1960s when he first burst upon the world circuit to be nicknamed the Flying Dutchman.

"I haven't played so well for years," Okker said as he moved into the last 16. The 25-year-old Vilas was seeded No. 4.

After rain had blanked out Thursday's program the fans—around 35,000 of them—crammed into the All-England Club to see a fairly full day of tennis. Rain caused only brief stoppages this time.

Bjorn Borg of Sweden, seeking his third straight Wimbledon title, rolled past Peter McNamara of Australia 6-2, 6-2, 6-4 and reached the third round. Borg is one round behind his rivals because of the weather holdups.

Jimmy Connors of the United States, seeded No. 2 behind Borg, did not play Friday. Vitas Gerulaitis, the third seed, downed fellow American Sherwood Stewart 9-8, 6-0, 6-2 and advanced to the last 16.

Four other seeded players went through to the round of 16. Sandy Mayer of the U.S. eliminated Mark Edmondson of Australia 6-4, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, and Raul Ramirez of Mexico ousted Bob Frawley of Australia 6-4, 7-5, 6-3.

John Newcombe, three-time Wimbledon champion, defeated Phil Dent 6-1, 1-6, 6-4, 6-4, continuing his string of all-Australian duels. He defeated countrymen Dale Collings and Ross Case in the other rounds.

Still another Australian, 14th-seeded John Alexander, came from behind to beat Anand Amritraj, one of two Indian brothers, 5-7, 6-3, 7-5, 6-2.

American winners included Tom Gullikson, who swept Mike Machette aside 6-4, 6-4 6-2, and Tom Gorman, who ended Britain's title hopes by disposing of Mark Cox 4-6, 8-6, 8-6, 7-5.

With the tournament not yet at the halfway point, only 11 of the 16 original seeds in the men's draw still are in contention for the $34,200 first prize.

Vilas, with his flowing ground strokes, generous backswing and follow-through, appeared perfectly at ease in the first six games, as both held service. But then Okker suddenly sprang to life.

In five unbelievably one-sided games, the Dutchman won 20 points out of a possible 21 and went from 3-3 to win the first set and take a 2-0 lead in the second.

Okker left his opponent stranded with superb passing shots and angled volleys that clipped the sidelines with clockwork precision. Vilas's Romanian coach, Ion Tiriac, sat chain-smoking and signalling deperately to his protege between points, but it did no good.

Briton Virginia Wade, the defending women's champion, pleased the partisan crowd by hitting her way past Lesley Bowrey of Australia 6-1, 6-4 in the second round.

Six-time singles champion Billie Jean King of the U.S. defeated Maria Pinterova of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-2.

McCovey in 500-homer club

"It was more of a relief than a thrill to get it over with," Willie McCovey said Friday night after smashing the 500th home run of his major league career.

The 40-year old San Francisco first baseman became the 12th player in baseball history to reach the 500 mark when he drilled an 0-2 pitch off Atlanta's Jamie Easterly in the opening game of a twi-night doubleheader.

The homer, his seventh of the year, came in the second inning of a game the Giants lost 10-9, despite hitting four other homers, one a grand slam. San Francisco also dropped the second game 10-5.

"I was kind of anxious to get it behind me so we can concentrate on a more important thing, the pennant race," McCovey said.

He said that his 500th was not that great a thrill because, "It is not something spontaneous. This is something I've been aware of the last three years."

He said he wasn't certain when he hit the ball that it would carry out of the park.

"I just didn't realize what park I was in," he said. "I hit it pretty good, but the fact I hit it in the opposite direction I just wasn't sure until it went out."

He said the loss of the game somewhat tainted the accomplishment.

"Naturally, I'd feel a lot better about it had we hung on to win," he said.

Asked if he had any further goals, McCovey said, "I'll just take all I can get from here on out. I really expected to have 500 long before I hit it."

McCovey became the third player in Giants' history to hit at least 500 homers, although not all the first-baseman's clouts were hit for San Francisco. Mel Ott cracked 511 for the old New York Giants and McCovey's former teammate in San Francisco, Willie Mays, had 660 homers.

The 6-foot-4, 220-pound slugger from Mobile, Ala., has been one of the most feared hitters in the National League since his first day in the majors in 1959 when he went 4-for-4 off Robin Roberts of the Phillies at Seals Stadium in San Francisco.

After 13 seasons with the Giants, McCovey spent nearly three seasons with the Padres from 1974-76. He hit 52 of his homers in a San Diego uniform before being traded to Oakland near the end of the 1976 season, then returning to the Giants at the start of the 1977 season.

In other National League action, the slumping Cincinnati Reds dropped a doubleheader to the Dodgers, 5-2 and 5-3. Cincinnati fell into third place in the NL West, while the Dodgers take second, one-half game over the Reds and three games back of San Francisco.

In the American League, Baltimore Orioles edged Boston Red Sox 3-2; New York Yankees stunned Detroit Tigers 10-2 and Cleveland Indians blanked Toronto Blue Jays 3-0.

Picken moves to quarters

John Picken of Burnaby advanced to the semi-finals of the 80th British Columbia Open Friday, by coming from behind to defeat Roclan Maguire 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

Maguire, an unseeded but highly regarded Californian, appeared to become unnerved by the combination of Picken's calm and the highly partisan crowd:

Picken, 20, the only surviving Canadian in men's singles at the $15,000 Challengers Tournament, kept his cool and neatly put Maguire away with deadly backhands and superior finesse.

Picken's victory was received with a prolonged standing ovation that provoked Maguire into making a grossly obscene gesture for which he was reprimanded and warned that a repetition would result in disqualification from doubles play.

In other men's singles action top-seed Bill Lloyd of Australia advanced over Chip Fisher of Palo Alto, Calif. 7-6, 6-1, while second-seed Jorge Andrew, of Venezuela, was upset by seventh-seeded Bruce Kleege of La Jolla, Calif., 23-6, 7-5, 6-3.

In other men's doubles action, Richmond's Don McCormick, a former Victorian, teamed with Lars Elvstrom of Denmark to defeat Guy Fritz and Ted Williams, both of San Diego 5-7, 6-3, 6-4.

Crowd-pleasing 14-year-old Kate Brasher of London, England, advanced to women's singles semi-finals with an upset win over fourth-seeded Kate Glancy of Vancouver 6-3, 6-4.

Oldtimers even

Victoria Shamrock Oldtimers and their elderly counterparts from Nanaimo wheezed to an 8-8 tie Friday night in an exhibition lacrosse game at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Approximately 750 fans watched the Timbermen rally from 3-1 and 5-3 period deficits to finally catch up to the Shamrocks.

Ed Hayes played the entire game in goal for Nanaimo, turning aside 38 stops. Barry Forbes started in the Victoria nets but was relieved by George Grover after two periods. The Shamrock goalkeepers made 59 saves.

Mussels shellacked

GRAYS HARBOR, Wash.— Victoria Mussels absorbed their fourth consecutive Northwest League baseball defeat Friday night, bowing 8-1 to Grays Harbor Loggers.

Mussels' record at the bottom of the Northern Division slipped to 3-8, while Grays Harbor evened its slate to 5-5.

Ray Sachs pitched 8⅓ innings in gaining his first victory against one defeat. Victoria starter Dale Mahorcic, 0-1, took the loss. Sachs departed in the ninth inning, when Mussels got their run on three walks and a sacrifice fly.

WHA meets Wednesday

NEW YORK (CP) — The World Hockey Association, after being rebuffed for the second time by the National Hockey League concerning a possible mereger, will hold its annual meeting Wednesday in New York, the league announced Friday.

Heading the agenda at the three-day meeting is the question of whether or not the Houston franchise will continue in the WHA. The question of signing underge juniors will also be discussed.

The WHA's awards luncheon wll be held Thursday as will the announcement of the all-star team.

City bowlers earn provincial berths

Pairs from Victoria West and Burnside went through their sections undefeated this week, to earn two Victoria zone berths in next weekend's B.C. men's championships.

Syd Smithurst and Jack McMillan of Burnside defeated Darrell Prezeau and Bill Van Druten of Victoria 22-17 Friday to complete their week-long sweep at Victoria West greens.

The winning pairs join six other teams in the provincials, opening July 7 at Victoria West and continuing through the weekend.

In another Friday event, Rae Martin and Sally McKnight of Victoria West edged Marjorie Speed and Joan Turner of Canadian Pacific to capture the Rose Bowl ladies' singles competition at the CP greens.

Ethel McFarlane and Hazel Hall of Lakehill defeated Madge Mantell and Vi Marshall of Oak Bay 17-12 in the 'B' event final.

Liebrock quits

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League trimmed their roster to the required number of 42 players Friday.

The club announced the retirement of veteran guard Chuck Liebrock, and deletion of offensive tackle Ray Honey, a one-year man, and rookie defensive back Tom Chad.

Entries ready

Entry forms are now available for the Molsons-Market Square bicycle race, set for Sunday, Aug 13. Closing date for entries in Veterans, Women's, A, B and C-Class categories is Aug.1.

Doby

Doby manages White Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — Larry Doby, the first black to play in the American League, became the second black manager in major league baseball Friday when he was named to replace Bob Lemon as manager of Chicago White Sox.

In making the announcement, owner Bill Veeck said there was "an amicable and mutually agreed on" parting of the ways.

The first black manager in the majors was Frank Robinson, who managed Cleveland Indians in 1975 and 1976 before being fired in 1977 by the American League club.

Lemon, a member of the baseball Hall of Fame, was in his second year with Chicago. The team finished third last year with a 90-72 record, but is mired in fifth place in the West Division with a 34-40 record.

Veeck said Lemon would remain as the Sox' West Coast scout.

Bobby Knoop remains as the team's third base coach, but Stan Williams, the pitching coach, is leaving the organization, a spokesman said.

Doby played from 1947 to 1959. He signed his first major league contract with Veeck when Veeck was president of the Indians.

When Doby quit as a player in 1959, he had played on six consecutive all-star games and in two World Series.

Doby scouted for Montreal Expos in 1969, was a minor league instructor for that team in 1970, and then coached for Montreal from 1971 to 1973.

He coached for Cleveland in 1974, then returned as a coach for Montreal in 1976.

He has been a coach and batting instructor for the White Sox.

Heck, Fenske drafted by IHL

It may be small consolation but two members of Victoria Cougars passed over in the National Hockey League's amateur draft may have another avenue open to the big time.

Defenceman Leroy Heck and centre Dennis Fenske were among 25 Western Canada Hockey League players chosen by the International Hockey League this week.

Heck went to Saginaw Gears in the first round, while Fenske was chosen by the same club in the sixth round.

The only other first-round pick from Western Canada was Darryl Sutter of Lethbridge Broncos, picked by Flint.

Other WCHL players chosen included Carl Van Harrewyn of New Westminster Bruins, who went to Port Huron in the fourth round, Richard Martens of New Westminster, nabbed by Milwaukee in the fourth round and the Bruins' Randy Betty, taken by Flint in round eight.

The draft was conducted under new IHL-NHL guidelines, which allows an IHL team to draft players that were taken in the National Hockey League draft last month starting with the NHL's 10th round.

However, players drafted in the first nine rounds by NHL teams in Montreal may be assigned to the IHL by their respective NHL affiliated clubs.

Of the players drafted, 23 were from the OMJHL, 25 from the Western Canada league and 13 from the Quebec Major Junior League.

No.1 choice was Peter Luksa from Windsor Spitfires of the Ontario Major Junior League, who went to Grand Rapids.

"Y" wins

PEI won the first game 15-8 but Victoria, the B.C. champion, came back with 15-10, 15-9 and 15-12 triumphs.

Blues sign tough guy

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Blues have announced the signing of Gord Gallant, a rugged left winger from Shediac, N.B., to a contract. The length and terms of the pact with the National Hockey League club were not disclosed.

WLA clubs rest

Western Lacrosse Association clubs can settle in for a quiet weekend.

No games are slated until Tuesday night when Coquitlam Adanacs, well-rested from a win this week, meet the Burrards in Vancouver.

Adanacs, last in the league, surprised New Westminster Salmonbellies Thursday with a 17-14 win. Dave Durante, who leaves today to join Team Canada at the world field lacrosse championships in England, did most of the damage, scoring five goals and adding three assists.

Adanacs moved to within seven points of New Westminster with the triumph. Victoria Shamrocks remain on top with 21 points, and see their next action Wednesday against Vancouver at Memorial Arena.

Impressive lineup for Paradise fest

By KING LEE
Colonist Reporter

If you're an impulsive type with a weekend to spare, you might just grab your knapsack and head for Paradise Bowl on Grouse Mountain for this weekend's Canada Days Festival.

There is a three-day extravaganza going on up there and if the weather's right, it should be a fun weekend with lots of good music.

The shows today and Sunday get under way at noon while a shortened version Monday will start at 1 p.m.

Today's lineup includes Ray Materick, David Bradstreet, Danny O'Keefe and Jesse Winchester in the afternoon and Fosterchild, Stonebolt and Doucette in the evening until 10:30.

On Sunday, it's Bradstreet, Materick, Victoria's Paul Horn, Cano and Doucette from noon to 6 p.m. and O'Keefe, Winchester and Fosterchild from 7 to 10:30 p.m.

Monday's lineup includes Christopher Ward at 1 p.m. and J.D. Sumner and The Stamps at 3.

Gates will open at 9 a.m. each day and tickets are $10 for the two-day pass. North Pacific Presentations, the shows' promoters, are offering early bird prices of $6 on the day of the show from 9 to 11 a.m.

If you're looking for more information you could phone 682-8711 in Vancouver.

Monday's show is a different story. Advance tickets for that are $5 while tickets at the gate with be $1 more. It's called the Memories of Elvis show.

The good news is that Fleetwood Mac is set for a series of 10 summer concerts in North America.

The bad news is that the closest concert will be July 21 at Folsom Field, Boulder, Colo.

A release from Los Angeles said the 10 concerts are the only show dates planned by Fleetwood Mac this year.

Air force gets in tune

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — The U.S. Air Force has officially recognized motherhood. By late summer, the air force says, a maternity uniform will be available at base exchanges for the first time.

Until now, women in the air force have had to return to civilian clothes when they became pregnant.

About 2,000 air force women have babies each year, a survey shows.

Gift of coins 'very special'

During the past six or seven months, the class of Brenda Morton at the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children has been taking its coins to school to fill the collection can for the B.C. Save the Children Fund.

This week these nine boys and girls presented Heather Siska, the funds Victoria representative, with a total of $18.30.

The fund receives many donations through the year but to Mrs. Siska and the boys and girls who will benefit from the generosity of these children the gift was a very special one.

Waterfront watch

Attaching Neighborhood Watch sticker to vessel moored at Oak Bay Marina is Bobbi Low, 16, a student from Lambrick Park, with Constable Garth Fowler of Oak Bay police supervising. Bobbi is one of two students hired in new Marine Neighborhood Watch program financed equally by Oak Bay Kiwanis and Canada Manpower through Job Exploration for Students program. Oak Bay residents who wish to have their marine equipment marked at home or at the Oak Bay police station may phone 592-2424 for further information. Students will also visit Royal Victoria Yacht Club to mark property.

People have say on academy site

The public will have its say before any move is made to allow townhouse construction on the former riding academy site, Oak Bay administrator James Craven said Thursday.

Craven said a special council meeting called for 7 p.m. Wednesday to decide whether to proceed with a rezoning bylaw will be open to the public. If it is decided at that time to introduce the bylaw necessary for such a development, a public hearing will be scheduled, he said.

Earlier this week council appeared to favor the idea of allowing the 9.3-acre site to be used for construction of a 64-unit luxury townhouse project. The only visible opposition came from Ald. John Goult who felt it would be a matter of giving up the municipality's last large parcel of open land. The argument for the project is that it would supposedly net Oak Bay $2.2 million to reduce the interest on long-term debt by $250,000 a year for 15 years.

Craven said Thursday that if such a project is favored rezoning would be required to bring about lower density. Current zoning for the area permits higher density than would be considered suitable, he said.

Execution ordered

BANGKOK (AP) — Premier Kriangsak Chomanan has ordered the execution by machine-gun of a man charged with raping and murdering a 13-year-old girl and a 35-year-old woman, Radio Thailand reported. The execution of the 28-year-old man was imposed under an article of the constitution that allows the premier to pronounce sentence without trial.

Unconvinced that the University of Victoria faculty is fully behind plans to relocate and expand the campus faculty club, the university board of governors Thursday deferred a decision on the matter.

The faculty club board of directors was seeking board approval in principle for a plan to move the faculty club to University House, the former residence of UVic president Dr. Howard Petch, and to expand dining and kitchen facilities in the imposing two-story structure on Haro Road.

The change would require an increase in dues, and additional sources of revenue, by opening membership in the club university staff, or members of the community willing to put up a large initiation fee.

Governors noted that of the faculty club's membership of about 450 people, only 85 voted on the proposal, and the vote was 46 to 39 in favor.

Governor Hugh Stephens said the proposal needed greater support than that because the university itself could end up paying for the shortfall if the faculty was unable to generate the necessary funds from its membership or other sources.

Stephens also wondered if the university would be liable for expenses involved in upgrading sewer and other services to the renovated University House.

Board chairman Joseph Cunliffe read a letter from a group of faculty opposed to the project which noted that fewer than 10 per cent of the faculty club membership had committed the club to spend $700,000.

"We're dealing with something we don't know that the faculty wants," Cunliffe said.

Year's delay for hospital

A year's delay on the construction of the new Victoria General Hospital appears definite, the hospital's board of management was told Thursday.

Garth Gloeckler, planning director for Victoria General and a member of the three-man project building committee which is overseeing planning and construction on the $44 million project, said a health ministry decision to reject a "design-build" plan in which construction proceeds as soon as a section of the hospital's design is completed, has ruled out a start on the building this year.

The hospital and the Capital Region had planned to begin work on the building on Aug. 15, but the health ministry decision means that the complete hospital design must be completed and tenders called for the entire project before it can proceed.

Because soil conditions preclude major site preparation work during the winter months, a delay of a few months means the work will not be able to commence until June, 1979, Gloeckler said. Construction time for the hospital may be slightly shorter than under the design-build plan, but the delay means the hospital will not be completed until June, 1982, a year later than earlier estimated.

Gloeckler estimated that the delay on the building will add about $150,000 a month, or $1.5 million for a 10-month delay, to the cost of the project.

The ministry vetoed the design-build program because it would have required a cost-plus-fixed fee type of contract which is no longer popular with the ministry.

Hospital board members were upset with the delay, and voted to write the ministry, asking it to reconsider its decision.

The Capital Region hospital and health planning commission has also protested the ministry's refusal to consider the cost-plus-fixed-fee contract, which it feels would result in earlier completion at less cost.

Honors for Vicki

A Victoria girl, Vicki Lewis, 18, received cheque for $100 from Prime Minister Trudeau in Ottawa Thursday for winning a nation-wide essay contest on national unity sponsored by the Union of National Defence Employees. Vicki shared victory in the contest with Maureen Murphy of Levis, Que., also 18. Trudeau met the girls in his Centre Block office on Parliament Hill after question period in Commons and handed them cheques from the contest sponsor.

UVic's budget okayed

A $38.9 million operating budget was approved by the University of Victoria board of governors Thursday.

The budget represents a 3.4 per cent increase over the 1978 figure of $37.6 million, and is "incredibly tight," UVic president Dr. Howard Petch told the board of governors.

Petch reiterated to the board his concerns about provincial government financing policies which gave UVic only a seven per cent increase in its grant this year, not enough to cover additional costs generated by inflation and by the increasing enrolment in the university's emerging programs such as nursing, law, and social work.

"For the first time since I have come here I am really worried about next year," Petch said. The university's emerging programs will all be at capacity enrolment next year, and unless the provincial government and the Universities Council of B.C. recognize the costs involve, university faculties and programs will suffer, he warned.

Bursar Bob McQueen told the board that the university faces a number of unavoidable cost increases this year, and revenue increases have all been alloted accordingly. Student aid, one of the smaller items in the budget, at $560,000, will be increased 16 per cent.

Petch said he is recommending no increase in student fees this year, following an increase last year, but a fee increase can expected next year.

This school's for burning

The former Prospect Lake school on West Saanich Road will be burned intentionally next week—as part of a drill for Saanich firemen.

The school, in a dilapidated condition when handed over to the municipality four years ago by the school district after it became surplus to the needs of the district, has been the target of vandals recently.

Municipal lands commissioner Frank Harris has recommended demolition because of the cost of keeping the building secure against vandalism.

A number of community organizations have considered the building for their purposes but the cost of rehabilitation would be excessive, he said.

Care home for Sidney

An intermediate health care facility for the Saanich Peninsula will probably be located in Sidney, at a yet-to-be determined site, a regional hospital planning official said Thursday.

Bill Pennington said the location would probably be in Sidney, rather than at the Saanich Peninsula Hospital itself in Central Saanich, because "we think people should be where stores, children, doctors and churches are all within walking distance."

Pennington made his remarks in an interview during the annual meeting of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital Society at Parkland Secondary School in North Saanich.

Earlier, Pennington had answered questions on intermediate health care from society members. He told them that about 450 people in the Capital Region District were waiting for intermediate health care beds.

Let's be fair, says Grace

Travel Industry Minister Grace McCarthy issued an appeal Thursday to all B.C. businesses to give tourists fair exchange on their United States dollars.

Mrs. McCarthy said she had received numerous complaints about businesses not giving the full exchange rate on American bills.

"If the word gets around that some businesses in B.C. are not giving the full exchange there is no question that Americans will turn around and look elsewhere for a vacation destination," she said.

Henry Roberts

Another of Cook's Men

Often accompanying the name of Captain Cook are the names of two other men of his command; two who later were to win their own place in history — William Bligh and George Vancouver. Not undeserving of a share in the publicity is another of Cook's men — Henry Roberts for whom Point Roberts and the world-known port of Roberts Bank are named.

More importantly, when Cook's Journals were published Lieut. Henry Roberts was credited on its title pages as responsible for preparing all the charts and coast-scapes.

Roberts was also to be associated more closely than most (though at differing times and in different roles) with both George Vancouver and William Bligh.

IT WAS COOK'S entrusting to Roberts, whose skill with mapping pen and as an artist he had noted on the previous voyage, with the "making of a world chart, using materials already (by 1776) assembled and adding new discoveries as they were made," that was to lead to much jealousy on the part of William Bligh, for Bligh considered himself a much better cartographer than Roberts. Yet with Bligh sailing master on the Resolution and Roberts his mate, the senior man must have been only too frequently aware of the annoying pens and brushes of the 19-year-old Roberts.

Roberts' relationship with Vancouver had begun even earlier, when in late 1771 the two, both boys fifteen years of age, joined the Resolution at the start of Cook's second voyage to the Pacific. On the third the two were not to be on the same vessel, but one cannot doubt that when the expedition came to land, whether Hawaii, Nootka or elsewhere, the two near-contemporaries would resume their old association. In 1789 they would be even more closely allied. Of this more later.

WHEN HENRY ROBERTS first joined the Resolution he was listed as an able seaman but, in light of his future career, it seems not unlikely that he was one of those who joined a vessel with its complement of midshipmen already complete, but with the prospect of a move to the half-deck a possibility before the voyage was over.

Perhaps it was simply Roberts' skill as an artist and his staunch character that accelerated his move to officer status.

Information about Roberts is hard to find and comes mostly from footnotes. The most generous of these are to be found in the accounts of various officers of that tragic day when Cook lost his life.

Roberts had been very close to Cook that morning, as he was in command of the pinnace that took Cook, Phillips and marines to shore, withdrawing from the rough beach, with its submerged rocks, after unloading his passengers.

When, later, during earlier part of the negotiations for the return of the missing cutter, it was agreed that King Terre'oboo's two youngest sons should be additional hostages, there was no hesitation over their being the first to board the pinnace which then again drew off shore.

But when trouble broke out on the beach and a shot was fired "one poor boy", Roberts writes, "said he was frightened and begged to be put ashore." This request quickly complied with, the pinnace again drew off.

SHOCKINGLY UNEXPECTED then the rapid deterioration of events and the death of Cook. Although so near, Roberts and his boat were powerless to help or even to retrieve the captain's body in the face of thousands of aroused natives. But still the young man, according to the record of one of his superior officers, "behaved with great courage and resolution" in those dangerous minutes.

Roberts' own words appear again when, of the stealthy return of the first parcel of part of Cook's body, he writes: "It is impossible to express the feelings every officer and seaman suffered on this occasion, a sight so horribly shocking, distraction and madness was in every mind and (thoughts of) revenge the result of all."

Later, other parcels, all decently, indeed reverently, wrapped were received and on Feb. 22, eight days after the tragedy, they committed all to the deep. Then, heart-broken but dutiful, they set their course northwards to resume their search for that frustrating Northwest Passage.

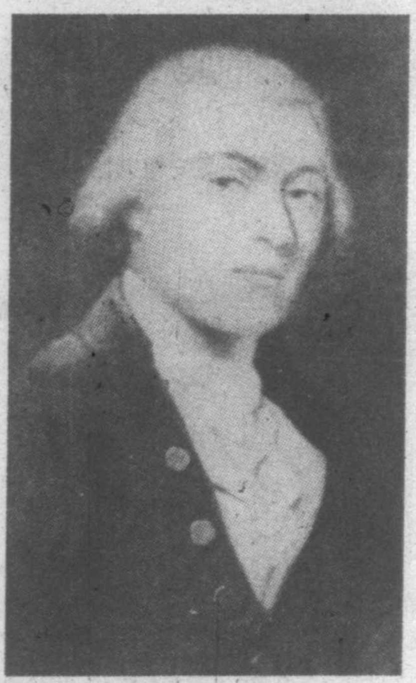
By Ursula Jupp

CAPTAIN CLERKE moved from the Discovery to command of the Resolution, leading vessel of the expedition. Within six months he too was dead.

His death came after long illness and so he was able to let them know that he wished to be buried on dry land. Arctic seas did not look the inviting resting place that tropic waters had granted many another sailor.

Does anything now remain, one wonders, of that little church, built at Paratoonka by Bering, within which Clerke had hoped to be buried? Although the Russians would not allow this, men of the Resolution, Roberts among them, were to see his body interred near the church and his escutcheon hung within its walls.

Some pages from Roberts' log, dating from soon after this part of the voyage, are to be found in the possession of a fortunate Sydney, Australia, museum and record them "shipping heavy seas which filled the tween decks and carried away stantions . . ." However they were now on the way home back to England, although it would not be until near the end of summer, 1780, that they would reach London after more than four years away.



HENRY ROBERTS

Shipmates Bligh, Vancouver and Roberts were then to make their separate ways. Within a few months the first two had resumed active maritime careers, but for Roberts there was a far different life.

IT BEGAN when Gore, final commander of the Resolution, sent Roberts to the Admiralty with a letter informing the authorities that: "I herewith send for Their Lordships' Inspection the remainder of the Mapps(sic) and Journals on board the Resolution. Mr. Roberts is Charg'd with the care of Them and bears you This. He was principal assistant Hydrographer to Captain Cook . . ."

Thus began for Henry Roberts the long task of tailoring all those charts and coastine drawings, made on board an unstable ship in the Pacific, into publishable and reliable form. Roberts with his steady character and intimate connection with the material was undoubtedly the man for the job, but still those next long years at a desk must have sometimes seemed more of a sentence than an honor.

Did he envy the adventures of his former shipmates when word of some naval engagement came? . . . The skirmish on the Dogger Banks with the Dutch in 1781 . . . Bligh was in on that. Another year gone and now there was the Battle of the Saints in the Caribbean . . . Vancouver engaged the enemy French fleet. A more pulse-raising engagement this, and it was spring. Chart-making for a few days, then surely more burden than pleasure.

FINALLY the painstaking task was finished and released in 1784. The long-awaited story of the new shores discovered by the famous Captain Cook found many eager to read it, especially the merchant-adventurers who had heard of the prices paid at Macao for the sea otter furs acquired at Nootka, actually more for warmth than profit by men whose main aim was discovery of that northern route to the Orient.

James Strange of Bombay was to study the volumes attentively during the early part of 1785 and by early December the Captain Cook and the Expedition, combined tonnage around 500 tons, were on their way from Bombay to Nooka loaded with trade goods.

Such a costly undertaking was not to be undertaken without the reassurance of the Journals — and their reliable charts. A lesser investor could take more risks, and so it was the little 60-ton Sea Otter, that had left Macao without benefit of Journal or chart, in the spring of 1785 was first to follow Cook to Nootka — returning to China by the end of the year with furs that realized more than 20,000 Spanish dollars!

One man, though, was not happy when he examined his copy of the Journals — the passionate Captain Bligh. Both Captain King, who had prepared the script for the Third Voyage, and Roberts, were targets for the criticisms that he penned and pencilled in the Journal's margins.

Concerning the work of the second, Bligh wrote that some of the charts claimed by Roberts were actually the work of Captain Cook or, after his death, that of Bligh himself. Bligh clamed, too, that Roberts had, in preparing drawings of coastlines for the engraver, mortified him "by way of describing mountains and putting in flurishes."

WHETHER OR NOT such criticisms were justified, it cannot be denied that it was Roberts' patient hand that had clarified all those records made at sea and if the artistic flair that had first brought this water-colorist to Cook's attention should have led to a little artistic licence when it came to landscapes, this can have disturbed no one but the jealous Bligh.

For some years after 1784 Roberts' history is as yet a blank; it seems likely he married sometime in the 1780s. But that the work he had done on the Journals had satisifed the Lord Commissioners of the Admiralty seems attested by his appointment in 1789 to command of the new sloop Discovery on its projected expedition to the ever-busier Pacific to explore further both south of the Equator and along the northwest coast of America. Then 32 years old, it was as Captain Henry Roberts that he came to his new command and found that his second was Lieut. George Vancouver, shipmate in the days of Cook.

That the two had got on well together during

A few days ago I found another dead deer in the bay. No mark on her, so I concluded she had been chased by the dogs I heard on Marina Island the night before. The terrific swim to sanctuary was too much for her, heated and exhausted as she was.

AN INTELLIGENCE OF EARTH

Another Nature Ramble With Gilean Douglas

I looked for her fawns, up and down and across Marina, but I couldn't find them. Born in June, they would still be well hidden. I looked for the dogs and couldn't find them either, so I figured they had belonged to some one-night campers.

While I was searching I thought of a story a logger told me. A doe that had been chased hard by dogs came running out of the underbrush into a group of still-hunters who were sitting around a fire eating lunch. She stood there, trembling and gasping for breath, but showing plainly that of her two enemies in this place she had chosen man.

She had chosen well. The hunters dealt with the dogs. The doe lay down by the fire until she was well rested. Those hunters wouldn't have harmed her for the world.

THE ACTION of this doe comes so close to reason that it can hardly be called instinct. Was it simply desperation? Desperation can tune every sense to highest pitch and hone to keeness what intelligence we have. The logger thought it was what he called "the intelligence of the wild: half instinct, half reason."

My friend, the poet Pat Grace, wrote this spring: "My trillium is breaking through the ground in the woods by the boatshed, in the exact place where I touched its dying leaves last year. This is an intelligence of earth; greater and wider than the intelligence of men."

NO ONE CAN know animals and not know something of this "intelligence of earth." How much longer will it take us to learn that "we are not the only tenants of our farms? The fields and hedges, woods and water all around us teem with a complex, rich and interesting life. But nature will speak only to those who listen with love and sympathy."

It is a good thing that the logger, the hunters and Pat Grace never met a former neighbor of mine. She was unabashedly anti-wild animal, anti-forest, anti-solitude and definitely anti-silence. If she had her way the whole world would be one big parking lot with freeways running through it and apartment blocks at set intervals, each of them equipped with a shopping centre,

THERE WOULD BE no trees; no wild streams, only fish hatcheries. All mountains would be lined with ski lifts, the air with supersonic jets, the oceans with hovercraft. "What a nightmare!" I exclaimed.

"Not at all. It's the sensible way to live. Take care of all our problems. It will come. You'll see." Devoutly I hope I won't.

I have a neighbor here who is very different. Also, she put in hives last year and her bees are now cavorting around my orchard. I am expecting great things of them. I have suggested to their owner (can anyone really own a bee?) that she try her hand at making mead, that drink of fermented honey consumed by early Britons. A friend just back from England tells me that there is a very old inn at Penrith called The Beehive that carried this sign on its door: "In this hive we are all alive, good liquor makes us funny; if you be dry step in and try the virtue of our honey."

LIKE THE BEES, the swift and supple birds seem to be "seeing only what is fair, sipping only what is sweet." In these days their songs are sometimes just fragments of the courting capriccios. Except for that indomitable minute, the winter wren, which lilts through its whole long aria in tiny, silver notes.

Band-tailed pigeons and mourning doves are cooing happily on the borders of my tilled land, their beady little eyes fixed on the corn. These are unemployed pigeons. Not like the 12 which were hired by the Plymouth General Hospital in England. The latter fly back and forth between there and another hospital at a mile a minute — with specimen vials under their wings tra-la.

I DON'T KNOW where the idea developed that pigeons and doves are sweet little feather brains that wouldn't harm anything except crops. They don't hesitate to harm each other and concerning food in the field one ornithologist has said: "Certainly the most injurious bird is the wood-pigeon. It probably does five times as much harm as the most beneficial bird (the robin) does good."

Though the old countryman may have been right when he said to his city-loving daughter: "You are about as fit to take care of yourself as a plump pigeon at a shooting match." She didn't like it.

Starlings are feasting on cutworms to strengthen them for this fruiting time. It was Eugene Schieffelin of New York who decided in the 1880s that his world lacked birds. He determined to import all those mentioned in Shakespeare's plays and release them in Central Park. This included the starling. It took this bright bird just 60 years to get out to the Pacific cost, where hundreds now roost under Vancouver bridges.

THE FLICK of a flicker through the orchard reminds me of the kooka burra birds of Australia, one of which was presented to China recently together with a kangaroo, wallaby and wombat. Nothing was said about dragons in that exchange.

Dragon myths are thought to be based on the Egyptian crocodile and some European churches actually used to feature stuffed crocodiles as the remains of dragons.

I wonder what Po-Chu-i, a Chinese poet of the 9th centry, would think of the world of today? Probably that his own world of yesterday wasn't all that different.

In The Red Cockatoo he wrote: "Sent as a present from Annam, a red cockatoo, colored like the peach tree blossom. Speaking with the speech of men. And they did to it what is always done to the learned and eloquent; they took a cage with stout bars and shut it up inside."

THE THRUSH is ushering in a twilight of stars. Soon the mountains on Vancouver Island will be silver-soft with moonlight. Cygnus the Swam is flying across the sky. Earlier than summer — because of mountains, trees and tall cliffs — stars low on the horizon are out of my sight.

But now I can see Deneb, "the tail" (named for its place in this constellation) when it goes waving down the western sky. It is 60,000 times brighter than our sun and its light takes 1400 years to reach us.

61 Cygni (what a name to give a star!) was the first whose distance from us was measured. In April I forgot to say that Albireo, in the beak of the Swan, is actually a double star: one deep blue, one bright yellow. Although this constellation is often called the Northern Cross, the stars which form the imperfect cross are only part of the whole figure — which does indeed resemble a large bird.

IT IS AT THIS hour of night in July that I like to lie on my channel rock looking up into the heavens. I am looking for another big bird: Altair the Flying Eagle, in the constellation Acquila the Eagle. On the first of June you may have seen Altair's rather quiet entrance on the eastern sky.

The constellations I can pick out without a telescope are exactly those which the desert nomads, shepherds and sailors of old saw and named. There are 48 of them and they contain the brightest stars. They glorify the sky for those who know them. "All things by immortal power, near or far, hiddenly to each other linked are, that thou canst not stir a flower without troubling a star." In some future age an intelligence of earth will be taken for granted and we shall speak wisely of an intelligence of stars.

Photo-Story
By Peggy Young

Fishermen come in all shapes and sizes and in all ages from four-year-olds, up to people in their nineties. The reasons for going fishing are almost as many and varied as the ages of the fishermen, and range from the necessity of making a living (for the commercial fisherman) to the need to spend a quiet hour alone outdoors (for the harassed businessman).

Some people go fishing solely because their friends do — these are the ones who carefully drop the "g" off the end of the words, and talk much about goin' fishin' "

Others go because they like the gadgetry — the reels and rods and boats and trailers.

Some include fishing automatically as part of the summer holiday, never stopping to wonder if they actually enjoy it or not, and some fish only when there is a derby in progress, with a prize to be won for the biggest catch.

These are the grown-ups, but with the children it's different. The children go fishing just for fun. They don't dress in special clothes, they don't have much equipment, they don't make a big production of it, or talk about it, or justify it. They just do it, and when they get tired of it they stop. And they are the ones who have the most fun.

A Museum Ship for Victoria —WHY NOT?

On a balmy July day off the Nova Scotia coast, the Pride of Baltimore and Bluenose II glide by, while hundreds of spectators watch from shore.

Under the warm blanket of the Hawaiian sun with palm tree shadows casting shade and a gentle breeze stirring the pale blue water, visitors climb aboard the Falls of Clyde, one of the last of the Cape Horn square-riggers still in existence. This vessel is now a floating museum moored alongside Honolulu's waterfront.

She was used as a fuel barge in Alaska in the early 1950s and was finally saved around 1960, after being towed to Oahu for restoration.

San Diego, too, has her share of maritime history, with the square-rigger Balclutha that is now part of their Maritime Museum's collection, since being saved from the wreckers torches by interested California citizens.

Not to be outdone by the west coast, Philadelphia has the working barquentine Gazela Primero, presently used for sail training.

Also on the east coast is Mystic Seaport, Connecticut, home for Alan Villiers' Joseph Conrad and the whaling vessel Charles W. Moggan.

There are many more museum ships throughout the world; Vancouver's St. Roch, Portsmouth's Victory, Greenwich's Cutty Sark, Lahaina's Carthaginian II and even Winnipeg has the Hudson's Bay ketch Nonsuch II on display.

THE ONE CITY that seems to lack a reminder of it's rich maritime heritage is Victoria, and what a heritage it is!

Even during pre-European times, the west coast of Canada has been a centre for maritime activity.

The Nootka whalers and Haida raiders, called the Vikings of the North Pacific, were daring seamen that paddled immense canoes up and down the coast.

Later the Haida's keel-less canoes were fitted with woven bark or trade cloth sails for down-wind running.

There is the possibility that Chinese explorers may have made pre-European contact on the coast, for we know that the storm-shattered remains of junks have washed up on our beaches in the past.

AS A CENTRE for maritime trade and commerce during the 1800s and early 1900s, Victoria harbor was filled with the masts of tall square-riggers, a slight that has all but disappeared these days. As Alan Villiers has pointed out, the harbor view is surely a lot poorer since the demise of the great white-winged fleets.

Victoria saw the short-lived careers of the sealing schooners, that sailed north into the freezing Arctic in search of skins. The hard-bitten crews of these ships, with personalities as tough as buck leather, became the material for Jack London's Seawolf.

Victoria knew tragedy also, and it is the toll of many shipwrecks that earned the title of Graveyard of the Pacific, for the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Yet there is something unmistakably alluring about the word shipwreck and the whispers of lost or sunken treasure.

JUST AS FASCINATING, are the tales of rum-running and smuggling by such schooners as Halycon and Casco, as they made many mysterious midnight voyages to deserted Gulf Islands. In fact it was during Casco's law-abiding days that she carried Robert Louis Stevenson and family, to Tahiti.

This was in June, 1888, and the captain of the schooner, A. H. Otis, served as the model for the character, Nares, in Stevenson's book The Wrecker.

One could go on forever, digging up events and people that when all are woven together, produce the rich fabric of our maritime heritage.

IT IS STRANGE then, that we do not value something so unique as to preserve it in an actual floating reminder of Victoria's past. Other, even smaller towns, with far less of a nautical history behind them seem to value this aspect of their past more, both for historical reasons and waterfront character.

Both of these reasons are legitimate when all things are taken into consideration. Take Lahaina, Maui, for example, now on its second museum ship after the first was unfortuntely lost during a storm several years ago. Lahaina probably would not have ever obtained a museum ship at all, if it had not been for the making of the movie Hawaii. Although the port had been a haven for whaling ships in the 1800s, with the exception of the Charles W. Morgan at Mystic Seaport, there were probably no other sail-powered whaling vessels available.

A TRICK AT THE HELM on Falls of Clyde in 1917.

It just so happened that the movie script required a whaling barque and while one was not close at hand, the Swedish schooner Wandia was obtainable and so suitable alterations, under the guidance of Alan Villiers took place in Los Angeles. Once the Mirisch studio gangs were finished with her, the Wandia had been transformed into the three-masted barque, Carthaginia, complete with a helmeted warrior for a figurehead. The problem that faced Villiers next, was how to get the ship to Hawaii and what to use as a crew — after all most Cape Horn veterans were on the "other" side of 80!

SAILING A SHIP with two square masts is much different than the same activity with a modern yacht. Still, the ship had to get there, so Capt, Reymard, the director of the San Diego museum-ship Star of India, and Karl Kartun of the San Francisco Museum went along as watch-mates. Both were experienced in square sail and complimented by a number of younger, but relatively inexperienced hands, the ship was ready to sail. The conversion job had been done well and the Carthaginian reacted just as a three-masted barque should, much to the relief of all concerned.

Carthaginian reached Ilikai Channel right on schedule and met the other member of the sailing community taking part in the movie, the Grethe. She was to play the part of the missionary barquentine and had been successfully converted from a Danish galleass for her role. The producers however, obviously not square-rigger men, were not sure that the ships could reach Hawaii on schedule and rather than have an expensive cast, with Julie Anrews and Max von Sydow waiting on the beach, they decided to shoot the scenes in Hollywood first.

EVENTUALLY the sea shots were done around the islands and at the end of the movie, the Carthaginian was sold to business interests as a floating museum, with a whaling display. There she rested, the highlight of Lahaina's waterfront, until she was lost while en route to the Honolulu drydock for maintenance and repairs.

Several years ago, the local people had learned the value of a museum ship, however, and it was not too much later that a group formed to get a second ship together for the town. The work is now well under way on the second vessel, named Carthaginian II.

MYSTIC SEAPORT'S Joseph Conrad came to its present position as a museum ship in a far different way. She was a veteran sail-training ship having sailed under three flags before becoming a permanent display at Mystic in 1947. The Joseph Conrad was originally named the George Stage and was built in 1882 as a 103-foot square-rigged training ship for boys. She could train 80 at any one time and these appentices were then able to move into the Danish merchant marine.

Up until she was sold in 1934, 4,000 boys had received useful training on board her during Baltic and North Sea cruises. Alan Villiers found her just as she was about to be broken up and he bought her, renaming the ship Joseph Conrad. He took her on a 58,000-mile, two-year voyage, with a crew of boys from five countries.

In 1937, George Huntington Hartford bought her and used her for three years as a private yacht. As his yacht, she raced against the square-rigger, Seven Seas, from the U.S. to Begmuda and back.

In 1939, the U.S. Maritime Commission obtained her and she was used as a trainng ship until 1945. In 1947, through an Act of Congress, she became the property of Mystic Seaport and is now used as a stationary training ship for the Mystic Mariner Program. Even though she no longer goes to sea, she still fills her original role as a school ship.

RHODE ISLAND obtained its school ship museum in a more expensive way. It was built from scratch!

In 1776, beautiful Narragansett Bay was the setting for grim battles between the British and Continental navies. on May 10 of that year, John Paul Jones, the senior lieutenant of the American navy, took command of the fast sloop, U.S.S. Providence. The original Providence was actually named the Katy and was a typical merchant sloop of 110 feet, carrying a main, a staysail, a jib and a square topsail. She carried 10 guns and before the war, was engaged in trade between the east coast and the West Indies.

Under Jones the ship had a number of well-fought victories, since she was swift and well manoeuvred and even captured Fort Nassau in the Bahamas. She was finally lost during the battle of Penobscot Bay. In 1976, the Seaport '76 Foundation, as part of the bicentennial celebrations and tall ships race, began the building of a replica of the Providence. She is now sailing and training young people in the ways of the sea and gives them a taste of their maritime heritage.

When she is not sailing or training, she is moored with the frigate HMS Rose at King's Wharf on the Newport waterfront.

BALTIMORE, MARYLAND, also felt that they needed a means of displaying its maritime heritage and began the building of a Baltimore clipper, called the Pride of Baltimore. She is used as a goodwill emissary for the city and she certainly dresses up the Baltimore harbor area.

By Daryl Drew

She was built in the traditional way that clippers were built in the 18th and 19th centuries.

These ships were light manoeuvreable vessels that served as privateers, blockade runners and slavers from the 1770s to the early 1800s. Due to their light contruction, they were short-lived vessels, usually lasting only two or three years. No two of them were alike and each was altered to fit the job for which it was designed. There are unmistakable similarities between these clippers and the more recent schooners, that used to be so numerous along the B.C. coast.

THE PRIDE'S KEEL was shaped from lignum vitae more than 2000 years old and her stem, stern post, floors and lower futtocks came from the super-dense bullit tree. They built her frames from Santa Marie wood which has similar properties to white oak. The masts are Douglas fir and the spars are Sitka spruce. At a glance, she seems like the United Nations of forest products. With her particular lines and ballast arrangement, the Pride will have to be sailed flat on her bottom, as she has many of the characteristics of a 98-foot dinghy!

THE CLOSEST THING that we have to a sailing ship museum in western Canada, besides the auxillary sailer St. Roch that is beautifully restored in Vancouver, is strangely enough found in Winnipeg. Built as part of the Hudson's Bay Company's 300th birthday, the Nonsuch II is now an enclosed museum.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Since this story was written Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf announced purchase of the 81-ton Freelance as a "permanent legacy of the Cook bicentennial celebration. The schooner was already on her way to Victoria from Antigua in the West Indies. Bawlf said intention is to operate the Freelance as a sailing training ship through a non-profit educational society. But, as this Islander went to press the Freelance was aground on a reef off the San Blas Islands and being plundered by armed Panamanians.

This square-rigged replica of the Nonsuch was launched in the town of Appledore, England, on Aug. 26, 1969. She was built along the same lines as the ketch that left England in June, 1668, in search of a northern access route to the rich fur country of eastern Canada. The original Nonsuch had been a naval ship in 1654, captured by the Dutch in 1658, and recaptured by the English the next year. She was 36 feet along her keel, 15 feet wide and had a carrying capacity of nearly 50 tons. There was little other known data about the rig and construction of the vessel.

This made it necessary for researchers to spend a great deal of time delving into the data on ketches of this period, before any construction could take place. Eventually her design was decided upon, and by the summer of 1969 she was ready to tour the southern parts of England. Some 17,467 people viewed her in only two of the ports that she visited during this period.

Nonsuch was brought across the Atlantic to Canada in 1970, although not before proving her seaworthiness in a force nine gale in the Bristol Channel.

ONCE IN CANADA, she made stops at ports on both coasts, having been transported, disassembled, across the country. In January 1974, she became part of the Nonsuch Museum in Winnipeg, where she is housed much like the St. Roch is in Vancouver. Experts have called the Nonsuch II, the most authentic replica built to date and she is a constant reminder of the accomplishments of early Canadian seafarers.

There have been other ships restored, replicas built and commemorative voyages undertaken.

THE QUESTION REMAINS, however, that even though we should have a musuem ship, what type of vessel should it be? Ideally, a working replica of Thermopylae would be the answer and she would certainly be an attraction in the Inner Harbor. She could be used as school-ship and museum all rolled into one. On a more likely note, Victoria may have to settle or something smaller and the type of vessel that comes to mind is the old standby, the working schooner.

After all, schooners have been used on the west coast as trading vessels, yacht and smugglers.

Around the turn of the century and in the late 1800s, a large fleet of sealing schooners was based in Victoria and each year they headed north to hunt for pelts.

There is, of course, the other side of the "famous coin," the rum-runners, opium smugglers and illegal-immigrant carriers. Schooners such as Halycon and Casco were famous for their speed, a definite necessity considering their business.

I SUPPOSE that a proponent of such a project could be accused of trying to keep up with one's neighbors. However, I do not think that when all things are considered, that this argument has much validity. First of all, other cities have done what is proposed here simply because they, like Victoria, have a maritime heritage which they wish to enjoy and be reminded of. We would do well to create a reminder of our past in the tradition of the Provincial Museum's "living display" technique.

Not everything should be behind a glass case, if we want to keep the links with the past real and something to be experienced.

THERE ARE a few remaining schooners from the early days still around, surviving mostly as restorable hulks. The talent, energy and skill to restore such a vessel is present within the cities retired sailors, shipwrights and riggers. We also have a ready storehouse of research data in our own Maritime Museum, to which such a vessel could logically be attached for display purposes.

In the 1940s, Canada lost the opportunity to have the square-rigger Pamir as a school-ship because the appropriate action was not taken when the opportunity arose. Here again is the opportunity for an economic and cultural boost that would make a most desirable addition to our waterfront.

A MUSEUM SHIP for Victoria; why not? After all our past heritage, present needs and future considerations, all make the question of such a vessel worthy of very careful consideration.

Warm Weather Entertainin

THOUGHT for FOOD

MURIEL WILSON

Most of us are guilty in one way or another of procrastination. My worst "put it off until tomorrow" is clearing up my desk. Did you ever see a writer with a tidy desk?

I have a basket with clipped out recipes to try, a tray full to overflowing with hand written and clippings of bits and pieces of ideas that might be useful at some time or other. And scattered from back to front and piled up, are all sorts of paper work.

Like a refrigerator, the time comes when one must get down to the business of clearing out the mess. This week my desk got the treatment and as a result today's copy is mixture of recipes on a number of subjects not necessarily on the same kind of food, but which might be of general interest. A sort of this-and-that collection of recipes and information.

WITH SUMMER just ahead it is time to plan warm weather entertaining. This often means inviting friends and neighbors over for a lively backyard feast or a jaunt to the park.

Outside entertaining calls for simple refreshing foods. That is where fresh fruit and vegetables come in to satisfy the hungriest crowds.

What could be easier than slicing seasonal fruits and arranging them on a platter and letting their vivid colors, enticing shapes and succulent textures work for you. That is our delicious logic underlying our FRESH FRUIT CARIBBEAN . . . a cooling array of fruits and cheeses.

You'll want to use your own culinary artistry to design your own fresh fruit platters, but there are some suggestions to consider . . . strawberries, pineapple spears; plump blueberries or juicy grapes, fresh orange slices, or use tropical papyaya and mellow avocado.

Add cubes of Swiss or Muenster cheeses and garnish with fresh salad greens. Try your assortment with sprightly fresh lime dressing that harmonizes but doesn't overshadow the individual fruit flavors.

Shredded Chinese cabbage will lend it a special character, but fresh green cabbage will taste every bit as delicious. Add finely sliced celery, toasted almonds, scallions and fresh orange sections for a distinctive combination of flavors and texture. To save time prepare the slaw the night before, waiting until ready to serve before mixing a nice spicy LEMON-HONEY DRESSING. At a picnic, barbeque or patio buffet, fresh salads are perfect.

FRESH LIME DRESSING . . . one cup mayonnaise, one-half cup sour cream or plain yogurt, one tsp. finely grated lime rind, juice of two fresh limes, four tsp. sugar and one-half tsp. salt.

CORNED BEEF SALAD . . . one package lemon (or salad jello), one cup boiling water, one cup undiluted consomme heated, one cup cold water, one envelope unflavored gelatine dissolved in one cup cold water, one can corned beef shredded, one small grated onion, one tbsp. finely minced green pepper, three hard cooked eggs chopped, one cup finely diced celery, dash of salt and one cup mayonnaise.

Dissolve jello in boiling water, add one cup cold water, dissolve plain gelatine in cold water, add one cup boiling water, mix well until all is dissolved. Add the mayonnaise. Mix well and refrigerate until partly set. Add all the other hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Now the multi-talented felt has another use . . . table mats! The variations are limitless, and here is what I have done: With a double thickness of felt (for body), I cut out oval-shaped place mats. From the cams to my sewing machine, I chose a few complimentary stitches and made bands of decorative designs around the mats. I used gold felt and three colors of thread for the stitching — cream, gold and green.

The mats are lovely and inexpensive, and to make them more practical, spray with a water and stain repellent before using.

Home economics teachers may consider this as an introductory project for beginning sewing — what a lovely way to learn to use a sewing machine as it isn't a frustrating project.

Other suggested uses:

A rainy day project for mother and kids: church bazaars; a gift, personalizing with child's name; seasonal place mats. Also I use scrap trims or scrap felt to applique designs, or they can be glued on.

The main thing is to have fun creating the place mats. The sky's the limit!

ingredients, mix well and chill in mold or individual molds until ready to serve. Garnish with crisp greens.

Did you ever make your own Liver Pate? It is great to have on hand and easy to make.

INSTANT LIVER PATE . . . eight ounces liver sausage at room temperature, four ounces cream cheese at room temperature, one to one-and-a-half tbsp. brandy OR cream, onion juice or onion salt to taste, two tbsp. finely chopped ripe olives, dash of garlic powder, salt, paprika, powdered thyme, marjoram, sage or other herbs to your taste.

Beat together the liver sausage, cheese, brandy or cream until smooth. Add olives and other seasonings to taste. Lightly oil a two-cup mold and pack lightly with pate. Chill about 20 minutes before serving. Turn out on an attractive serving dish or tray and surround with assorted crackers, flat bread or melba toast.

TANGY CHICKEN OPEN FACE . . . eight, one-ounce slices French bread, one-quarter cup cranberry-orange relish, one can chunky chicken spread and eight slices Swiss cheese.

Spread toasted slices of bread with relish. Then spread with the chunky chicken spread and top each with a slice of cheese. Broil until cheese is melted and bubbly. Makes eight open-faced sandwiches.

To go along well with hot coffee or tea these petite cup cakes are delectable.

BRIDE'S CORNER

KITCHEN TIPS . . .

It is better to let a frozen pie crust thaw unwrapped before you fill and bake it.

Do not stretch dough when arranging on a pie plate before baking. This could be the reason for the pie shell to shrink.

To prevent a custard or fruit pie from becoming soggy on the bottom . . . brush with unbeaten egg white and allow to dry for five to 10 minutes before filling.

For a glazed top crust on a pie . . . brush lightly with milk and sprinkle with granulated sugar before baking.

MARMALADE CUPCAKES . . . one-half cup butter or margarine, two-thirds cup granulated sugar, two eggs, one-and-a-half cups unsifted all purpose flour, one-and-a-half tsp. baking powder, one-eighth tsp. salt, one-half cup milk, one-half cups orange marmalade, one tsp. orange extract and powdered sugar optional.

In a large mixing bowl beat together the butter and sugar until creamy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Stir together the flour, baking powder and salt. Add alternately with the milk to the creamed mixture. Stir in marmalade and orange extract. Spoon mixture into two to three-inch muffin cups greased and floured (OR use fluted paper cup liners).

Bake in a preheated 350°F. oven for 20 minutes for small size muffins or 25 to 30 minutes for larger size. Test for doneness. Remove from pans and serve warm OR cool on a wire rack. Dust with sifted powdered sugar before serving. The sugar sticks on better when applied while muffins are warm.

BUTTER OAT CRISPS . . . cream together one cup butter and one-half cup sugar until light and fluffy. Stir in until well blended one cup all purpose flour (unsifted), one-and-a-half cups rolled oats, regular or quick cooking. Add one tsp. almond extract or vanilla. Drop by rounded tsps. about two inches apart on greased cookie sheets. Rub bottom of a glass, that has a wide flat base, with butter then in granulated sugar. Then press into the dough, flattening it to about one-quarter-inch thick. If dough sticks to glass coat with more butter and sugar. Bake in a preheated 375°F. oven just until edges are a nice light brown . . . eight to 10 minutes. Cool slightly on pans then with wide spatula transfer to wire racks to cool.

IT'S A GIRL!

DEAR HELOISE:

After my daughter was born so many people mistook her for a boy, I purchased some barrettes, only they didn't stay in her fine hair.

After some thought, I decided to get a roll of double-stick tape and place it between the teeth of the barrettes.

ON THE GRILL

DEAR AUNT HELOISE:

I read your articles every Sunday, and I have an idea for the column.

Instead of using butter or margarine on grilled sandwiches, use mayonnaise.

It doesn't rip the bread like butter does and you can hardly tell the difference!

I didn't believe this until I tried it, but it really works. But be sure to use mayonnaise — not salad dressing.

SEEING'S BELOVING

DEAR HELOISE:

Baby showers are usually, well, baby showers, but recently we went to one that was delightful and different.

The hostess asked everyone to bring their gifts unwrapped and she displayed them on a long table. Refreshments were on an attractive table in the dining room.

It was sort of a "come and go" affair with the honoree mingling with the guests. We only stayed a short time but had time to see all the presents, talk with everyone and have refreshments.

We all thought it was a great idea!

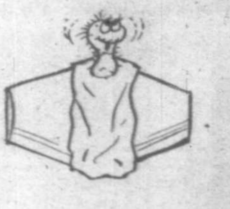
DEAR HELOISE:

I am 8 years old. My friend had a pet caterpillar and she needed something to keep it in.



So I took two paper cups and taped the openings together.

EGGS-ACTLY RIGHT!

DEAR HELOISE:

If anyone has trouble chopping or slicing olives, I have a great idea.

While trying to chop olives for a pizza — without chopping my fingers — I turned around and there was the answer. An egg slicer!

It works like a charm.

POSTCARD SPECIAL

DEAR HELOISE:

When I am going on an extended vacation, I write the addresses of those to whom I wish to send cards on a sheet of "peel and stick" labels.

This way, I know I have sent someone a card when the label has been used.

The sheet takes up little space and I do not have to carry my address book.

Mrs. Lowry Tims

WHAT A YARN!

DEAR HELOISE:

Do you have trouble threading yarn through the eye of your needle? Won't go through — all fuzzed up, etc.?

I was doing some needlework and was having this trouble and spotted the bottle of white glue nearby.

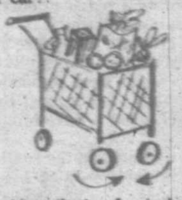
I took a tiny bit from the applicator, rolled it on the yarn and presto! No more trouble!

Mrs. Ann Gergel

WHOA!

DEAR HELOISE:

Have you ever had your grocery cart take off on a cross-country trip when you were trying to transfer the bags to your car?



Just turn the two front wheels inward so they are at opposite angles and that little ol' cart will stay put.

NO SLIDING!

DEAR HELOISE:

If you have a problem with a sliding rug, here's a good solution.

I've learned from experience to put a bag that comes from the cleaners under them. (Any small thin plastic bag will do.)

Backyard Gems

LANDING BEACH on Emily Islet.

It is all too easy to ignore our everyday surroundings while we extol the virtues of a distant land. How often do we tramp the West Coast Trail or drive down the Oregon Coast, but overlook the beauty of Greater Victoria itself? I don't say we have the cliffs and big seas, but there are other things in life.

So it is that, from time to time, I find myself bobbing on the island-studded waters of Oak Bay, in my well-travelled skiff. You don't have to row far to find a quiet island here, and though the bay is full of boats and houses are all around, I have yet to meet another soul on one of these beautiful islands.

WHEN A LIGHT wind and a low tide happen to coincide, I'll be off early in the morning to Cattle Point. All summer long the launching ramps are busy with fishermen, and all winter with gatherers of firewood — what a pleasure it is to watch this in the city! If the ramp is busy I may stroll over to the beautiful war memorial, surely the nicest I have seen, on a lichen-encrusted rock ridge nearby. Usually, however, I can slip out without waiting, and I'm soon weaving between yachts in the bay. One day Jemmy Jones Island was my target.

There is very little in the way of a beach on this long low rock. I approached the island from the west, where a white buoy bobs offshore, and rowed up the coast looking for a place to land. There is always a wee nook somewhere that can take a skiff, and soon I had pulled her up on a shelving rock in a hollow at the northern tip.

THIS NORTHERN end is almost cut off from the body of the island at times. Storms have thrown driftwood logs high onto the rocks to bridge channels that are flooded by high spring tides. Only here and there between the swelling rocks can soil accumulate and plants grow, and by the late summer most of the grass is bleached golden by the searing sun. However, between the humps of this northern peninsula one spot of deeper soil permits a patch of coarse grass to stay green all summer through.

Grass also grows in the centre of the island where a series of ridges and troughs were cut by glaciers in the ice age. Here somebody has once built a rudimentary shelter, and the remains, facing the sunset below a bare hill, can still be seen today.

There are two knolls in the southern part of the island, the highest only 20 feet above the waves. This is Survey Knoll, which carries a Hydrographic Survey reference marker put there in 1964. Beside it is a tall pole, set into the highest part of the rocky hill. There used to be more of these around the bay, as we shall see. The survey marker is a flat disc, invisible from the sea, but the pole renders its position visible to surveyors elsewhere around the bay.

DOWN BELOW the hill is a grassy meadow, another spot with deeper soil and green grass, a nice place to camp if you remember to bring water with you. There was a solitary tree here once, but only its stump remains.

On the shore below the meadow are some beautiful rock pools. The hot sun, evaporating the brine, leaves concentric red and yellow mineral bands around the pools, and heavy encrustations of salt on the bottoms.

Nothing lives here, but lower down the intertidal zone, where pools are more often flooded by the sea and the brine does not become so concentrated, life may be found.

Sculpins dart from your shadow as you approach, and hermit crabs bumble around between the anemonies. Sometimes a pink coating will be seen on the rocks; this is a layer of halophile bacteria; they are able to tolerate higher concentrations of salt than some creatures and do not mind when evaporation lowers the water level in the pool.

Rising steeply above the meadow is the island's second knoll, and when I was there somebody had erected on it a little windmill, a propellor than can be seen whirling in the breeze when the yachts are sliding by offshore.

THIS INTERESTING island is named after an interesting chap, "The redoubtable Captain James Jones." His exciting story of shipwreck, jail and piracy is well told in Walbran's B.C. Coast Names and need not be repeated here. It is certainly one of the most swashbuckling tales of the early history of Victoria. Jones ran his ship Carolina onto this island in the 1860s, but it was salvaged and later sold to the Metlakatla Mission up the coast.

Not so far away, and closer to the shore, is Evans Island. This is another rock mound, sparsely covered with grass, but it has a patch of beautiful garry oak and arbutus at its northern end. Hidden in the shady grove are shelters and hiding-places built by local children; a better Robinson Crusoe's Island could hardly be hoped for.

I saw this island from the air one day when I took the sightseeing flight from Victoria's inner harbor. That trip was worth every penny for the new perspective it gave me of the island I love. There was the clump of arbutus, and running north from it was a small peninsula. The island looked like a playing-card spade, with its little handle pointing north. From the ground that shape is not as obvious, but the peninsula is still there, enclosing a quiet bay where ducks may be seen landing in formation and dabbling in the pools. This is where I landed.

IT DOESN'T TAKE long to explore an island like this, but I stayed long enough to discover a hole drilled into the rock at the highest point, south of the trees. This probably once held a post like that on Jemmy Jones Island. There are two buoys off the west coast, one used as a mooring by a local boatowner. This island was called Flower Islet, when these waters were surveyed by Captain Richards in 1860s. The name was later changed, but a reef off the south end of Evans Island is sometimes known as Flower Rocks, retaining the old name.

Northwest of Evans is little Staines Island, which sports a huge erratic boulder, deposited by the ice-sheet. In the spring the island's meadow is fragrant with yarrow and Geyer's Onion, and bright with broom. Richards called this Ellen Islet; his successors renamed it and in 1964 planted a Hydrographic Survey marker on its highest point.

If you set out in the other direction from Cattle Point, a second group of islands is accessible, and here I have spent many happy hours. I remember that day when I first noticed a miniature beach on Emily Islet. It was not long before my rowboat grounded on the clamshells that compose the beach, and I could explore the tiny islet. There was little to explore; a few tufts of grass on the lichen-gilded summit and a pile of driftwood thrown up by some enormous storm, now bleached and mossy with age.

I DON'T EXPECT great things when I look around a rock like this, but there is always some distinctive detail, and Emily Islet's contribution to my memory is a scene of startling color. A rock pool high on the island, filled by rain or splashes, reflected the cloudless sky perfectly, and framing the deep blue pool was a field of lichen of almost fluorescent yellow.

LIGHTHOUSE on Fiddle Reef.

By P. J. Stooke

Closer to the shore, sheltering the Oak Bay Marina, is Mary Tod Island; it is much larger than any of the others we have dealt with, and has many distinctive features. There is a northern hill, a flat central plain and a rocky southern knoll, from which a recently-constructed breakwater runs south and west to shelter the nearby marina. Scots may like to compare this layout with that of Cramond Island near Edinburgh, scene of many Saturday afternoon outings in the 'good old days'.

There is a great deal of beauty and interest on this island. In February its summit is ablaze with carpets of red and white stonecrop.

Summer outshines spring with broom, and the grass is bleached golden by the sun. There is a fine sheltered beach on the northwest side of the island, a small but dramatic crag above it, and a rocky eastern shoreline fretted by the waves. Across one deep indentation on the east coast Mr. Rattenbury, an early Oak Bay resident, built a concrete wall to form a swimming pool.

IT CAN STILL be seen, but storms have thrown logs galore into the pool; now it is hard to see the water between them. Before the pool was built an Indian named Jimmy Chicken had a shack on the island, and even today his name is frequently used interchangeably with Mary Tod's to label his estate.

Mary Tod was the daughter of a prominent local figure of Victoria's early years, John Tod. He operated a farm above Willows Beach after his retirement.

Before we leave the swimming pool we should notice a deep hole behind it, dug in the heavy island soil and now partially filled with stagnant water. Was there an outhouse here for the pool users? On the other hand it may record an attempt to extend the pool further, though that seems unlikely. A more recent activity on Mary Tod Island is indicated by a log-boom tethered to the western shore; a salvager gathers stray logs around the bay and stores them here.

Before we leave we must check the summit of the island; sure enough, there is a hole drilled in the rock, so Mary Tod may once have sported a mast like that on Jemmy Jones Island. Nearby is a metal pin fixed into the rock and now bent flat to the ground.

EMILY ISLET has a companion further south. It is named after Emily's father, Thomas Harris, the first mayor of Victoria. The channel to the east of these islets is called Mayor Channel, also after him. Harris island has no beach, but an offshore rock shelters a calm nook on the east coast and a nimble boater can hop ashore. There is little to see but plenty to smell where the gulls and cormorants have whitewashed the top of the rock.

I had to move quickly to avoid being whitewashed myself, and before long I was rowing across Mayor Channel, followed by an inquisitive seal.

The tide can flow quite rapidly around these little islands, and some shallow areas are prone to rough water, especially east of Emily Islet. At slack I felt my skiff was equal to the channel and pulled across it to the serene northern coast of Great Chain Island. The still, shallow waters north of the island cover a garden of dreaming seaweeds; flashes of mother-of-pearl were reflected from — of all things — the dulse that carpeted the seabed as the dappled sunlight fell on it.

GREAT CHAIN ISLAND is a breeding site for glaucous-winged gulls and pelagic cormorants, and the birds should not be disturbed during the summer. They do have a very attractive island, however, so if an off-season visit is possible it should be made.

I landed on a fine gravel beach facing the ragged Chain Islands, a tangle of rocks east of the main island. There are four beaches on the island, but this is the only one unobstructed by rocks at low tide. Above it a patch of bushes and a grassy meadow extends inland, rising to a low rocky hill. This mound, like much of the island, is built of ice-sculpted ridges; soil collects in betweet them. Here and there are a few larger meadows, brushed blue with camas in may but yellowed by the sun and trampled by the gulls in the summer.

The largest meadow is found in the southern part of the island, occupying a low-lying area with a beach at each end. The northern shoreline is distinguished by two clumps of bushes in hollows in the rock. In one I found a dead crow that had tangled its foot in string and had become suspended from a branch, unable to free itself.

THE CENTRAL HILL of the island is crowned with a cairn that can be seen clearly from the Oak Bay shoreline. Nearby, as on Mary Tod Island, is a metal peg bent into a horizontal position.

Between Great Chain Island and Cattle Point lies Fiddle Reef with its distinctive red and white lighthouse. As I passed I caught a glimpse of a less visible but no less interesting feature of this little rock. A deep crack has cleft the island, just west of the lighthouse steps. Over it a keeper (at a time when the tiny windowless structure was inhabited) built an arched bridge leading to the landing. Quite an unexpected feature on such a speck of rock! Ah, but there are many unexpected little details to be seen and enjoyed out on these Oak Bay islands, our little backyard gems.

Japanese Blew Up Pearl Harbor
... and Wanted To Fry Us

When the Canadian Army was struggling on the Western Front in the early winter of 1944 and there was an urgent call for reinforcements, yet, in the military camps in Vernon and Terrace the Zombies mutinied when orders came for their movement overseas, mysterious "unidentified flying objects" were testing the eyesight of observers, not only on Vancouver Island but the full length of the Pacific Coast from Alaska to Mexico, and even westward as far as the Hawaiian Islands.

It was a "hush-hush" affair, but rumors were afloat which caused apprehension here. Who knew what those fiendish Japanese were up to? They had pulled the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor and had given unforgivable treatment to our prisoners-of-war. Perhaps they were resorting to some other diabolical approach, maybe bacterial warfare!

MANY OF US can recall, with regret, the savage depths to which we descend when war is upon us. Who will forget the first gas attack the Germans launched on the Canadian division at Ypres in April, 1915, or the dropping of the atom bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, or the launching of V-bombs on London?

I remember quite vividly, even at this late date, the effort of the Germans to terrorize the citizens of Paris during Easter week, 1918. I had just arrived to spend 14 days' leave in that delightful city, was sleeping in linen sheets and pillowslips after having the first real bath in several months, when I was startled by the explosion of a shell. There was no mistaking that sound, which I at least thought I had left behind for the time of my leave. I tried to get back to sleep but in 20 minutes there was another explosion. I dressed and went to the lobby of my hotel, where I found fear on the faces of the people. I asked what was the trouble, but no one had an answer. They knew the British Fifth Army had been penetrated by the Germans and they feared that the Boche was closer to Paris than what the military authorities would admit.

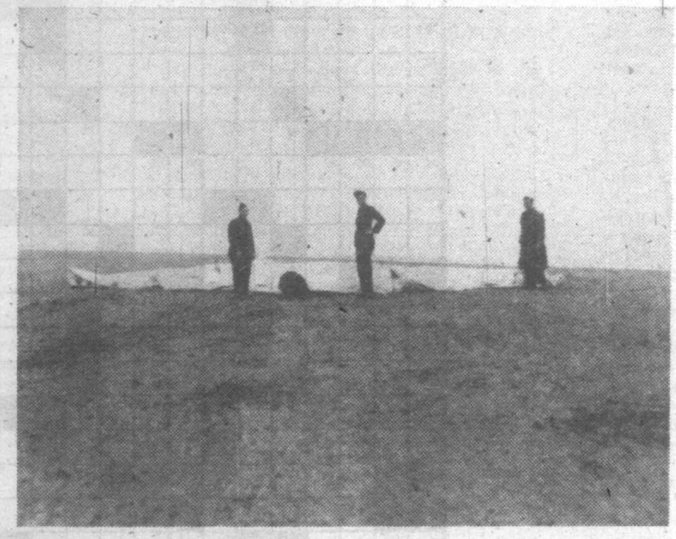
I walked to the Arc de Triomphe and was surprised to find all traffic at a standstill, people clustered about the entrances to the subway, others scanning the skies. Every 20 minutes there was an explosion. I sought an answer and got some odd ones. One man suggested that zeppelins were in the skies, dropping bombs on Paris, another felt we had been deceived and the Germans were really knocking at the gates of Paris.

That night the Gothas came over and unloaded their cargoes of bombs, adding to the anxiety of the Parisiennes.

Next day there was an explosion in the Place de Concorde and five people were killed. Another occurred in the famous church at St. Gervais and killed 156 worshippers on Easter Sunday. Then, late in the afternoon there was the swish of something passing over the Jardin de Tuileries and it plunked into the flowerbeds. No explosion, though.

MILITARY PERSONNEL arrived and unearthed what was identified as a 5.9-inch shell, weighing about 259 pounds. A faulty fuse had prevented it from detonating, but it revealed to the citizenry that they must be within a few miles' range of the German artillery. This horrified the people who had suffered capture in 1871 by the Germans and, though not known at the time, they would face it once again in 1940.

In reality the Germans were still many miles away; in fact they had not captured Amiens. Later investigation showed that the Germans had produced an amazing weapon for the sole purpose of stampeding the citizens. They had used one of their 15-inch naval guns, reducing the bore to a third of its size but leaving the breech alone, into which they were able to cram the normal charge, which tossed the shell 75 miles.



JAPANESE BALLOON, deflated and stretched out on beach at Point Roberts, 60 miles from Victoria, after it had crossed Pacific, riding the jet stream. Members of RCAF standing by balloon. Pictures from public archives, Ottawa.

The Germans soon found that the massive gun, which had been dubbed "Big Bertha," could not withstand a regular firing schedule, even at 20-minute intervals, and it was reduced. Sometimes it was idle for a day. The Germans also discovered that the aiming was bad and the shells dropped up to a mile apart. However, it did achieve one of its objectives and caused dislocation of life in Paris for some days.

THE FIRING soon was discontinued, but the Allies learned one lesson: Don't aid the enemy with information about the effectiveness of their fire, which was to be remembered in 1944 when "unidentified flying objects" were reported over the Pacific Coast.

I was involved in this developing crisis, because I was not only holding an important position with the Victoria Times, which brought me in daily contact wih the chief censor in Ottawa, but I was also acting mayor of Victoria, a member of the War Board and directly involved with what is now known as Civil Defence, but in those days was identified by the initials ARP (air raid precautions).

WHEN THE RUMORS began circulating about the unidentified flying objects, many of them reached me and had to be checked out. Ottawa and Washington, D.C., were vitally interested in them as they were suspicious of some action by Japan.

A thorough search was organized in an effort to get one of the disturbing objects. It was impossible to locate them in the air owing to the altitude at which they were flying, but eventually they would have to land somewhere, like the dud shell that fell in Paris.

The authorities put a seal on the search and, if any object were found, it was to be reported to Ottawa or Washington, but its whereabouts and what it was would be kept secret. This precaution, as it happened, upset the perpetrators of the scheme, which was revealed after Japan capitulated.

THE FIRST BREAK in the mystery came off the California coast when a U.S. vessel saw what it thought was a weather balloon flying just above the ocean and officers were mystified when they saw the contraption, which resembled a basket, trailing ropes. The crew picked up the balloon and hustled it to headquarters.

On Jan. 12, 1945, an undamaged balloon came down near Minton, Sask., and in April another landed at Point Roberts, close by the now active ferry slip at Tsawwassen. Others were located, but no mention was made of them, which denied the Japs of getting a pattern and making adjustments.

THE BALLOONS carried several instruments, which regulated the altitude and could release a radio transmitter and the fire bombs which were carried.

Their purpose was to ignite the great stands of timber on the Pacific Coast and cause pandemonium among the population. The Japs planned their major assault in the warm weather when the forests were tinder dry, there being no hope of success in rainy weather.

Once hostilities were over the Japanese secret weapon was exhibited to the Allies and the story of unidentified flying objects was pieced together.

The cagey Japs used the jet stream, which we hear so much about these days from the weathermen on TV, to drive their balloons across the 4,500 miles of the Pacific Ocean. Their plans called for 20,000 balloons to be launched on our forests in 1945.

The early trial balloons were made of several layers of paper, made from the mulberry tree, and held together by a tough glue. It was on the same principle as our plywood. The balloon was a little more than 30 feet in diameter and was filled with hydrogen gas. It could handle a payload of around 325 pounds, made up of incendiary and high-explosive bombs plus 40 bags of sand, which were suspended from the main metal ring.

THE APPARATUS held no mystery for our experts, but the bags of sand did. Samples were rushed to both Ottawa and Washington and they called in scientists and asked them where it came from. The scientists and their technicians sifted the sand and from the contents they came up with a solution that the sand came from Sendai, 215 miles from Tokyo.

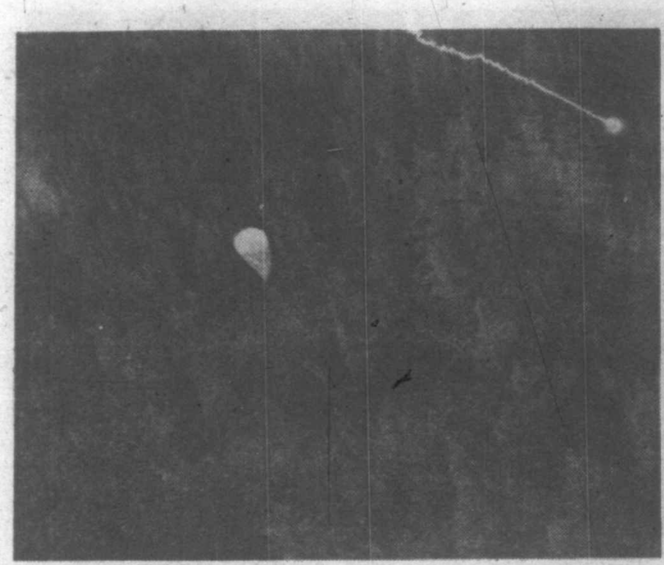
Photographic planes flew over the site and the pictures they took showed platforms on which balloons were filled and ready for launching.

Bombers were then directed at Sendai, but it was only one of several launching sites. After the war a much larger complex was inspected by Allied conquerors at Ibaraki, 125 miles north of Tokyo. From these bases the Japs intended to let loose 100 balloons a day and expected them to be carried by the westerly winds at an altitude of 45,000 feet across the Pacific in less than 100 hours.

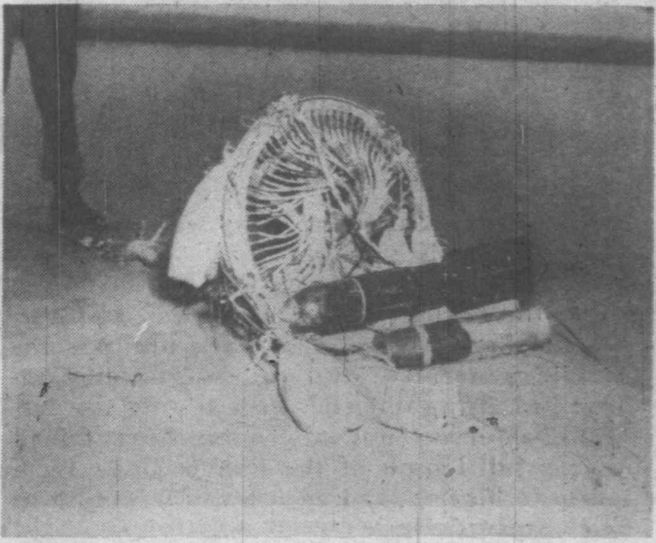
When the balloons were hovering over our area even the strongest eyes, aided by binoculars and telescopes, found it impossible to detect the white bags which were gobbled up in the blue at six miles up.

The final check by the authorities showed that the Japs had launched 9,000 balloons on our forests and only 300, in various stages of deterioration, were found on this side. The experiment is estimated to have cost the Japs $200 million.

IT WAS OFTEN surmised it was one of these balloons, flying at a low altitude, which disrupted the big rally of ARP wardens and helpers in the auditorium of Victoria High School and sent them scurrying in the black of night to their posts.



ONE OF THE FEW PICTURES obtained of a Japanese balloon approaching its target, the forests of British Columbia. Once spotted ground forces quickly gathered in the balloons.



THIS PICTURE SHOWS PAYLOAD OF ABOUT 300 POUNDS, including incendiary and fragmentation bombs, which were to have set fire to our forests and terrorized the populace.

By Archie Wills

This area was sensitive to the threat of enemy action in the First World War when the B.C. government, ignored by appeals to Ottawa for better defences, bought two submarines out of its own pocket to hopefully provide some force to meet the German squadron heading this way which threatened to capture Victoria and assume charge of British Columbia.

The fleet altered course and met its fate off the Falkland Islands at the hands of the Royal Navy, under Admiral Sturdee's command.

Before the Second World War, when we were exposed to the number one object of the enemy, the huge Boeing aircraft plant in Seattle, we were better prepared for an offensive from the sea and the aircraft had not attained its real potential. Victoria and Esquimalt were ringed by forts at strategic positions. The huge Albert Head fort housed two 9.2 guns and was self-contained with its own water supply and power plant, with everything underground.

In the Race Rocks area there were two eight-inch guns and not far away were three six-inch guns on Mary Hill, directed from the observation post on Triangle Mountain, now an attractive residential area. The two forts at Macaulay Point and Rodd Hill, each with three six-inch guns, were still manned and smaller batteries at Duntze Head, Belmont, Black Rock and the end of the breakwater stood ready with their 12-pounders in case an enemy landing party appeared. Two minor guns, six-pounders, occupied a new fort on Ogden Point, which local heritage folk recently failed to have preserved.

THERE ARE VICTORIANS who still remember those anxious days and are aware that, should there be another world war, we would again be close to the firing line. That is why there is anxiety over the construction of the nuclear submarine base at Bangor, Wash., not 40 miles away, a sure target for an enemy. Once at war, anything goes, and we would likely get any missiles that went astray; not a pleasant outlook for not only timid souls but also the strong of heart.

During the Second World War the British Columbia coastline was blacked out after Pearl Harbor and, as Esquimalt was the base for the Canadian Navy, it was regarded as a prime target and when the Japanese had captured some of the Aleutian Islands it was expected they would continue eastward and head for our area.

Drastic steps were taken to ensure the safety of our citizens. We instituted a complete blackout, modelled after the system in Great Britain. We had plywood to cover our windows and inside curtains to make sure there were no "chinks" which would let out light. The waterfront street lights were shut off and those on other streets were covered, except for a small slit. Automobiles had slits in their headlights. The night boats to Vancouver had their wheelhouses reinforced with concrete walls, and huge searchlights, one on Clover Point, were used to constantly patrol the waters out to Race Rocks.

Every man, woman and child was equipped with a gas mask, a special one for newborn babies. It was carried everywhere — to school, church, sports events and, when one went to bed, it was hung on the bedpost. Air raid shelters were constructed in homes and buildings and air raid wardens patrolled each block. Each homeowner had buckets of sand in his basement, a stirrup pump and hoses attached to outside taps, in order to effectively combat threats of fires. It was a time of considerable anxiety.

OTTAWA WAS ANXIOUS to have an appraisal of the effectiveness of the ARP setup in Canada and invited two of the leaders in the civil defence in London, which was effective and a model, to come over and rate us. Demonstrations were given by our wardens, one on a black, wet night when everyone got saturated but received high marks from the visitors.

A gathering of our officials and wardens was set for the next night in the high school, when the visitors would relate some of their experiences in London and make any recommendations to improve our system.

As acting mayor I was to be chairman, but just as I was to welcome the visitors and thank the 600 wardens for their attendance and good work, the air raid sirens broke in upon us and their dreadful whine continued, which assured me that it was not a false alarm, pulled by someone who wanted to impress the London visitors. The wardens responsible for the high school area didn't hesitate but began blacking out the building and, to make sure, pulled all the switches, leaving us blacked out inside as well as outside.

When I was able to get an answer for the cause of the blackout I was advised that "There's an unidentified aircraft or something else overhead."

In such a happening, every air warden at the meeting was due at some place at that moment, myself at headquarters which was in the basement of the Fisgard Street police station.

Many of the wardens were elderly and care had to be taken in evacuating the high school, especially getting them down the wide, high, stone steps which could be dangerous, as no lights were allowed and there was no moon.

WHEN EVERYONE was out of the building, I got my wife, and felt our first duty was to our home and our three children and the babysitter, so I located our car and headed for Fairfield. Like everyone else on the road we drove without any lights.

After securing everything in our home, I took off for headquarters and was relieved when I was challenged at the corner of Cook and Fairfield by a warden, and knew we had some wardens on duty. I was challenged four additional times, but when I reached headquarters I found sufficient help on hand, but all were apprehensive as to what was going on up in the skies. No further information had come in about the unidentified object, as everyone sat around and waited, sipping coffee, for the "all clear."

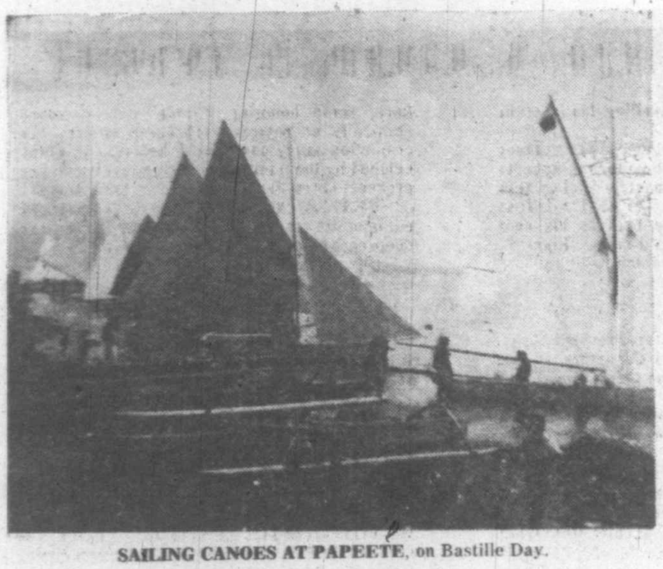
As time passed I was convinced my first impression would be the correct one and it would turn out to be a false alarm, based on human error. But you can't base your judgment on that premise, so our lines to Western Command were kept open. The London officers were used to alarms and quick responses, but when they were assured by us that we hadn't staged the alarm to show ourselves off, they were as anxious as we were for the truth.

AS WE SAT in headquarters we discussed the future of ARP, which would be changed to Civil Defence. There was agreement that, while conscription for overseas service was a nasty word in Quebec and caused disruption in Canada, there should be conscription for Civil Defence. We felt all boys and girls on reaching the age of 18, should spend their weekends for the next year learning to take orders, to perform all type of rescue work, including first aid, fight fires, calm citizens and when disaster strikes, patrol streets, aid the police.

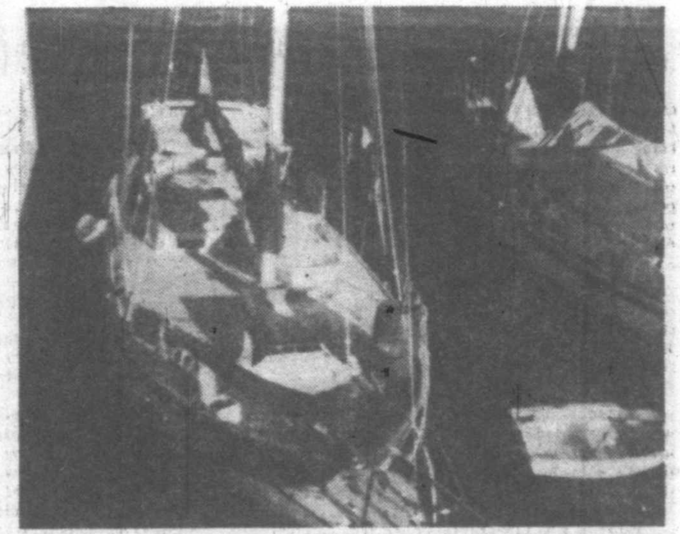
Even today we have no effective system to combat civilian misadventures. People stand around and watch a person drown or be killed, expecting someone else to act. No one wants to be sued for doing something wrong in an emergency.

This discussion ended with the delightful music of the "all clear," which quickly lifted a load of apprehension from our minds. It had been a case of mistaken identification.

TODAY IT COULDN'T happen because we have instant communication with everything and anything and checking is instantaneous and the speed of aircraft and missiles is so great that if you're not hit in the passing of them, you know you'll be alive.



SAILING CANOES AT PAPEETE, on Bastille Day.



DESTINY, AT PAPEETE.

Greenfields in South Seas

VOYAGE of DESTINY

(Second of two parts)

By Margaret Williams

Late in October 1976 the Destiny and her company of Michael, Margeret and Shawn Greenfield of Victoria sailed out of Cartagena bound for Aruba in the Dutch Antilles, sailing along the coast of Colombia.

The weather was good with variable winds. They had provisioned the Destiny with fresh fruit, eggs, vegetables, chickens and beef. Prices were reasonable in Cartagena, Colombian coffee, for instance, was one dollar a pound, and it was excellent.

AFTER PASSING the northeast point of Colombia, that is Punta Gallinas — meaning Chicken Point —they ran into the southeast trade winds of the Carribean. The Destiny, says Michael, rode the 12 to 14-foot waves like a cork. Margaret freely admits she was frightened to death but she bravely took her turn at the tiller. This was consistently the worst weather they had met. After several days of battling the wind, seas, and currents, they turned about and headed for an anchorage in a small bay on the Colombian coast.

"There comes a point in cruising" observes Michael, "when one is forced to face up to realities. One must decide whether it is better to continue on one's preconceived course or decide that discretion is the better part of valor — whether the important thing is to continue at any cost or simply to admit that the game's not worth the candle."

Consequently they decided to turn the Destiny about and run before the wind and to enjoy the elements that they had been endeavoring to conquer. They had been outward bound from Cartegena for seven days and in three they were back. They met again some of their boating friends, one an Englishman named Tony with whom they spent a year cruising the Pacific. Tony had a 50-foot Hood design sloop.

At Cartegena they decided to return through the canal to the Pacific and on Christmas eve they arrived in Cristobal. With their friend Tony and several others they decided to celebrate by dining out. After walking around the town for several hours they found everything closed for the holiday so this most memorable of Christmas dinners, laughs Margaret, consisted of soup and grilled cheese sandwiches aboard the Destiny.

IN COLON they were joined by Michael's mother, Marjorie Greenfield, who flew out from Victoria for a month's stay. Arrived at Playa Blanca, a secluded bay 25 miles from Colon, they revelled in the warm swimming and the beautiful beaches and enjoyed a week of complete solitude. They were invited to a native casa, or house, and here they saw the women splitting palm fronds with which to make mattresses.

They drank cocoanut milk fresh from the tree and were invited to try some of their smoked meat, which Mike thinks was wild dog. He climbed a tree to gather bananas, but was immediately attacked by myriads of small stinging ants and so made a speedy descent. Daily he swam and speared fish which were fairly small with a delicious flavor and these were a welcome addition to their diet.

Once again they transited the canal and arrived at the yacht club at Balboa, where they spent two days before returning to Taboga. Marjorie wished to see the San Blas islands so with Shawn she flew from Panama City on a 40-minute flight to Piedatupo to discover a delighful and unspoiled world.

The Cuna Indians of the San Blas islands live today as they have for thousands of years. A few leave to work in the canal zone but eventually they return to the islands. Marjorie and Shawn were taken in a small native boat, a caiuca, over to Little Orange island where they watched the men mending their nets and the women sewing their malas and making cocoanut and fish soup in huge cauldrons over open fires. Usually the women, remarks Marjorie, are very shy and disappear into the huts when tourists arrive and the men do the trading of the molas. Because Marjorie and Shawn were with a Cuna they were made very welcome.

Marjorie flew home to Victoria and the Destiny was prepared for her first long ocean cruising. Gear was re-checked and supplies brought aboard for possibly a two-month passage. Margaret remarks with a smile that at this point she really considered hopping on a plane for home. However, on Feb. 26 the Destiny sailed out of the canal zone and into the Pacific.

FOR NINE DAYS they headed towards the Galapagos Islands, with never a sight of land or ship, taking night watches by turns. One morning they awoke to see a speck on the horizon and after drifting slowly for several hours in light winds, the speck became a large tuna boat and they decided, after some loud hailing to visit the Destiny.

It was a Canadian registered tuna boat with a crew from all over the world. They launched a small tender and two came aboard, inquiring if they needed supplies and they were kind enough to give them a sack of oranges, some grapefruit and fresh water to top up their tanks as well as a huge hunk of fresh frozen tuna.

What they couldn't eat they sun dried on deck. This encounter made a welcome break on their crossing and they arrived at the Galapagos at the end of 13 days.

They were permitted to stay only 24 hours as the islands are rigidly controlled to preserve the unique wildlife. They did, however manage to anchor in one bay on the way through where the water was so clear that at 20 feet they could see shells on the bottom and dozens of seals playing beneath the boat. On another near-by island they could walk up to the seals on the beach and they marvelled at a lagoon filled with pink flamingos. These unspoiled islands, Michael observes, are some of the most beautiful and unique in the world.

Two days after leaving these islands the Destiny entered the southeast trade winds of the Pacific and for the next 29 days they hardly changed a sail or altered course until they were in close range of the Marquesas.

ON THEIR JOURNEY they encountered, one midnight, a pod of perhaps 15 great whales, swimming beside and beneath the boat. Mike was on watch and he could easily have reached out and touched them, so close were they. They set their speakers on deck and Margaret sat below for almost two hours playing Mozart tapes for their fellow travellers, praying it would keep them in good humor. All this time the whales travelled with them and then quietly left. This was a never-to-be-forgotten experience and rather a frightening one.

Their first landfall, after this, was quite a traumatic experience as, after crossing 4,000 miles of open sea one wonders, says Mike, if one's navigation is going to succeed in discovering such a small dot of land where it is supposed to be. They should have sighted the island of Ua Huka about noon according to his calculations but after sailing until dusk without sight of land he began to get a little nervous. However, after sailing in full moonlight, at one a.m. there was the mountain of Ua Huka, about 20 miles distant. It had been shrouded in mist.

Next morning at daybreak they sighted their destination, a small bay set into the island of Nuka Hiva. Rounding the headland they saw masts of other sailboats and anchored amidst the greetings of many old friends, a most moving and satisfactory moment in their lives.

They rested here for a month, exploring the islands and getting to know the Marquesa natives, who have their own language. They are those adventurous years seems evidenced by Vancouver writing that he was "very pleased in being thus connected with a fellow-traveller for whose abilities I have the greatest respect and in whose friendship and good opinion I am proud to possess a place." (Quoted from George Godwin's "Vancouver, a life" published by D. Appleton Co., New York, 1931.)

UNFORTUNATELY for Roberts, Martinez' seizure of British ships at Nootka and the resulting furor among the European powers meant shelving of the project and disbanding of the Discovery's personnel. Roberts himself being sent to a posting in the Caribbean.

When, in 1791, the Discovery expedition was remounted it was Captain George Vancouver who commanded it. Whether Roberts was more useful where he was or whether, with the negotiations with the Spaniards at Nootka added to the Discovery's duties, Vancouver was the more suitable man is not clear.

Roberts was to continue at the West Indies posting until his death in 1796, soon after his frigate, the Dauntless had taken part in the capture of Demerara, Guiana. He died of yellow fever, that curse of the tropics that was later also to claim the life of one of his sons.

Another son, Daniel, who was like his father both a naval officer and skilled at sketching, was to survive war and pestilence and by the 1820s, retired on half-pay, was travelling footloose in Europe.

In Italy Captain Daniel Roberts was to meet both Byron and Shelley. Nature-loving Roberts was entranced by Shelley's poetry. Shelley was entranced by the sea and when he decided he must have a boat specially built to his own wished it was the experienced sailor, Roberts, who was asked to supervise the building and design of the Ariel. Sadly, it was when Shelley was sailing this beloved boat that a sudden, short storm arose and Shelley, for all his love of boating never deft on the water, drowned.

BUT BACK to 1791 and departure of the Discovery and her tender, the Chatham, for the Pacific.

By April, 1792, Vancouver had entered Juan de Fuca Strait and in small boats engaged on a careful survey of its eastern shores.

Of Vancouver's old companions of 1778, Bligh, one may note, was at that same time lying at anchor in Tahiti taking on his second shipment of bread-fruit plants — 1,281 containers in all by the time he left on July 19.

Roberts was on active service in the Caribbean.

On June 2 Vancouver, who had given names to many points and bays along the coast behind him over the previous six weeks (some for local flora, some honoring a man high in court, admiralty or government) came to the "low projecting sandy point that," he says: "I distinguished by the name of my esteemed friend and predecessor on the Discovery . . . Point Roberts.

NEARLY 200 YEARS later, in 1968, the name of the seaman was also applied to the new deepsea port of Roberts Bank.

One plays with the idea that perhaps it was some resemblance between this sandy promontory and some southern atoll that may have caused Vancouver to choose to call this particular spot by the name of the friend and seaman, with whom he had shared youthful years on southern seas.

From Point Roberts, Vancouver was to continue on to Nootka and the historic meeting with Quadra. Then on to the further explorations in the Pacific that were to lead to his prominent place in history.

But the life of a seaman then was hard and Vancouver, like Roberts and Cook before him, was to die around the age of 50. Only Bligh was to pass his 60th birthday, dying in London under medical care in his 65th year.

Of these four, who shared in that first landing at Nootka, the names of three are well-known but, at least here in British Columbia, the name of Henry Roberts, friend of Vancouver, bane of Bligh, highly-regarded by Cook deserves also this year, its time in the sun.

a friendly and hospitable people and they visited their houses and were invited for meals when they ate wild goat, breadfruit and always bananas and cocoanut. They harvest their own wild coffee beans and with the coffee they drink cocoanut cream, or of all things, Carnation canned milk.

These islands are run by the French, but very few outside visitors arrive. Most of the natives speak French as well as their own language. The islands are very old extinct volcanos with startling landscape peaks and valleys. Here, it is said, Gauguin is buried.

RELUCTANTLY they left and sailed for the Tuamotos or Dangerous Islands, about 400 miles in the direction of Tahiti. This proved to be one of their best sailing periods and in three-and-a-half days they arrived at their destination. The contrast was remarkable as none of these many islands rise not more than three feet above sea level. The first indication of land was the ragged edge of palm trees against the horizon, no more than eight miles distant. All these groups of islands are formed by reefs with a lagoon roughly circled by many small motos or islands. These lagoons can only be entered by passes which can be found at times, but only with difficulty. However, once inside, Destiny and her people found a marvellous sense of peace and tranquility.

After anchoring the first night just inside the pass they asked two of the natives if there were any other sail boats at the villge across the lagoon.

They were told there were four other boats and this they hardly believed but, sure enough, there were four British Columbia boats at the village of Ahe, a place that sees, perhaps, only 30 sail boats in a year. There they were, the Atea, the Maneathene, and Mercator, all of Victoria, and Hawk Wind of Vancouver.

The local people see no visitors other than those who come by small boats and so were delighted to entertain them; amongst them the chief and his wife Mama Fana. At the end of 10 days here the whole village, of perhaps 100 people, turned out to see them off, bringing gifts of shell necklaces and fresh cocoanutbread which, remarks Margaret, is superb. The chief's son at Ahe was called Tamatoa and the crews from the sailboats helped him build his fishing boat, which he named Victoria.

Destiny's next stop was The Dream of the Pacific, Tahiti, and here they stayed for eight months. Shawn attended a French-speaking school, where the children were Tahitian and French, and he loved it. There were also two boys of his own age from other boats.

Destiny was moored alongside the quay of Papeete, a bustling town of 30,000. Michael found work in a small boatyard, a welcome change, and Margaret sewed and made her own wooden-soled shoes and shopped in the marvellous open-air markets.

From Papeete one can see the beautiful island of Moorea which they visited on several occasions and both Mike and Margaret say that if they were to choose their favorite island in the world it would be Moorea. It is the home of many artists and Michael himself is a painter and Margaret is very artistic — as anyone would know if they had visited their Victoria home — and here they found congenial friends.

In Tahiti they were given a most unusual cat, black with tan markings and she was named Tama. On their visits to Moorea they taught her to swim. Shawn took her out daily and put her into the sea and she would swim back to the cat ladder on the boat. This paid off later when she accidentally fell overboard.

LEAVING TAHITI after a stay of eight months was almost like leaving home. They had made many friends but, on May 23, 1977, they sailed through the pass from the harbor of Papeete and headed for Hawaii, another 2,200 miles.

This passage was a complete change from previous experiences as they encountered squalls and rough weather for most of the 25 days passage. Their approach to the big island of Hawaii was preceeded by several days of overcast skies and rain storms. Again, their first sighting was a matter of 10 miles distance when they saw the light of Hilo.

Entering harbor at night, observes Michael, is often a difficult manoeuvre, but not welcoming the idea of standing off overnight they inched their way inside the breakwater and anchored at three a.m.

As Michael says most people are familiar with the Hawaiian islands, but for them there were a few outstanding events, such as their crossing of the Alinihaha channel from Hawaii to Maui, notorious for its extremely high winds. They made the trip, leaving at six a.m. from Kawahae, flying (for us, says Mike) at eight to 10 knots, and anchoring eight hours later in a peaceful bay of Maui. They visited Lahaina and Lanai and here Tama swam ashore to find her Hawaiian lover.

After Molokai they arrived at Waikiki, their first American city for two-and-a-half years and, remarks Margaret, it was almost frightening. For nearly three years they had seen no skyscrapers, encountered no traffic, or crowds of people in shopping centres.

AT THE END of three weeks they set out for the last stretch of their homeward voyage, another 2,200 miles and this took 29 days, three weeks of warm weather and light winds and a week of strong winds and freezing cold.

Closing on their landfall of Cape Flattery the wind died to almost nothing and drifting slowly along Margaret heard what sounded like muffled explosions and when Mike relieved her he heard the same sounds and then, not 100 yards ahead he saw white water, often a sign of rock or reef. As he swerved to avoid it, whatever it was, a startled bird arose and he saw the flukes of a giant whale suberging just ahead, quite a climax, they laugh, to their journeying.

They had dreamed many times of arriving in Victoria early one morning, of stepping ashore and breakfasting at the Empress, and at six a.m. one Saturday morning, they tied up in the Inner Harbor after a cruise of almost 20,000 miles.

They were greeted by Marjorie and Michael's sister, Judy, and they did, indeed, breakfast on eggs and bacon at the Empress.

Margaret recalls that there were many times when she was literally scared to death. "It is not all smooth sailing on romantic moonlit seas" she says, "It is a lot of hard work and there is anxiety particularly when you have a young child along, but I am so glad we did it."

The Greenfields are settling down at Brentwood, but at this moment on their coffee table are a number of books, one titled Waterways of France and another Through the French Canals, so it is almost a foregone conclusion that before too long Michael, Margaret and Shawn, three very delightful and adventurous young people, will be off to cruise the canals and waterways of England and Europe and this, says Margaret, will be much more her cup of tea!

Tama, by the way, that cat from Tahiti, as a result of her swim at Lanai, brought forth four kittens, two orange, one grey stripe, and one black soon after her arrival in Victoria.

Boating Can Be Fun ... and dangerous

By T. W. Paterson

For thousands of British Columbians the arrival of summer means many enjoyable hours on the water.

For some boating will mean mishap and tragedy.

Usually the villain is inexperience; many have been lost simply because they were unable to meet what, to a seasoned boater, would be minor mishap or emergency. Others seem to tempt fate through a combination of ignorance, impulsiveness and stupidity.

ALMOST 80 YEARS AGO, the former cost the lives of two young Victorians, George Peart, 18, and Frank Bowser, in his mid-20s. Early in the spring of 1899, Peart, Bowser and 13-year-old Alfred Hammond went for a short sail off Esquimalt in Bowser's dinghy, which was fitted with single jib and mainsail.

They had been out for 15 minutes when their tiny craft was struck by a squall and all three occupants were hurled into the sea. Not one of the young sailors could swim and none was wearing a lifebelt; frantically, they attempted to cling to the boat. Hammond, being the youngest, was the first to weaken; in minutes his grip was broken and the waves began to carry him away from his companions and the overturned dinghy.

But Peart was able to pull him back to safety. Despite their danger, Peart did not lose heart; in fact, according to the record, in "his face-to-face meeting with death (he) seemed to think not of himself but how to save or cheer his younger companion."

FOR SOME TIME the squall bludgeoned the overturned sailboat and its three terrified passengers. Again, young Hammond lost his hold and was about to be swept away to certain death when Peart drew him back to their heaving float.

However, the continual rocking of the boat, and the frigid water, soon had their effect. First to let go was Bowser who, with a smothered cry . . . slipped beneath the waves. More time passed, with Peart and Hammond exerting the last of their ebbing strength to hold on. Then Peart was exhausted and he too sank from sight.

Thirteen-year-old Alfred Hammond was alone.

Paralyzed with fear and overcome by cold, he knew that he could not hold on much longer; if help did not come soon he must join his comrades.

Unknown to Alfred, the tragedy had been witnessed from shore. He had all but given up hope when Const. Campbell and a second hero named Bainbridge rowed to his side, hauled him into their boat and headed back to shore. For several long minutes it seemed that the sea was not to be cheated, as the squall began to swamp the rescue craft. By this time, fortunately, they were in shallow water and when the vessel sank under them, they were able to reach shore after little more than a dunking.

OTHES HAD WATCHED the drama — among them Alfred's father, who had seen what he thought to be an Indian lad clinging to the bottom of an overturned canoe. He had raced to he beach to go to the youth's rescue, never for a moment thinking that the lad in trouble was his son; he arrived just in time to be handed the unconscious form of Alfred.

Alfred Hammond survided that tragic outing; the parents of George Peart mourned the loss of a "good, brave and manly son," as many others mourned the passing of Frank Bowser, the young Welsh drydock clerk who was said to have been highly popular.

Experience, as mentioned, can be a hard tutor. Nevertheless there have been — and still are — those who choose to defy the elements with all the courage and contempt that can be mustered by blind stupidity and bad booze.

One such ill-fated voyage was that of the sloop, No. 21. Owned by Yorkshireman Tom Hackett, the 21 had long aroused the interest of Her Majesty's customs officers. Despite their every effort to catch Capt. Hackett in violation of the law, however, No. 21 — "as staunch and fast a sloop as ever caused trouble" for the authorities — had continued on its merry way. But luck finally ran out for the sloop, its master, three passengers, and cargo of illicit liquor in stormy Broughton Strait.

For the colorful, blow-by-blow description of the last moments of No. 21 and its company, posterity is indebted to Dutch George Snider, alias George Horne, who, upon reaching the safety of Victoria, was invited by the authorities to report the vessel's fate. Dutch George, as it turned out, was not in the least reticent:

"There was me and Irish Charlie and Tom Hackett, a Yorkshireman, and two Siwash girls . . . from Fort Rupert," he began. "Tom, he owned the sloop, and him and me had been making a pretty good thing of it peddling liquor around to the rancheries and making a bluff of fishing once in a while.

"The sloop was called No. 21 and came from Seattle quite a bit ago; she was a four-tonner, painted lead-grey; a fast sailer and a handy boat in dirty weather, such as you get plenty of up in them parts . . ."

PEDDLING THEIR FISH as they peddled their liquor, this clorful party had knocked about Rough Bay and Mitchell Bay until mid-March. After embarking the two young women at Mitchell Bay Capt. Hackett had set course for Port McNeill which, because of a strong tailwind, was not two hours' away.

"We had the sloop reefed down close," Dutch George continued, "but as soon as we got outside of the bay we sees that it's too rough for safe sailing, so we puts back and anchors till it clears a bit. This might be 9 or 10 o'clock at night."

For hours, the 21 rode at anchor as its master and company passed away the time by sampling the cargo. About 5 or 6 a.m., however, Capt. Hackett became impatient and decided that he would wait no longer no matter how bad the storm. "So he hauls up and out we goes, and it's blowin' and snowin' and rainin' and freezing' all at the same time," George recalled with a shudder.

The others, prefering the warmth of the cabin, remained below. Before long, Hackett, too, decided that he preferred the comforts of the cabin and returned below — when it suddenly occurred to Dutch George that if Tom was in the cabin with the rest of them, there was no one at the tiller!

MIND SUDDENLY cleared by the implication of Tom's inexplicable appearance below decks, George raced topside. Just as he cleared the hatchway, the wind caught the unattended sloop and swung her broadside to the sea. Instantly, he recounted, "over she went — kilapie. The sail flattened down, and the four of them that was below was held in just like rats in a trap and didn't have no manner of chance. I just had time to grab a big oar and a bit of rope to lash it to me."

BY THIS TIME Dutch George was not only frightened but sober. For what seemed an eternity the bootlegger was thrown about by wind and wave until, finally, with the passing of the storm, he was found by an Indian canoeman. He was unconscious when pulled from the water and, upon reviving, he estimated that he had been adrift for about 20 hours. The Indian took him to his shack and, after a couple of weeks of recuperation, Dutch George was "fit for business again."

Asked about the No. 21 and his companions, he shrugged: "Oh, it was all up with her. They've been pickin' up bits of wreckage all around there, and I guess it's her. They thought it was the Thistle, but they tell me she's all right."

Boating, as thousands are aware, is fun; it also can be dangerous, especially when both boat and crew are loaded!
